Pictures and the Girl Question

A recent sunny afternoon brought with it to our office a singular couple, unmistakably husband and wife. That theirs was an at-least-to-them important mission, was evident, and it was also immediately made plain that they had come both for information and to speak their minds. Some people combine these qualities remarkably.

Ten minutes after their arrival we were this much wiser: Our visitors were a respectable, Christian pair from Spokane. They were blessed financially and in various other ways not so vital; but nevertheless, they carried an appalling burden. It was their religious responsibility for a young unknown orphan niece whom they had reason to believe had, in our fair city, “gone to the bad,” or who had, at least, “joined the movies,” which was in their minds unquestionably one and the same procedure. In any event it was certain that her character had been exposed to the influence of an evil which it could not surmount, since she had suddenly disappeared from the Bible Institute where other loving relatives had established her that her enjoyment (?) of the world might include no danger. Having made sure of the absolute moral protection that this haven would supply, the conscientious connections had taken themselves off with never a thought but that they had attended to all that was necessary. In fact everybody who played a principal part in the transaction was all pleased and self-satisfied save the romantic little nineteen-year-old who ran away when she found life more attractive than her lonely but ever so secure a shelter.

Her present moral pursuers early made it known that they expected us to delve into the pit of the devilish business upon the edge of which we totter and deliver her unto them that she might be contaminated no longer. They further elucidated that although taking such a one into their clean and godly house would now be a load almost too great to stand, still duty had called and they were ever faithful.

As you have already suspected, she whom they sought was not to be found upon any of our casting registers. Clearly if she had joined the rank and file of that great army of ambitious extra girls who fight their battle for screen recognition so bravely week by week, she had done so in a manner that left no tell-tale tracks for interfering benefactors. We knew nothing of her, but partly because we resented the scarcely-veiled, unjust insinuations of these strangers, we pitted her. To most red-blooded modern girls life with them would be insufferable. On the other hand, there existed not a chance in ten that her cinema dreams, if such were what her youthful imagination had revealed, could be realized. Would she have outlook enough to shrewdly bridge the almost unending hours of waiting, when, out of work and without resources, she faced hunger? Such is the experience met by nearly all who finally taste success in this most fascinating and consequently most overcrowded of professions.

Whose problem after all is the salvation of these thousands of enchanted girls, who possessing more perseverance than talent, continually arrive at the film capital to commence startling careers?

Being a woman and therefore a bit illogical (ask any of the males who surround us) we were still meditating upon this seemingly inevitable condition a day or so after the occurrence of the above-mentioned incident when, looking up from our restaurant dinner table, we encountered a familiar picture. It was our favorite waitress, who, despite her competence as a trade juggler, indulges herself in two rows of ridiculous peroxided little curls and a superficiality of messy mascara. Both the waitress and an idea were coming our way. They arrived simultaneously.

“Pansy,” we asked, “how long have you resided in Los Angeles?” If our unpunctual query surprised her, she gave no sign.

“Ah, about a year, I guess.” Then informatively, “Came from Wichita.”

In answer to our next question the usual reply was forthcoming, “Yes, I thought I’d get into the pictures, but, say, even a pretty blonde ain’t got a show. She’s lucky if she even gets on extra, and you hafta eat.”

What thousands of crushed hopes might have been contained in that brief explanation, or had it merely meant a sporting chance taken, an adventure over? Pansy’s heavily laden lashes protected that which we strove to discern. “A T-bone rare?” she interrogated gently.

It is true! The girls who wait on us over counters, wires, and tables are those who having learned much about the law of average are making the best of it. If there are others who have been less sensible or weaker the motion picture industry must not be held responsible. It is only justified in satisfying the demand of the public. Its press agents cannot cease activities because their stories of life in the film colony bring impressionable souls to disillusionment. But they’re worth a little thought—these children—for vision has been theirs,—and they are all about us.

Let us be known at least to them as the hard-working people whom we are, striving in common with the rest of the world for that which we obtain, rather than the lotuseating, much-to-be-envied sons and daughters of luxury and folly. Such a knowledge on their parts would prove a wonderful equalizer. Is it to be desired? F. R.
Louis B. Mayer to Film "The Wandering Jew"

Closely following the announcement of his plans for the production of "King Lear," Louis B. Mayer has made known his intention of filming "The Wandering Jew." The story is now being prepared, and the producer expects to start actual work on the picture within a very short time. The name of the director has not yet been given out.

In addition to the Anita Stewart company, Mayer now has John Stahl making a series of all-star attractions for First National release, and he has further made provisions for the production of a number of specialts. "King Lear" and "The Wandering Jew" are only the first of these latter, and will be produced with all star casts.

DE HAVENS START NEW PRODUCTION

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven have begun the picturization of "My Lady Friends" at the Louis B. Mayer studio. It is their third for release for Associated First National.

The direction will be in the hands of Lloyd Ingraham, who will be assisted by George Crone. Barney McGill is the cinematographer and Leon P. Eycke assists him. Ben H. Cohen is the production manager.

The story was written by Frank Mandel and Emile Mairy.

Mr. De Haven is personally choosing the cast.

NEW TALMADGE PICTURE CHOSEN

"The Wonderful Thing," which Joseph M. Schenck recently purchased upon the completion of its Broadway run, will be Norma Talmadge's new vehicle to be produced in New York.

Herbert Brenon will direct the George Broadhurst story.

TITLING LAST PICKFORD PRODUCTION

The work of titling "Through the Back Door," Mary Pickford's forthcoming United Artists release, is being carried on at the Fairbanks home in Beverly Hills, Calif., under the direct supervision of Miss Pickford. Gerald Duffy has been chosen to title this vehicle.

Jack Pickford and Alfred E. Green, co-directors of "Through the Back Door," are doing most of the cutting and editing, while E. M. McDermott, head of the cutting department, is putting the picture together. It is expected that this production will be ready for public exhibition about the middle of May.

WORK TO START ON FAIRBANKS PICTURE

With the cast complete, work is scheduled to start on "The Three Musketeers," with Douglas Fairbanks in the principal role, as soon as the costumes are finished.

The designing and supervising of all sets is in the hands of Edward M. Langley, art director for the Fairbanks company.

STAHIL CUTTING INITIAL PRODUCTION

John M. Stahl is now engaged in cutting his initial independent unit production, "The Child Thou Gavest Me," which he recently completed for Louis B. Mayer, and which will be presented by Mr. Mayer through Associated First National channels.

Jerome Storm Finishing Mac Donald Picture

Jerome Storm is cutting and editing the Katherine MacDonald production to direct which he was especially engaged by Ben Schulberg. No title as yet has been given out.

AT THE ROACH STUDIO

Ruth Roland has signed a long term contract with Hal E. Roach, who will produce her next serials which will be released to Pathé.

Shooting will commence about April 18th at the Culver City lot. W. S. Van Dyke will direct, assisted by Charlie Stevenson. Arthur Todd will be first cameraman.

"The Golden Canyon" is the working title of the script by Val Cleaveland and is in fifteen episodes.

Orland Lloyd will finish the third of the Gaylord Lloyd Comedies next week.

Bob Eddy will alternate with Nick Barrows in the direction of Eddie Roland in his comedies.

Harold Lloyd's last picture, "Among Those Present," will be released in about two weeks. Lloyd is planning an immediate trip to New York.

AT REALART

Elmer Harris, Supervising Director, is piling up a list of original screen stories to be used by Wanda Hawley and Bebe Daniels. "The Clinging Vine" will shortly go into production featuring Wanda Hawley. Around April 12th work will start on a new feature for Wanda Hawley adapted to the screen by Elmer Harris from an original story by himself.

The English comedy, "Anne onwington," by Lachmere Warrall, will be the next starring vehicle for Mary Miles Minter. Douglas Doty has written the scenario and Joseph Henabery will direct. The temporary screen title will be "Her Winning Way."

Hector Turnbull's second personally supervised story is now under production. The title is "Everything for Sale," and it is being directed by Frank O'Connor.

Mary Miles Minter has completed "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," directed by Joseph Henabery.

AT GOLDYN

Reginald Barker's next production, "Who Shall Judge?" will soon go into production. The story was assigned to Barker by Ruth Wightman from an original story by Gouverneur Morris.

"The Glorious Pool," Mary Roberts Rinehart's original story, adapted for the screen by J. G. Hawks, went into production last week under the direction of E. Mason Howe.

Will Rogers and his company are on location in Arizona making scenes for "Doubling for Romeo." Clarence Badger is directing.

Frank Lloyd, Phoebe Hunt, Jack Holt and other members of the company making "The Grim Comedian," Rits Weiman's first original screen story, will leave this week for Big Bear, where they will spend a week making exteriors.

Wallace Wearle, who is directing "Ace of Hearts," Gouverneur Morris' original story, will take his company to Pine Crest, Calif., this week for exteriors. Lon Chaney, Leatrice Joy and John Bowers will be the only members of the cast to make the trip.

AT UNIVERSAL

Director Stuart Paton will begin work promptly on Priscilla Dean's next production, "Conflict," which is from the popular story of that name now running in the Red Book Magazine.

The titles of two recent productions have been changed. The Frank Mayo picture produced under the direction of Robert Thornby and originally called "The Truant," (Continued on Page 8)

THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS

Symphony

Without doubt the most spectacular Indian story ever filmed is Maurice Tourneur's celluloid version of James Fenimore Cooper's famous Leather Stocking tale, "The Last of the Mohicans." The scenario remains fairly true to the story, which deals with the French and English conquests of the new world in the Eighteenth Century. It contains real history and thrills aplenty, consequently it will hold any audience.

Too much footage, however, is devoted to the funeral of Cora. Particularly the several glimpses of the corpse result in an unnecessary morbid conclusion.

The red men are for the most part well chosen and consistently decorated. In view of the fact that the much-blanketed and befeathered Indian has been the only type of savage to receive a screen showing heretofore, the historically correct makeups of the Hurons and Delawares in this picture is a great relief.

The photography and the composition of the "shots" compel particular mention. Indeed, the scenery itself could not have been surpassed.

Barbara Bedford characterizes the heroic and stoical Cora Munro of the original, with impressive restraint. Interest in her artistically rendered role never slack. She plays the type of woman who made pioneering possible.

Alfred Roscoe is more than convincing as Uncas, the last of the Mohican tribe. His love for the English girl is made very beautiful by the effect of repression which he also creates.

Wallace Beery proves that no heavy of any race is beyond him with his interpretation of Magus, the treacherous spy.

Lillian Hall and Henry Woodward are well cast as Alice Munro, Cora's weaker little sister and Major Hayward, her gallant lover.

James Gordon is good as Col. Munro, father of the girls.

Theodore Lorch makes probably the best Indian of the lot as Chingachgook, Uncas' father. He hasn't many scenes, but their realism makes them invaluable to the atmosphere.

George Hackathorne utilizes his footage as Capt. Randolph, the coward, to advantage.

Nelson McDowell adds the one and very much needed comedy touch to the piece in the role of David Gamut, psalm singer.

Harry Lorraine, Jack McDonald and Sydney Dean, all play minor roles well.

Clarence Brown co-directed this Associated Producers' production with Tourneur.

THE SPENDERS

California

B. B. Hampton presents his screen version of Harry Leon Wilson's "The Spenders," locally this week. Any way one looks at it, this picture is a marvelous improvement over "The Killer," which we reluctantly reviewed in the last issue.

The story of this current release runs in a considerably lighter vein than Hampton's productions usually do, but it is heavy enough to result in a satisfactory drama.

Edna unreal's scenario, although it loses much of the novel's philosophy, is generally consistent.

The cast is mostly good and the photography is standard.

Niles Welch heads the list of players as P. Percival Bines, a member of the third generation of wealth, or the inevitable spender. His interpretation of the juvenile who for all his folly always holds the sympathy is really delightful. He has rarely been more pleasing.

Joseph J. Dowling, as his grandfather, Peter Bines, the shrewd, wealthy pioneer, who "started in shirt-sleeves" is ideal. The relation of these two roles is the story's keynote.

GEORGE WEBB

Playing Blackie Daw in George Randolph Chester's Special Production, "The Son of Wallingford"

Claire Adams plays opposite Welch in the role of Avice Milbre, a not-very-diverting victim of society.

Robt McKim offers one of his always satisfying performances as Rulon Shepler, a typical "Wall street wrecker."

THE UNKNOWN WIFE

Superba

Edith Roberts plays in Universal's "The Unknown Wife," a rather inappropriately titled story which is more simple than it is vigorous. However, it passes a fairly interesting hour and has no big mistakes to "pick on."

The lighting and camera work might be improved to everyone's increased satisfaction.

Miss Roberts this time does Helen Burboucon, an unsuspecting little country girl who marries a reformed convict. Her role is not particularly complicated.

Casson Ferguson's rendition of Donald Grant, the male lead, is excellent. He takes all possible advantage of his opportunities.

Spottiswood Aitken plays Helen's father commendably.

William Quinn, Joe Neary, Augustus Phillips, Bert Frank, Mathilde Brandage, Jessie Pratt, Edith Stayart and Hal Wilson are also included in the rather long list of players.

William Worthington directed.

THE DEVIL

Tally's

George Arliss is seen here in an Associated Exhibitors adaptation of his renowned stage drama, "The Devil," by Frank Artner. It is altogether probable that photographed, this play is more impressive than was the stage presentation even when the long process of filming is considered. This, of course, is partly due to the advantage of the close-up and then to the introduction of some novel technical effects which lend much to the supernatural elements treated.

That the camera work and lighting of this particular picture are far below par is unfortunate. A peculiar story of this sort should, by all means, have been well photographed.

Mr. Arliss presents the public with one of the master performances of the year when he gives us Dr. Muller, or the Devil. So subtle, so fascinating does he make his character that (whether one looks upon it as a literal or allegorical) the apparent desirability and attraction of its sin is easily understood. Dr. Muller will long stand in the minds of his audiences as evil, filmed. He will be symbolic of the devil, and we doubt that his role will ever be surpassed in this line. The entire story is but an excuse for it.

Sylvia Breamer plays Mimi, the little French model, whose life is viciously nearly ruined. Her part is accomplished with regard for type and is quite consistent.

Although Lucy Cotton makes no great impression as Marie, the Parisian society girl who finds Muller's suggestions irresistible, she is satisfactory.

Edmund Lowe does some highly interesting work in the role of Paul de Vaux, a young artist, whose temperament needs very little assistance from the always present doctor. Lowe is a very different type of fighting man.

Roland Bottomley also offers a good piece of acting in Georges Robes. Sections are entirely by means of mention. He handles his heavy business remarkably.

Mrs. Arliss is seen in the small part of Marie's aunt and chaperon.

"STRAIGHT IS THE WAY"

Grauman's "Straight is the Way," a Cosmopolitan comedy of crooks and spooks, is this week's attraction at Grauman's. Despite the facts that its story (in common with all regulation fairy tales and screen farces) couldn't possibly happen, and that it even drags a bit in places, this picture contains much material that forms excellent entertainment. The subtleties in themselves are good for a merry evening.

The photography is better than average and the direction does all that is possible with the scenario.

Matt Moore's part or Bob Carter, a near crook with good intentions and a rather pathetic alibi, is his. It is the role of the long suffering actor is to be credited with accomplishing a great portion of the amusements of the whole. We know of few characters whom we would rather see perform.

After a long absence from the screen, at least in this section, Gladys Leslie returns to do charmingly the ingenue in this production. She plays Dorcas, the last of a financially decadent line of New England aristocracy. That Dorcas is no guileless
ASSISTANT DIRECTORS' ASSOCIATION

Alvin Wyckoff, director of photography at The Famous Players-Lasky Studios and a member of the board of Governors of The American Society of Cinematographers, will speak before the Association at their next meeting, Friday, April 15th.

The A. D. A. has renewed the lease for the third year on its club rooms in the Haldeman Building, on Hollywood Boulevard, and have added a reading room and office, due to the increase in membership.

Gordon Hollingshead will assist Director Howard Hawks at the Fox Studios East on making of Shirley Mason productions. Mr. Hollingshead until recently was with L. J. Gansler at the Robertson-Cole plant.

Larry Semon and his co-director Norman Taurog are making a Western comedy on the Vitagraph lot.

Martin Murphy of Universal City has gone to Oregon location hunting for Director Stuart Paton.

F. O. Robinson is assisting Frank O'Connor in the direction of May McAvoy at Lasky Studio.

Rilly Bletcher is supporting Lee Moran at Universal.

Mazza Lane is doing leads opposite Jack Perrin at Universal.

Marcella Pershing is playing opposite Hoot Gibson at Universal.

Louise Lorraine is appearing opposite Elmo Lincoln in his new Universal serial.

Jack O'Brien is playing opposite Edith Roberts in her new Universal production.

Marguerite Hoularton has been engaged by Hal E. Roach to write for his various stars.

Noah Beery has been engaged by Marion Fairfax and will begin work in her first production shortly.

Harry Duffield, the veteran character actor of the Oliver Stock company, has been engaged to portray the character role in "The Face of the World," under the personal direction of Irving V. Willat.

"Sunshine Sammy," or Frederick Ernest Morrison, the colored boy actor of eight years, has just signed a new two-years' contract with Hal Roach to appear in the Roach Productions.

Mickey Caldwell, technical director for the National Film Corporation, has broken into pictures and will be seen in the forthcoming George Bunnin comedy, "Blue Friday," under the direction of Mark Goldin.

George W. Strohmberg, Claire McDowell, Charles Mailes and Robert Brower are among well known character players who have been signed by Marion Fairfax to appear in her first production.

J. C. Cohn, who formerly occupied the position of business manager for the Goldwyn Studio, has been appointed production manager by Vice-President Abraham Lehr. Mr. Cohn has been with the Goldwyn organization for four years.

David H. Thompson has been named as production manager for Bayard Veiller's producing unit at the Metro studio. Mr. Thompson formerly was production manager there. He will take up his new duties immediately.

Victor Fleming recently signed a contract with Jos. M. Schenck to direct four more Emerson-Los Angeles productions for Constance Talmadge.

George Webb will appear at Tally's Broadway in the forthcoming production of "Black Beauty." Vitagraph's biggest picture of the season is the handsome scamp who causes all the trouble.

ROSE CONSULTS WITH MOROSO IN NEW YORK

Edward E. Rose, of the Morocco dramatizing force, has returned to New York to confer with his chief regarding future productions here. Before his departure he prepared a series of England and revisions of "Slippery McGee" and "The Rose of the Ghetto," which were dramatized by him from the books. While "Slippery McGee" has been produced on the stage here, "The Rose of the Ghetto" is one of the five plays awaiting production here by Morose. The others are "Whistler," "Mama," "Sweethearts for Three" and "Rainbow Bridge." Although Morose now has thirty-three plays for picturizing, he is steadily acquiring more. His picture schedule calls for steady production for more than three years. "The Half Breed," his first feature for First National release, is more than half completed and will start immediately after the stages have been cleared.

BEBE AWAITS SUPERIOR COURT DECISION

The Bebe Daniels' jail sentence affair is still undecided. At present writing, no date has been set and Miss Daniels is completing her work on "The March Hare." The question as to whether or not Miss Daniels will serve the ten days in the Santa Ana jail to which she was sentenced by Justice John Cox rests upon the decision of the Superior Court of Orange County on the existing appeal from the verdict of the lower court.

ANZIA YEZIERSKA LEAVES FOR NEW YORK

Anzia Yezierska left last week for New York after spending eight weeks at the Goldwyn Culver City studio developing "Hungry Hearts" for the screen. Julian Josephson collaborated with the author on the screen version of her story.

Charlie and Sid Chaplin have brought their mother from England and will establish a home for her in Los Angeles. It is rumored that Betty Blythe will appear in two pictures to be made abroad in the near future under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards.

Cullen Landis, who has just finished playing an important part in "The Old Nest," is spending his leisure time with a fishing rod at Long Beach.

FORMER FILM MAN ADMITTED TO THE BAR

He is a graduate of the University of Southern California, and belongs to the American Legion.

DIRECTOR JAMES YOUNG CELEBRATES SECOND WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. James Young celebrated the second anniversary of their marriage by entertaining a large group of film celebrities at their home in Hollywood on Saturday night.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brunton and Master Jack Brunton, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Washburn, Mr. and Mrs. Seasie Hayakawa, Mildred Harris Chaplin, Marie Prevost, Ora Carewe, Virginia Nordon, Lawson Butt, George Ingleton, Mrs. Hampton Dalrymple, Miss F. B. Ferguson, Capt. R. B. Kidd and, and Randolph C. Lewis.

Studio electricians who are working with Mr. Young provided special illumination for the ball room.

FIRST ANNUAL PICNIC AND BARBECUE OF UNIVERSAL ORGANIZATION HELD

The first annual picnic and barbecue of the "Big C" organization was held recently at the Universal Santa Susana Ranch. Carl Laemmle was the host and with him in the receiving line to welcome their co-workers were R. H. Cochrane, vice-president, Abraham Stern, treasurer, and Irving G. Thalberg, general manager.

The ninth "Hall Room Boys" comedy is in production.

Marie Mosquini will start building a home next month in the Wilshire district.

Gareth Hughes is to serve as head of Viola Dana's support company for her three forthcoming special productions.

Vivian Rich has purchased four and one-half acres in Laurel Canyon and will begin the building of her home as soon as convenient.

Phil de Esco and Jack Douglass, technical experts with the George H. Kern productions, have gone to Catalina to arrange the biblical Kern's "Unfoldment."

David Robbins, who has been the chief of Universal's New York office projection department for the past five years, has resigned to enter the exhibiting field. With a partner, Mr. Samuel Krauss, he has formed the Erie Basin Amusement Company.

While awaiting the return from New York of his producer, Cyrus J. Williams, Tom Santschi has been on an extended vacation in the mountains. While away he has written a number of original outdoor stories which he will produce for Pathé.

The Star Ranch Westerns have been sold by the C. B. C. Film Sales Company to filming Photographic Corporation of Boston, for distribution throughout the New England States.

A new magazine, "The Photodramatist," will appear in May under the guidance of Allen Pumam. The magazine is a new educational enterprise of the Palmer Photo-play organization.

Harry "Snub" Pollard is entertaining his mother, Mrs. Isabel Pollard of Melbourne, Australia, at his Los Angeles home. Mother and son have been separated for over fifteen years. Mrs. Pollard expects to return to Australia the last of May.

UNIVERSAL BRANCHES IN AUSTRALIA

According to a recent statement by Mr. George E. Kann, export manager for Universal, there are now four Universal branches in Australia and three in New Zealand, situated in the following cities: Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane, Wellington, Auckland, N. Z., Christchurch, N. Z.

Wanda Hawley is now enjoying a vacation.

Director Jack Ford is the proud father of a ten-pound boy.

Charlie Chaplin has entitled his sixth production for First National "Vanity Fair."

Rudolph Valentino has completed his role in "Camille," and will spend a brief vacation at Palm Springs, his first in more than a year.

June Mathis has started work on the scenario for Rex Ingram's new Metro feature, a Balzac story, the title of which has not yet been announced.

Doris May and Kathleen Kirkham are going to New York with other members of the cast of "Foolish Matrons," Maurice Tourner's picture, to make scenes for the picture under the direction of Clarence L. Brown.

Buster Keaton and his manager, Lou Anger, have gone to New York on an extended trip and while there Keaton will marry Natalie Talmadge. He expects to return to Hollywood in the near future and continue the making of his two-reel comedies.

THE DIGEST OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY will reach the screen under the title of "The Valley of Rogues," and "The Evil Half," Norman Dawn's story in which Eva Novak is starred, has been changed to "Wolves of the North."

George Larkin and Josephine Hill are being featured in a series of two-reel action dramas which Edward Kull is directing. "The Terror Trail," a serial, is temporarily sidetracked until Eileen Sedwick, who has ill, can recover sufficiently to resume work.

Hoot Gibson has begun production on a two-reel action drama under the direction of Lee Kohmair. It is called "Two Tired Jones."

Jack Perrin has started work on "The Claim Jumper's," a two-reel western which Edward Laemmle is directing.

Harry Carey is in Trukey for the concluding scenes of his latest photodrama, "Christmas Eve at Pilot Butte." Lee Moran is putting his usual comedy kick into "Whose Wife Is Kate?" a two-reel mirthmaker, written by Harry Thew and Cleveland Moffett.

Art Acor is now making interiors for "The White Haslam," his forthcoming Universal serial, being produced under the direction of Albert Russell.

Harry Burns, the animal director, will soon begin work on a new series of monkey comedies in which Joe Martin will be featured. A. C. Stecker, chief of the arena, will assist Mr. Burns.

Elmo Lincoln has started on a new serial based on the exploits of Tarzan of the Apes. C. F. Bender, assistant to Lucien Hubbard, who is also editing for the film, has addressed a communication to the leading universities of America, offering $500.00 to any student who will fill in a book or magazine story available for picture purposes. Bender believes that many stories appear in local or obscure magazines and newspapers that might furnish excellent material for the screen.

Edith Roberts has returned from Catalina Island, where the opening sequences of "My Lady of the Island," her latest photodrama, were filmed under the direction of Norman Dawn. The story is from the pen of Beatrice Grimshaw.

AT THE WARNER STUDIO

"Money Flies" is the title given the first of a series of twenty-four two-reel comedies featuring Louise Fazenda which is being produced by Warner Brothers for educational release. Charlotte Merriam and Neely Edwards are working in a series of one-reels for this company. Their pictures will be released through Hal Roach. Reggie Morris is directing the series which includes twenty-four comedies. Jean Havez has provided the present script.

With the script of his first two-reel comedy practically complete Jack Gardner is ready to begin work on the production of a series of twelve pictures starring his wife, Louise Dresser, and Willard Lloyd.

This issue marks Camera's third birthday and sends it out upon its fourth year with the profession which it has so long represented. In the months that are to come a little publication will continue to hold to the policy of just loyalty to its people which it has maintained since its inception. The management desires to thank its many friends for their loyalty and to again invite the suggestions of each and every member of the motion picture industry for its improvement. Growth is experienced only through cooperation and the way is clear for big things ahead.

AT METRO

The unit system was inaugurated at Metro's Hollywood studios with the start of "A Trip to Paradise," Maxwell Karger's new production in which Bert Lytell is starred. The unit plan will be extended to all the other productions made by Metro. Rex Ingram and Bayard Veiller already have been assigned to head these units. Other directors will be named in the near future.

Vida Dana and the members of her company who have been at Catalina Island for several days, filming exteriors for 'Life's Darn Funny,' have returned to the studios.

GORE BROS.-RAMISH AND SOL LESSER
BUY TWO NEW THEATRES

A deal has been consummated between W. J. Johnson and J. E. Wrightsman of Long Beach, Calif., and Gore Bros.-Ramish and Gold Lesser which approximates an investment of $250,000 and brings into the rapidly expanding chain of West Coast Theatres, Inc., which includes first-run motion picture theatres, the Palace, at 127 E. Ocean, and the Liberty at 60 Pine St., in Long Beach.

Robertson-Cole has just released "What's a Wife Worth," the second Christie-Cabanee production.

At Lasky's

George Melford has begun work on his production of E. Phillip Oppenheim's novel, "The Great Impersonation," with Ernest Trubee as Assistant Director.

Cecil de Mille is shooting the opening scenes of his new production, which was suggested by Leonard Merrick's story, "The Lady and the Laurel."

William de Mille is in consultation with Elia Weiman concerning the story which she is writing for his next production. The title and other details are as yet unannounced, and work will not begin until sometime in May.

Sam Wood is making the concluding scenes of Gloria Swanson's first starring picture, "The Great Moment."

Frank Urson has been making interior scenes for the opening of "The Hell Diggers," Byron Morgan's story, which he also dramatized. Wallace Reid is in the star and Azra Ayres will play opposite him. The company will go North shortly to shoot scenes of the mining districts of California which will be used in the picture.

MAX LINDE ENTERTAINS OPERATIC STARS

While the Chicago Grand Opera Company was in Los Angeles, Max Linder, the French comedy star, was host to a party of the songbirds. He entertained Lina Cavalieri, Lucien Muratore and Du Franne, taking them around his studio at Universal City.
Five-reel comedy-dramas for juvenile leading man. Not merely are ideas desired, but stories must be worked out in detail with as much business as possible without padding.

Two-reel rube comedies for male lead. Something along the line of the "Snakeville" comedies which were formerly produced with Vic Povel.

Big six or seven-reel story with universal appeal.

Five-reel character stories for ingenue lead and with backgrounds such as Eastside, New York, Greenwich Village, or Spanish stuff. These stories are for a star of a peculiar type.

Of course the picture companies are nearly all in the market for stories of one kind or another, but the above list will describe some live calls which have just gone out. I will try to apprise my readers each week of other up-to-the-minute openings that exist at the studios and for new companies who call upon me.

WHO WILL TAKE BILL HART'S PLACE?

Many of us who have typical Bill Hart stories are wondering just who will fill the gap that will be left when he leaves the screen. It is understood that Hobart Bosworth is to be confined to sea-faring stories for a time. As far as I can learn Dustin Farnum is not very active just now and neither is Tom Santschi. There was some rumor that Joe Ryan at Vitagraph would shortly be featured in five-reel westerns, but nothing definite has been announced. I know of several wonderful stories for such a star, and as I say, many of us are wondering to whom we will offer them.

William Pigott is doing the continuity for a spectacular feature to be produced in the near future by a new company. Mr. Pigott was formerly production manager for westerns and serials at the U. C.

Cecil B. De Mille is quoted as having said in an interview the other day that "Most of the people who feel that they can write for the screen haven't the remotest idea of what is required of the scenario writer. And very, very, few of them will take the time or trouble necessary to master this most difficult art."

I thoroughly agree with Mr. De Mille. The average amateur does not know the difference between a mere narrative and a dramatic plot. Many of them submit narratives which when reduced to action would not "pan out" a respectable split reel, and then they are inclined to become very much offended when their stories are rejected by the producer.

Another very common or frequent reason for the failure of the beginner to "put over" his or her story, is that although it may contain a very good idea, he or she will not take the time to carefully work it out so that all of the loose ends may be eliminated and a rounded-out plot be the result.

There was a time when picture companies paid for mere "ideas," although they did not pay very much. Now, they want the stories submitted to them in a more perfected form. In other words, they want the idea and the vehicle to carry it. Of course, this is regarded as one of the reasons why they are paying more money for them. The other reason is that good stories are very, very hard to get.

H. Tipton Stock is writing continuities for Pauline Frederick.

Philip, or "Captain," Hubbard is reported to be with Robertson-Cole now.

I am told that L. V. Jefferson has been engaged by a new concern in the Union League building to write continuities for the stories of Gene Stratton Porter, which they will shortly produce.

AT VITAGRAPH

Albert E. Smith has returned to the studio from his ranch at Escondido.

Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester have been in Whittier this week making scenes for "The Son of Wallingford," which the Chester Men are directing as a Vitagraph special.

Antonio Moreno has returned from a motor trip through California and Arizona and will soon start a new feature which Chester Bennett will direct.

Earle Williams has departed for a motor trip of the Yosemite valley before starting his next Vitagraph production.

Director David Smith is preparing to start a James Oliver Curwood story, likely "Powder of the North," as a special production.

TOM SANTSCHI RENEWS CONTRACT

Cyrus J. Williams has signed Tom Santschi for another series of eight western pictures which are to be released by the Pathé organization.

PATHE PRODUCER RETURNS

Cyrus J. Williams has returned to Los Angeles after a brief business trip to New York where he held conferences with Arthur S. Kane of Associated Exhibitors and President Paul Brunet of Pathé, for whom he is producing a series of two series of pictures, the Tom Santschi westerns and "Adventures of Bill and Bob."

Charles Stallings is the owner of a sixty-acre vineyard of raisin grapes at Fresno.

THE CINEMA COMPOSERS CLUB AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY CO-OP.
ERATES WITH CHESTER PRODUCTIONS, INC.

The C. L. Chester Comedy Company is co-operating with the Script Committee of the Cinema Composers at Columbia University. The Chester Company desires lively and entertaining comedies, and in the selection of material will give every consideration to any script bearing the stamp of approval of the Committee on Scripts.

The Committee on Scripts has been organized by the Cinema Composers as a clearing house for the original compositions of its members. Each script received is read carefully, and if approved by the Committee is sent to the producing company to whose needs it is best suited. In order to receive the stamp of the Committee, a script must measure up to the standards set by the University.

THE PICTURE MAN'S LATEST HAUNT

The picture colony has discovered a new haunt which it appears to be rushing loyally, it is the Oriental Coffee House, located on Fourth street, and owned by Mr. Manos. We readily understand the attraction which this exotically canopied, incensed and rose-lighted playground holds forth to our friends and comrades, since we find ourselves dropping around now and again to revel in the informal music and always hospitable atmosphere which marks Mr. Manos' enterprise. There we observed in person and in the jolly little guest book the faces and names of filmdom's greatest and best loved. One glance at the congenial rooms tells the tale. Truly, sincere cordiality, a characteristic of this lovely bit of the eastern world, is an art in itself. It is obvious that screenland appreciates it.

Greetings!

It is not often that we feel inclined to write a letter of acknowledgement for service that we have paid for in hard cash to any advertising medium, feeling that the exchange of our money entitles us to the normal average service offered by the normal average publication, but as we go over our mail each morning and see the check-up of the number of personal interviews each evening that have all been derived from our few short advertisements in your columns, we feel inspired to step out of our way, drop the cobwebbed standard of dollars and cents and thank you for that excess of service over the purely normal average which you seem to be able to give us. We can only say that the returns so far from the ads in your recent issues have been phenomenal; and, better than that, we notice that they are increasing in proportion each week, proving beyond a doubt that your magazine is not only read widely by the profession and all who are interested in it, but that your readers evidently have confidence in you and in your publication. More power to you. Would that there were more legitimate vehicles like yours. You have certainly set a standard and we take pleasure in announcing this fact to whomsoever might be in search of a vehicle that will bring them results for the money spent.

However, we can forego the right to express a hope that you will not take advantage of our enthusiasm and increase your rate for advertising to a point where you would sink to the "average normal," but sincerely trust that you will want to continue on your way giving the best service possible for the least cost to the advertiser. As long as you continue to do this you may be assured of our patronage and we believe also the patronage of every discriminating advertiser.

Sincerely yours,

KINEMA BUREAU,
(Signed) Seymour Hastings.

BEFORE THEY WENT INTO PICTURES

Wallace Fox spent three years in U. S. Diplomatic Service with Ambassador Henry Morgenthau at Constantinople.

Charles Huber owned and operated three motion picture theatres in Saint Louis from 1810 to 1912.

Herbert Sutch was for fifteen years an actor in stock, repertoire and road shows.

Joe McDonough was advance agent for musical shows.

William Ginley was a stock and road show actor.

James Whipple has been an acrobat juggler, as well as a cowboy in the Argentine, and was interested in a banana plantation in Jamaica, also sugar plantations in Central America and Cuba.

Irving Luddy managed the Flatbush Theater.

Elliott Howe started as a mining engineer and later joined the 101 Ranch.

Roy H. Marshmal managed the Pacific Coast Hotels System.

George Webster acted as purchasing agent for a system of chain stores at Melbourne, Australia, and has also sailed the Seven Seas.

Bryant Washburn is soon to tour the principal cities and appear personally at theatres showing his new production, "The Road to London."

NEW LABORATORIES FOR ROACH PRODUCTIONS

A permanent organization was effected at a recent meeting of the stockholders of the proposed $50,000 Laboratories of the Hal E. Roach Studios, when the following officers were elected: T. J. Crizer, Manager; Walter Lundin, Assistant Manager; and Charles Parrott, Treasurer. The organization, which will be known as the Studio Film Laboratories, has for its object the developing, printing and handling of all films of the Hal E. Roach Productions.

Incorporation papers will be sent to Sacramento presently.

Alberta Lee is with Fox.

Melbourne McDowell has just finished an important part with Realtar.

Milla Davenport is playing Gretchen in "Tip Van Winkle."

Max Asher is playing the innkeeper in "Tip Van Winkle."

Robert Stephoff, after four months' illness, is back in pictures.

Joe Butterworth is working with Bert Lytell at Metro.

Hal E. Roach has returned from San Francisco where he has been on important business.

Mary Forbes, one of England's stage stars, has a prominent role in John M. Stahl's "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

E. D. Horkheimer, late general manager of the Balboa Studios, has taken charge of the casting for the Classic Agency.

"Making the Grade" has been selected as the title for David Butler's first starring vehicle under his new Lassers contract.

"Lavender and Old Lace," the Renko production which was directed by Lloyd Ingham, is about to be released.

Tom Gibson, who directs Morante Comedies, has moved down to his cottage at Hermosa Beach for the summer.

Henry King is preparing to make a three-weeks' trip to New York on a combined business and pleasure mission.

Alexander V. Bodo, director for the Italian-American Film Co., has gone south to find Spanish locations for his next production.

Artie Glass of the Classic Agency has installed a special department to handle theatrical and vaudeville acts. Gladys Lamphere and Hawkheimer will take charge.

The John Emerson-Anita Loos story, "Beauty or Brains," which Constance Talmadge is now at work on, has been definitely retitled "Woman's Place."

Director Erle Kenton, who was especially engrossed to direct "Money Flies," the Warner Brothers' initial production for Educational, severed his connection with these producers at the completion of the picture.

F. W. Eldridge, Managing Editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, was the guest and principal speaker at the last bi-monthly meeting and banquet of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers, where he gave a talk on "Publicity: What It Means To a Newspaper."
Can You Answer This Call For New Photoplay Writers?

This Test Will Tell You

The new career of screen-authorship is open to men and women of creative imagination and dramatic insight. A search for new writers of photoplays—novices of genuine ability who can learn the art—is being made by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation and is being sponsored by Cecil B. De Mille, Mrs. H. Ince and other prominent producers who realize the danger of a serious shortage of acceptable screen stories unless more men and women of genuine ability are trained for this lucrative work.

The producers further believe that many apé men and women could be induced to take up the study of photoplay writing if they could be given some advance assurance that they really possess natural qualifications for eventual success.

Therefore, a novel test of the two essentials—creative imagination and dramatic insight—has been devised in the form of a questionnaire similar to the vocational tests employed by the U. S. Government during the late war.

This questionnaire was prepared especially for this purpose by Professor Malcolm Shaw MacLean, former instructor in short story writing at Northwestern University, and Mr. H. H. Van Loan, one of America’s leading photoplaywrights. The test is designed to bring out indications of natural ability, if the applicant possesses it, thus enabling the Palmer Photoplay Corporation to select for training, only those whose possibilities of success are promising.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is a national educational institution established in Los Angeles, which teaches the technical construction of photoplays by scientific home-study methods, thus making a lucrative vocational position available to talented persons wherever they may live.

The adoption of the vocational selection plan by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation is one of the most forward steps ever taken by an educational instilation, the Palmer institution being the first correspondence school, so far as is known, to restrict enrollment only to those who first evidence their fitness for the work.

The questionnaire will be sent to all who will apply to the and altogether innocent to live in this century, merely increases the fanciful note which runs through the entire story.

Mabel Dunlavy is unusually well cast as Ann Mehan-Mah, a gentle but firm believer in the glory of her long departed relatives and the ouija board. She makes the role very delightful.

George Parsons also adds enjoyment to the yarn as "Loot" Follett, a thief who struck us as being admirably harmless.

Henry Segrave enacts Jonathan Squibb, the really "dirty villain." It goes without saying that he it who holds the mortgage.

Van Dyke Brooks and Emily Fitzroy do minor parts.

Robert Vignola handled the direction.

"THE FAITH HEALER"

Grauman’s Rialto

"The Faith Healer," which as its title indicates, is another film treatment of the spiritual cure of physical ills, has opened here for an indefinite run. While this George Melford production cannot be said to compare with "The Miracle Man" from any point of view, it forms very good entertainment and one of the present popularity of its subject, will without question draw well. It is an adaptation of the William Vaughn Moody original.

The photography is average.

Milton Sills is seen in the title role which he makes more pleasing than usual. Certainly, tramping along the open road, carrying joy and health in his soul and Bible, he is picturesque.

Ann Forrest plays Rhoda Williams, another "fallen sinner," whom the humble preacher saves. She is particularly good in this sort of a role.

Adolph Menjou’s opposition as Dr. Littlefield, the rose heavy, is very clever. We will be interested to see more of his work. He is comparatively new in these parts, we believe.

Fontaine La Rue is well cast and plays to everyone’s satisfaction, the part of Mary Beeler, the Faith Healer’s big demonstration.

Frederick Vroom, Loyola O’Connor and little Mary Giraci all provide an interesting family background for the invalid as her husband, sister-in-law and daughter.

Edward Vroom, Robert Brower and Winifred Greenwood complete the cast of this Paramount picture.

"STRAIGHT FROM PARIS"

Miller’s

A drama which is not too heavy to be calmly entertaining and still not light enough to allow the attention to wander, is the current Harry Garson release starring Clara Kimball Young which is entitled "Straight from Paris." Indeed, Sada Cowen’s story of Lucette de la Milan’s life is exactly what we would label a charming afternoon’s diversion.

Technically the production is good. The cast is excellent.

Miss Young is rather well placed as Lucette, whose smart hat shop supports herself and her aristocratic French grandfather. The star’s followers will be sure to enjoy this, her latest work.

We know of no one who could play Robert Van Auster, the very naughty but if not almost lovely, still quite understandable young heavy, more beautifully than does Bertram Grassby. Robert is Lucette’s fiancé, for a space. It has been some time since Grassby has been seen in a juvenile but as usual he delivers the goods.

Thomas Jefferson gets both a tear and a

"NOT GUILTY"
Ambassador
First National releases the Sidney A.
Franklin screen production of Harold Mac-Gregor's "Thirty Nineteen," this week under the title, "Not Guilty." Although the picture's introductory subtitle states that it features Sylvia Breamer, the story deals primarily with a man and his brother. The feminine lead merely supports. The plot centers around the voluntary mixed identity of the brothers that one may assume the crimes of the other. It is a well-handled production with considerable story value.
It is marked by exquisite scenery and some beautifully cut-in stock scenes of the Ganges River.
The photography varies. Some of the soft focus utilized in the close-up scenes misses.
Richard D. x does some exceptionally clever performing in the roles of Paul and Arthur Ellison. One is sympathetic and the other heavy. The picture belongs almost bodily to this stage recruit.
Miss Breamer also does good work as Elsa Chetwood, a daughter of wealth, who through a mistake, becomes engaged to the wrong Ellison. Her intense eagerness does much to make her parts always attractive.
Molly Malone quite fills the bill as Marry
Ellison, the fluffy little ingenue.
Herbert Prior and Lloyd Whitlock combine forces to form the opposition, which immediately leads up to the climax. They do Newell Craig and Frank Mallows, gamblers.
Elinor Hancock and Alberta Lee complete the cast as Mrs. Ellison and the chaperon.
Franklin personally directed the production.
George Beban is still traveling in connection with his picture, "One Man in a Million," and has just recently visited Winnipeg.
Charles Huber, when doubling for Miss Gerrard of the J. D. Hampton Company in Yosemite (narrowly escaped going over

Having completed some special work at the Louis B. Mayer studio, Nat C. Deverich has journeyed northward to Harry Leon Wilson's estate near Del Monte where he will be the guest of the author for several weeks.
George Randolph Chester, author-director of the "Get Rich Quick Wallingford" story, now in production at Vitagraph Studio, selected George Webb to portray the internationally known charater of "Blackie Daw." There were forty-one actors considered for the part.

Detrimental Publicity

One of the most spectacular publicity feats of the month is being accomplished in conjunction with the ten-day jailling of Bebe Daniels at Santa Ana as the penalty for driving her motor car fifty miles an hour in Orange County. It was to be expected that the imprisonment of a motion picture star in a little town such as this would prove a sensation locally, but scarcely could one have looked for an affair of the sort to be given the prominence which it has received not only in the Los Angeles dailies but nationally as well.

All of this is obviously due to a live wire publicist to whom, although we question the suitability of his present subject, we have necessarily "to take off our hats." He has certainly obtained a miraculous amount of attention from the press! Miss Daniels' elaborate farewell party, her ceremonious departure for and arrival at the jail, her luxuriously appointed cell, her delicious hotel meals and in fact even the Santa Anas' various objections to and endorsements of the remarkable treatment enjoyed by the fair prisoner, have filled many printed columns and been the subjects of dozens of published photographs.

Nor has the actress alone been advertised as a result. The already much-publicized Judge Cox, who passed sentence, and many talkative citizens of the enterprising community in which he holds judicial sway, not to mention a Broadway (Los Angeles) theatre running a Daniels-Real-art production, have done their share of "cash in." Yes it certainly would seem to be another case of many benefiting by the energy of one!

However, although we have conversed with several press agents who are greatly envious the possession by another of such an opportunity to disport publicity talents, we cannot help reflecting upon the inadvisability of it all. Admittedly the whole procedure makes an acceptable story or series of stories for nearly any publication; but what will be its final effect upon the public?

Of course most of us realize that breaking a motor regulation is a comparatively common, far-from-criminal act. The fact that one judge has created for himself a famous reputation for jailing those members of society who are brought before him for thus offending the law in his territory does not make the misdemeanor any greater. There are, nevertheless, all about us souls to whom the idea of imprisonment is at all times, under all conditions, disgraceful. These more conventional people unquestionably compose a great section of the picture going population. Ultimately, the popularity of Miss Daniels or of any other favorite is liable to suffer materially from the broadcast advertising of this distasteful form of punishment.

There is more required of the Perfect P. A. than that he "get his stuff over." He might remember to the great advantage of his client and resultantly his own benefit that a careful selection of topics is particularly imperative in his line.—F. R.

Players' Telephone Exchange

A service which occurs to us as having been much needed by the profession is now available through the establishment of The Players' Telephone Exchange which has recently opened offices in Hollywood.

The function of this exchange is to maintain a phone call "clearing house" between the studios and their various employees in both the artistic and technical departments. For instance, players, cameramen, directors, etc., who may be expecting calls at any hour can, by leaving with the exchange instructions as to their whereabouts, be reached at any time.

On the other hand, information concerning the availability of any one identified with the service may always be had by the studios.

Ruby Hill, long identified with the local picture colony, has accepted the management of the new enterprise, which promises to prove a valuable innovation.

Will Assist Producers

We publish the following letter because we believe that it will assist those producers who desire reliable advice upon prison stories. Mr. Eytinge has repeatedly favored the profession whenever he has come in contact with it. We all appreciate this generous offer:

"A Bright Mornin' to Ye,
Fanchon Royer:

"Rollin Sturgeon made a flying visit here last week— he's finishing Hal Reid's ancient ten-twenty-thirty "Human Hearts" and he wanted to chin-chin with an expert on prison atmosphere, etc.

"His visit of an hour or two may have been entirely profitable—at least he said so—and that brings to mind the possibility that I can help out other directors who would like to have candid, sincere and expert criticism of prison sequences, of the logic of prison scene continuity, of general criminalistic actions and the like.

"Naturally, because of the many courtesies shown my fellow-inmates and myself by picture producers, there would be no charge for this service, or any that I can render. I'm not entirely ignorant on the picture side, having managed our screen program for years, as well as acted as a liaison link between management and directors when producers were visiting here taking shots and action.

"So then, if you want to tell your director friends that a chap with twenty years of "inside" experience in three prisons, plus extensive study into the scientific aspects of both criminalistics and penology, is ever willing to assist 'em, why go ahead. They're welcome to call on.

"Yours co-operatingly, EYTINGE."
VICTOR POTEL TO INTERPRET BUTLER CHARACTER

Ellis Parker Butler's Philo Gubb stories, through a deal just negotiated by Garwood and Hungate, agents for the author, will appear on the screen. Victor Potel will create Philo Gubb. Webster Cullison will handle the direction, and co-directing with him will be Melville Brown.

The new company, which has acquired the rights to thirty-five of Mr. Butler's Gubb stories, has leased production quarters at the Francis Ford studios.

NEW GERSON PRODUCTION STARTED

The screeninings of "Trouble Brewing," the first of the Wm. A. Howell Comedies, has been completed and the cutting and titling will be finished this week. The Gerson Company is releasing a comedy a month for the National Exchanges, Inc.

Director Tenny Wright has started work on "Prok'n Idle," the second of the William A. Howell Comedies.

KATHERINE MACDONALD TO PRODUCE TWELVE FEATURES

Katherine MacDonald, who has again signed with the Attractions Distributing Corporation, has begun shooting her eleventh Associated First National release, which is to be the first of the twelve features under her new agreement. By the terms of the contract Miss MacDonald is to make twelve pictures in the ensuing two years and is to receive approximately $50,000 per picture for her work.

PRODUCING RIX STORY

Helen Holmes, Jack Connolley and Leonard Clapham are among the players in the cast of "The Ghost City," now filming at the Spencer Productions studio, Los Angeles.

The picture is a five-reeler, and was taken from the story by George Rix, author of "The Twonky," and is being directed by William Bertram. The production will be sold through C. O'D. Blanchfield, Superba Theatre Bldg.

AT GOLDWYN

Will Rogers' next picture, "The Poor Relation," a stage play by Edward Kidder, will soon go into production under the direction of Clarence Badger.

Director Frank Lloyd and company will return this week from Big Bear, Calif., where they have been filming exteriors for "The Grim Comedian."

Wallace Worsley and the cast of "Ace of Hearts" have returned to the studio after locationing at Pine Crest, Calif.

Several stories are being prepared by the scenario department for future production. Charles Kenyon, the playwright, is making the screen adaptation of Hall Caine's "The Christian." Arthur P. Statter has just finished the continuity for an original screen story by Leroy Crisler, tentatively called "The Moxer." Rupert Hughes is writing the continuity for his own story, "From the Crooked Willow," which will be a starring vehicle for Tom Moore. Governor Morris is writing another original Chinese fantasy, as yet untitled, and Lambert Hillyer, former director for William S. Hart, has about finished the continuity for "The Man from Lost River," an original story by Katherine Newlin Burt.

Jack H. Richardson has returned to Mack Sennett to play character heavies.

OLD CLASSIC UNDER PRODUCTION

The production of "Rip Van Winkle" is well under way under the direction of Ward Lascelle with Thomas Jefferson in the title role. The camera work is in the hands of David Abel and George Larsen, and Edward Luddy is handling the technical end and co-directing with Mr. Lascelle.

FRANK BRAIDWOOD

Who plays this week with Eva Novak in "The Smart Sex," and who is appearing in person in "The Pool Room" at the Ambassador.

A METRO

Organization of the new Bayard Veiller producing unit is being rushed. As soon as the necessary pictures are completed, the title of Mr. Veiller's first picture under the new programme will be announced. It is probable that one of his stage productions will be prepared for the screen.

"The Last Card" is the title selected by Metro for May Allison's latest starring picture which is a screen version of Maxwell Smith's Saturday Evening Post story. "Dated."

Dallas Fitzgerald will head the new producing unit that will film Viola Dana's forthcoming features. He will begin preparations for the first of her new pictures immediately.

June Mathis has undertaken the task of supplying two complete producing units with screen stories for special productions. She will serve as scenarist for the Maxwell Karger productions as well as those of Rex Ingram.

Madame Nazimova has completed her work in the production of "Camille." The Russian star will take a short vacation and then will personally supervise the cutting of the picture.

AT THE INCE STUDIO

Bradley King, of the scenario staff, who wrote the continuity for "Lying Lips," started working this week upon the continuity for another special, the filming of which will probably be undertaken within the next month.

Edward Martindel and Vernon Dent have been added to the cast of Thomas H. Ince's latest special for the Associated Producers, tentatively titled "Hail the Woman," which entered production this week under the direction of John Griffith Wray. Both the original story and continuity are by C. Gardner Sullivan.

"Bellboy 13," which Douglas MacLean recently completed under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince, is scheduled for an early release.

"Mother o' Mine," which was filmed and previously announced under the title of "Mother," has been selected as the release title of the special production recently made. The forthcoming drama is from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan and will be presented by an all star cast.

AT UNIVERSAL

Eddie Polo will begin work immediately on a series of two reel western photodramas in which he will revive his characterization of "Cyclone Smith." Jacques Jacard will direct.

Norman Dawn is working on the concluding scenes for "My Lady of the Island," Edith Roberts' next starring vehicle.

Ward Hayes is filming "Taxi Turtles," a one-reel comedy, featuring Billy Bletcher.

Hoot Gibson is making another fast two-reeler. It is called "Too Tired Jones." Lee Komaroff is directing.

Edward Laemmle and his company, producing "Rim of the Desert," a dramatic short reel western, are on location on the California desert.

Art Acord is working on the middle episodes for "The White Horseman," the serial which Albert Ruddy is directing.

Fred LeRoy Granville is preparing to begin work on "The Shark Master," an original story in which Jack Mayo will play the starring role. The scenario was written by Granville from his own experiences in the South Seas.

"LESSONS IN LOVE"

Ambassador

Joseph Schenck presents Constance Talmadge in her newest fare entitled "Lessons in Love" this week. It is a typically breezy vehicle for the "younger Talmadge," and compares favorably with her recent attempts, in every respect. It is embellished with the luxurious sets, faddy clothes and clever subtitles that are sure to find in this star's pictures, elements which, by the way, greatly increase their attraction.

Photographically the production more than satisfies.

Constance herself is customarily delightful as Lelia Chalmorpe, a short skirted, somewhat flirtatious flapper who, being properly poor, must either "marry or get a job." In some respects she accomplishes both, since she certainly finds herself occupied with the intrigue which she throws about herself and perspective life partner, and the rest follows jauntily as her stars are wont to do.

Kenneth Harlan grows and more enjoyable in this type of work. Certainly he is fascinating as the reluctant bridegroom from Santa Ana, and the confused mental condition of his role renders it at the same time highly amusing.

Fiona Fitch gives us a few of her incomparable comedy scenes as Aunt Agatha, a "bachelor girl with a secret romance." Her reappearance will undoubtedly provide the provider fans with a huge kick.

Jimmie Harrison as Liela's college cousin complicates things with a truly clever farce performance. His work with Harlan is particularly worthy of mention.

A Constance Talmadge or Dorothy Gish picture is never quite complete without George Faccini, whose expressive face and figure are seen herein as the Chalmorpe family attorney. His personality is excelled. He provides a story pace.

Chet Withey directed the picture for First National.

"Ducks and Drakes"

Clune's Broadway

One of the most delightful Realart farces that we have witnessed is "Ducks and Drakes," in which current release. Surely it is the most enjoyable little story in which this star has appeared. Goodness knows, it is rife enough, but at no time does it offend, and its spicier touches are delicately handled and ideally placed.

The picture's camera work is standard.

Miss Daniels has probably never been better placed than she is as Teddy Simpson, the precocious little fledgling who does those things "because she shouldn't." The heedless manner in which she rushes into ridiculous situations and the way she "manages" her fussy aunt, are screamingly funny. Through all her modern sophistication and indiscreet flirtation, the star manages to make some nice adventuring youth in its blissful inexperience.

Jack Holt as Teddy's broad-minded fiancé could not be improved upon. He controls several of the sequences through the delicate shading of his work.

Mayme Kelso is also exceptionally well cast in the role of Gertie Weeks, the conventional, continually shocked,kinswoman of the upsetting Teddy.

Edward Marrinell as the "pay old Gander," H. E. Lawrence as the "literary" anarchist, and Wade Boteler as the sea-faring ex-convict, could scarcely have been better chosen. They are all capital falls for the fair Miss Simpson who employs, to become acquainted with each, methods that are more unique than usual.

Maurian Newell and Elsie Andraean each have a few scenes with the star as the chorus of her character.

California

The Eminent Authors' production of Gertrude Atherton's "Don't Neglect Your Wife" is novel in that although it treats a modern matrimonial problem, it sets that problem in the period immediately before the Civil War, and saturates it with all the narrow prejudices of that day. In places the story afflicts us as being a little far fetched, but this may be that we lack the necessary temperment to appreciate a woman's becoming a drunkard that she may share the experience of her distant lover. Taken altogether the picture is probably more interesting than entertaining. Surely it is overly heavy.

Technically "Don't Neglect Your Wife" is perfectly satisfactory.

Mabel Julienne Scott appears in the leading feminine role, Madeline Talbot. She is very well cast as the neglected wife who turns, in spite of herself and her spiritually conventional surroundings, to the man whom she loves. She makes the role as understandable as it could be, considering some of its action.

Lewis S. Stone plays Langdon Masters, the brilliant San Francisco editor who finds Madeline more fascinating than does her husband. We have seen Mr. Stone in various types of plays and in many roles, and have usually approved in his work. In this picture, however, several of his sequences seem insincere. Others are accomplished according to his customary form. Charles Clary does the rather small but important part of Dr. Howard Talbot, Made-line's husband, a man typical of the day. As the Homemaker, who is the questioned head of his household, he is more than convincing.

Kate Lester and R. D. Maclean are good types to do Mr. and Mrs. Hunt McLane, while Josephine Crowell as Mrs. Abbott, the society gossip and snob, and Arthur Hoyt, as her husband, an equally delectable matchmaker, are excellent.

Darrell Foss has a few satisfactory scenes as Holt, Master's friend and brother journalist.

Norma Gordon and Richard Tucker complete the cast.

The picture was directed and supervised by Wallace Worsley for Goldwyn.

"THE FREEZE OUT"

Superba

The Universal-Harry Carey feature which may be seen here this week is much more entertaining than this star's last two or three offerings have been. It is an original (another Western) by George Hull, and while the regular old "hokum," blood, thunder and buffalo of the much storied cowboy land are all contained in the scenario, they are rather thrillingly presented and Carey's followers will appreciate the picture. Several inconsistencies, such as a seemingly teacherless schoolhouse, and the distasteful horsewhipping of a man by a presumably refined young lady as punishment for a wrong (a slight wrong, by the way), for which the audience knows he has not been responsible, are overcome mostly by the star's conception and interpretation.

In the role of Ohio, the equal-to-anything hero, Carey is typically cast. His work is always alive and very human.

Helen Ferguson unfortunately plays a part which fails to gain for her any of the picture's sympathy. We know of very few actresses who could have done anything whatsoever with Zoe Whipple, the disagreeable, almost irreligious, but very "lovable" little store-keeper and self-appointed missionary to the world in general.

Charles Le Moyne accomplishes convincingly Denver Red, another of his bold saloon owners, and J. Farrell MacDonald does some excellent drunk sequences as Dobtail McGuire.

Joe Harris and Lydia Yeamans Titus complete the cast.

"THE WITCHING HOUR"

Grauman's

Lasky's screen visualization of Augustus Thomas' stage play, "The Witching Hour," sceneared by Jull Crawford Ivers, is released locally this week. As will be remembered of the original, the theme has to do with mental suggestion and its power over the human soul. It makes a good picture vehicle despite the fact that it ropes in an unusual number of plot complications and has to its credit three or four climaxes which detract from the interest value of each other.

The direction and photography leave little to be desired.

Elliott Dexter handles Jack Brookfield, a gambler who is rescued from his profession by an accident and its following higher thought, quite interestingly. His former fans will probably be pleased with his performance.

John Hall offers another of his beautifully human pieces of work in the role of Judge Prentice of the Supreme Court. He provides his character with a well balanced combination of unswerving honor and...
MACK SWAIN SIGNS WITH CHARLIE CHAPLIN

Charlie Chaplin has just made an important addition to his company by securing the services for a long period of Mack Swain. A contract has been signed between the comedian and Swain whereby the latter becomes permanently identified with Chaplin and in the future will be an important foil for Charlie. Swain will make his initial appearance on the screen as a member of the Chaplin company in the production of "Vanity Fair," which is now being filmed.

YOST GIVEN SPECIAL FOR EXPLOITATION

Robert M. Yost, chief of publicity of the Fox West Coast Studios, who recently returned from the East where he directed the eastern premiere of "A Connecticut Yankee" at the Selwyn Theater, New York City, has been transferred to the management and exploitation of "Over the Hill" and "The Queen of Sheba" for the western states. Mr. Yost will supervise and control all showings and road tours of the two Fox specials in the coast territory. He will be succeeded at the studios by John D. Hill, who was for many years identified with eastern circuses in a publicity capacity.

EQUITY HEAD HERE

Fred Gilmore, President of the Actors' Equity of New York, is in Los Angeles and will address the profession Saturday evening at the Ambassador Hotel upon the meaning of Equity, after which a reception will be held for the organization's chief.

Geraldine Karma is with the Gerson Productions of San Francisco.

Mary Forbes plays an important part in John Stahl's "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

Frank Norcross last week played a part for Cecil de Mille at Lasky's.

William A. Howell, who is starring in the "Howell Comedies," has started work on "Brok'n Idle," the second of these comedies.

Arthur H. Stuart is at present with Nate Gatzer in his initial comedy-drama production at the Arthur H. Gooden studios.

A. E. Davis has been engaged by Webster Collison to serve as studio manager for Clever Comedies, whose production quarters are at the Francis Ford studios.

Alice Terry, who enacted the leading feminine role in Metro's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," will also appear in the next production to be screened under the direction of Rex Ingram.

Irvin Martin, formerly in charge of the art and title department at the Ince studios, will act as technical, title and art director for a series of two-reel comedies being made by Clever Comedies.

Isabel Wilford, who recently played several leads for the Apache Trail Productions, recently returned to the stage for a week in the Vagabond Players' production of "Mrs. Dane's Defense" at Egan's Theater.

Writing screen continuity for Ellis Parker Butler's series of thirty-two magazine stories is the task that has been assigned to Everett C. Maxwell, who was recently signed by Webster Collison, general manager of Clever Comedies.

AUTHORESS JOINS FILM COLONY

Alice Inge Miller has joined the group of authors now at the Goldwyn Studios, among whom are Gertrude Atherton, Rupert Hughes, Leroy Scott, Gouverneur Morris, Rita Weinman and Anzia Yezierska. Her first filmplay will be an adaptation of her story, "The Woman Who Hated Politics."
ASSISTANT DIRECTORS' NOTES

The Assistant Directors' Association, owing to persistent rumors, wishes to announce that it has not, and has no intention of amalgamating with any other organization whatever.

J. P. McGowan and his assistant, Joe McDonough, will finish the production of "No Man's Nerve," a five reel railroad story, for Herald Productions on the 21st.

Harry Burns' first Joe Martin picture will be released in New York this week. "The Monkey Hero" is the first of any of Joe's pictures to be released on the Jewel Program.

Pete Gerald has been given the deed to a 100x165 lot at Elsinore, where he will build a summer home after "The Unfoldment" is finished.

Director Elliott Howe is on the fourth week of Zane Grey's story, "The Mysterious Rider."

Henry Tenbrooke started with Director Reggie Morris on April 4th, making two reel comedies at the Warner Brothers' studio.

William Fox has returned to the Mark Sennett Studio.

James Whipple reports that Director Young will complete "Without Benefit of Clergy," a Brutton production, on the 20th.

Director Howard Mitchell and Assistant Hollingshead have just returned from Craig's Country Club, Calabasas, where they have been shooting some of the scenes in "The Pearl of Savoy."

FIRST NATIONAL ACQUIRES "CAMERON OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED"

Associated First National announces that the distribution rights for Ralph Connor's "Cameron of the Royal Mounted" have been purchased from Ernest Shipman. This production was directed by Henry McRae and was produced by the Winnipeg Productions, Inc., on the actual locale of the story, in the Canadian Rockies.

McRae was not only assisted by the author in filming the Northwest story, but had the co-operation of the Royal North-west Mounted Police in securing accurate detail. A number of the R. N. W. M. P. appeared in the production. The title role was played by Gaston Glass.

"Cameron of the Royal Mounted" will follow the previous Ralph Connor story, "The Foreigner," on the releasing schedule.

NEW WILLAT STUDIO READY FOR OCCUPANCY

The new Willat studio at Culver City, which was designed and constructed by Harold G. Oliver, has been completed and will be ready for occupancy in a few days. The administration building proper is fronted with a lake and falls on Washington Blvd. Work is expected to start within the next week on the construction of the first glass unit and stages.

HARMONY PRODUCTION PREVIEWED

The Harmony Film Company recently had the premiere showing of "A Night to Remember," at the California Theatre, Venice. A large crowd of film notables turned out to give the picture a send off. Jack Livingston plays the feature role, and Pauline Curley the leading feminine role in the picture. General consensus of opinion is that the picture will meet with success in New York, where it is being taken by Mr. P. F. Magenheimer and George E. Hall. Immediately upon the return of these two producers work will be at once on a series of contract pictures.

ROUMANIAN QUEEN TO PRODUCE PICTURES AT WEBER STUDIO

The Lois Weber Studios announce that Queen Marie of Roumania is coming to Los Angeles next fall, and that negotiations are in progress regarding the filming of the Queen's books and plays.

The Queen will probably take part in the production which Lois Weber is writing for the first picture she will produce.

FRED TURNER
Who Has Just Returned from Porto Rico Where He Filled an Engagement With an Island Company

DON HIX STARTS NEW PUBLICITY SERVICE

Don Hix, who for the past year has been personal publicity director for the Willat Productions, Inc., has organized a personal publicity service with offices in the Baker-Detwiler Bldg. Associated with him in this venture is Miss Veda Dunn, who was formerly connected with the West Coast office of the Exhibitors Trade Review. Mr. Hix is at present director of publicity campaigns for the Willat Productions, Inc.; Ward Lascelle Productions, and the George Bunny comedies. "Press Cop," his weekly news bulletin, is in its seventh issue, and a department for the planning and illustrating of press books for independent producing organizations has been provided.

LAWLOR BUSY ON TITLES

Hoey Lawlor has just completed an illustrated set of titles for "Vic" Fleming's "Red Hot Romance," originally called "Vive Imitation," an Emerson-Lee production, and has also made the double-animated main title, showing a bust of Von Stroheim, for Stroheim's "Pillow Talk." He is now engaged in writing a four-series article on technical motion picture directing for the Moving Picture World.

Mary MacLaren has recently returned from New York, where she has been working in Cosmopolitan Productions.

When "Without Benefit of Clergy" is completed the first print will be shipped to England so that Mr. Ripling may be present for the initial preview.

PROBABLE APPEARANCE OF EDMUND LOWE IN PROLOGUE OF "MADONNAS AND MEN"

Edmund Lowe, for many months leading man at the Morocco Theatre, may once again make a stage appearance in Los Angeles, for efforts are being made by T. W. Chitborn to have the juvenile come West from New York to appear in the prologue of "Madonnas and Men" when it is given its premiere at the Garrick Theatre early in May.

Lowe plays the principal masculine role in this feature and a special prologue is being arranged for its L. A. presentation.

NOVELIST TO WRITE ORIGINALS FOR SCREEN

Mark Lee Luther, the novelist, who has just arrived in Los Angeles, intends to devote his time to original stories for picture requirements. Mr. Luther was staff correspondent for a number of years on the Saturday Evening Post, Editor of Who's Who in America, Editor of the Smart Set, and the author of many successful novels.

Two of his books have already been filmed, i. e., "The Hope Chest," a Griffith production with Dorothy Gish, and "The Crucible," with Margaret Clarke.

F. N. ATHLETIC CLUB IN NEW YORK HOLDS ANNUAL DANCE

One hundred and fifty executives and members of the home office staff of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., attended the second annual dinner dance of the Associated First National Athletic Club at the McAlpin Hotel in New York on the evening of April 6th.

The affair was attended by Norma and Constance Talmadge, Lionel Barrymore, Hope Hampton, Margarette Clark and many other screen luminaries whose pictures are released by Associated First National.

LINDER TO ENTERTAIN PRINCE ALBERT

Prince Albert of Monaco, who sails for the States soon, is expected to visit Max Linder at his Los Angeles studio. The Prince is coming here to receive the Alexander Agassiz gold medal in recognition of his scientific marine researches. This will be his fourth visit, the last having been in 1913.

KENYON WRITES ANOTHER FOR IRENE RICH

Charles Kenyon, who write "Kidniling," and whose photodrama, "The Invisible Power," has just been completed at the studio, where he is in the leading role, is now writing another play for Miss Rich.

NEW BUILDING FOR CHRISTIE STUDIO

Work is going ahead on the cement bases of a new building for the Christie Studio, to be added to Christie's comedy-making establishment. The plant already includes one large completely enclosed stage in addition to the ten stages which accommodate sets enough for four companies.

Robertson-Cole announces for early release of a Mac Marsh production, "Nobody's Kewy," based on the novel, "Mary Cary," which was originally published by Harper's.

THE REAL STARRS

Bebe Daniels is expected to commence immediately on "The Wild Week," an original photoplay by Frances Harner.

Ocean Park and Mt. Lowe have been the location for the exterior settings for a week for the exteriors of "The Climzing Vine," by Elmer Harris, which is the latest Wanda Hawley production.

Hector Turnbull and Chester Franklin are in the final stages of cutting and titling "The Lady of the House."

THE ROACH STUDIO

"Trolley Troubles" is the title of the first Gaylord comedy which will be released by Pathe. The Lloyd company has returned from location where exteriors were taken for the fourth comedy in the "Lonesome Luke" series.

Bob Eddy has just finished directing his first picture for Eddie Polan. The Harry "Snub" Poland company will combine work and play the first week in June when "One When You See It" is in process for a Polan comedy. This is the first picture Mr. Polland has ever done at the popular resort.

TO PRODUCE PICTURES

Mr. Charles H. Rosenfelt, president of the Allied Distributing Corporation, will be in Los Angeles on April 27th for the purpose of securingfilm negatives to be released through his company. While he is here he will arrange for the purchase of suitable subjects for the next year. It is understood that this will include at least one novel feature, but one and two reel comedies.

By the Allied plan, according to recent announcements, this organization will distribute its productions on the franchise basis to the various right buyers throughout the United States. Considerable territory has already been arranged for and on his return trip from Los Angeles Mr. Rosenfelt intends to close the other territory markets which have been going on through the mails.

WILLIAMS AGAIN SIGNS WITH PATHE

The results of Cyrus J. Williams' recent flying trip to New York are evidenced by four contracts—two of which dispose of the foreign distribution rights to the first two series of pictures which he produced for Pathe (eight Tom Santschi westerns and twelve "Adventures of Bill and Bob"), and the remaining two contracts call for the production of two additional series of the same number and class for Pathe distribution.

CHRISTIE COMPLETING FIRST SERIES FOR EDUCATIONAL

"Southern Exposure," which is in production at Christie's studio, will be 24 in the first series of Christie Comedies distributed through Educational exchanges.

In these two-reel comedies there have been no series of "Southern Exposure" follows "Sneakers" and "Let Me Explain," recently completed under Al Christie's personal direction.

Director Mark Gold train has just completed his eighth Capitol comedy starring George Burns at the National Film Studios in Hollywood.

Florence Midgley has been engaged to play an important part with George Mel ford in his current production.

The Selig-Rock company is now at work on the interiors of "The Northern Trail," having just returned to the studio from Truckee and Summitt where scenes of the Curwood story were filmed.

SOUTH HOLLYWOOD TO HAVE THEATRE

The acquisition of the De Luxe Theatre, on Alvarado street, opposite Westlake Park, marks the advent of the Shuberts, Dukhnen and Langley Circuit of theatres in Los Angeles.

That is known as the Taft lot, located on Santa Monica boulevard west of Western avenue, has also been purchased by this company, and construction will start this week on a theatre to be known as "The Paramount," costing $80,000. It will be equipped with a Wurlitzer pipe organ and provision to be one of the prettiest theatres in Hollywood. W. E. Burnham, late business manager for Geo. M. Cohan's "Yankee Prince Co.," will be the resident manager.

NEWSPAPER MAN JOINS TITLE COMPANY

Stewart B. Moss, of the National Motion Picture Title Company, of New York, announces that Stanley J. Norris, Boston playwright and author, has signed a contract with his organization, whereby the latter assumes full charge of the title writing department.

A force of title writers has been engaged to write titles for film productions of their clients. The new service now offered by this concern.

TUCKER TO PRODUCE IN HAWAII

George Loan Tucker has arrived in Honolulu and will begin work on the filming of his next picture as soon as his latest photoplay, "Ladies Must Live," is released by Paramount. Mr. Tucker has obtained the picture rights of several books which are interesting and from these he is evolving his own scenario.

ETHEL GRAY TERRY WITH SELIG

Ethel Gray Terry has joined the all-star cast to be used in the new Selig-Rock production.

Together with Lewis Stone and Wallace Beery, Miss Terry is featured in "The Northern Trail," adapted from Willa Cather's story, "The Wilderness Mail." She will also play the leading feminine role in another Curwood story to follow this production.

Florence Lawrence, playing the leading feminine role in George H. Kern's production, "The Unfoldment," has returned from a short vacation in San Francisco.

Hal Mohr and Eddie Gheller are doing the camera work in reproducing the paintings of the old masters for George H. Kern's production, "The Unfoldment."

Pete Gerald, assistant director, and Phil de Esco and Jack Douglass, technical experts, who are at Catalina Island arranging the biblical episodes of Kern's "The Unfoldment," are making the daily trip to and from the island by aeroplane.

Next week the following list of players will appear in Frank Egan's playlet at the Ambassador Theatre: Charles Wildish, William Moran, Frank Braidwood, William Badger, William Harvey Scott and Lawrence Watson. The sketch is entitled "The Pool Book."

A. Rogell and M. T. Stewart have combined forces to promote a novel project. Both operate eight studios at the various beaches to photograph the public. They have secured the exclusive rights for this enterprise at Ocean Park, Santa Monica, Venice and Long Beach for a period of three years.

AT THE INCE STUDIO

"The Cup of Life" has been announced by Thomas H. Ince as the release title of his Associated Producers special production which was recently completed under the working title of "Pears and Pain." It will probably be released in June.

As a reward for having written the best criticism of Thomas H. Ince's drama, "Lying Lips," in a competition held by the Majestic Theatre of Reno, Nevada, as an exploitation feature of the presentation of the picture, Mrs. Bessie Williams was this week the guest of the Ince Studios, in Culver City, where she was afforded the opportunity of seeing the various companies at work and of hearing Mr. Ince and many of the players and executives at their best.

Thomas H. Ince this week completed the editing of the Louis Joseph Vance drama, "The Sinister Path," announced that the production would soon be completed for its release by Paramount as an Ince-Vance special.

The Selig-Rock company is now at work on the interiors of "The Northern Trail," having just returned to the studio from Truckee and Summit where scenes of the Curwood story were filmed.
Did you get that call?

Were you out, and could not be located, had you moved, was your phone busy or out of order?

That is the vital question

Howard Crampton will have a part in Ellis Parker Butler's Philo Gubb comedies.

Harry Todd is cast in the series of Ellis Parker Butler's Philo Gubb comedies.

Tom Gubbins has just finished an engagement as technical assistant to Mr. Stanlows at the Lasky studios.

"Black Sheep," featuring Neal Hart, will be released on the independent market May 15th.

Vernon Walker is in charge of the photographic work for the Norman Mannin productions.

Charles Parrott, director for the Harry "Snub" Pollard Comedies, has just signed a long term contract with Hal E. Roach.

Rupert Hughes lately played the score of his recent dramatic song, "Cain," before the Gamut Club.

Charles McAllin has been cast to play the leading comedy role in Eileen Percy's next picture, which will be directed by Philo McCullough.

Harriet Laurel, who has been portraying vamp types for Metro, is now supporting William A. Howell at the new Gerson studios in San Francisco.

Lavena Buchanan is assisting Edouard Wosykal, art designer, who is making the sets for the Ruth Roland serial being produced at the Hal Roach studios.

Mary Garden, General Manager of the Chicago Opera, was a recent visitor at the Goldwyn Culver City studios as the guest of Rupert Hughes.

New York hereafter will be but a temporary visiting place for June Mathis, as the Metro scenario writer has purchased a home in the Hollywood foothills.

An authoritative book on the growth of the motion picture industry is in course of preparation by Joseph de Grasse and Ida May Park, who in private life is Mrs. de Grasse.

The entire zoological collection of the L-Ko studios, where Century comedies are produced, is being moved to Universal City. There it will be under the care of A. C. Stecker, chief of the studio area.

Boris Karloff has been cast in the role of Ahmed Khan in Rudyard Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy," now in the course of production under the direction of James Young at the Robert Brunton Studios.

On the completion of her current production, Mildred Davis will take a motor trip through the High Sierras with her mother and small brother. This will be her first real vacation since she came to Los Angeles two years ago to play opposite Harold Lloyd.

PLOT AND NARRATIVE

In last week's issue of Camera! I made the statement that the majority of amateur writers do not know the difference between a dramatic plot and a narrative. I have been requested to define the difference.

A dramatic plot is a series of dramatic situations affecting a number of people, and each situation having a definite relation to the others. A dramatic situation is a little plot in itself, or a unit which, added to others, forms a combination known as a dramatic plot. In order for a situation to be dramatic there absolutely must be a conflict of some kind. This conflict may be between two or more individuals, or it may be between an individual and a condition. In other words, the eternal triangle is always present in every dramatic situation. There is some one who desires something. This something may be possession, relief, or revenge. There must be an obstacle which stands in the way of the desired thing being realized.

The desirous person constitutes angle one of the triangle. The thing desired is the second angle, and the person or condition constituting the obstacle is the third corner of the triangle.

A dramatic plot must begin with an interesting complication, or a dramatic situation, as soon as the principal characters are introduced. By this, I mean that there must be a conflict established. This conflict must be sustained throughout the entire thread of the story and every single character that is introduced and every bit of action that is shown must have some relation to the conflict above described, and every scene in the story must build toward the climax, or final solution of the opening complication.

A narrative is simply the description of a series of incidents involving one or more characters. There is no thread of suspense. Some of the incidents may be dramatic, but they are extraneous as far as the plot is concerned, and have no bearing on one another. Therefore, the stories do not build and the interest does not increase in intensity as the end is approaching, for the reason that there is no climax to build to.

ABOUT TRUE LIFE STORIES

There is hardly a day that some one does not either tell me personally, or write me, that he has just finished a wonderful story which is based on something which "really happened," and they seem to think that because it did actually happen that the first scenario editor to whom the story is presented will grab it like a hungry wolf would a side of bacon.

I do not like to be brutal, but I tell these people that scenario editors and producers do not give three whoops in Halifax whether or not it "really happened." One of the most unmistakable earmarks of an amateur is the admission that his or her story is based on some actual event in their own lives' history, and the scenario editor or producer is immediately prejudiced against a story when this fatal admission is made. In fact, it is simply an admission that one is not capable of building, or creating an original dramatic plot, but that he has had to resort to merely describing one which accidentally happened.

Ruth Renick plays the ingenuous or Viola, Brookefield's niece, sufficiently.
Edward Sutherland does some of his best performing as Clay Whipple, the talented lad which loves Viola. The plot circles around his frenzied but unintentional murder of a man who has tantalized him with a cat's eye jewel for which he possesses an hereditary aversion.
Mary Alden excellently portrays Helen Whipple, the boy's mother, who, despite her marriage and throughout her widowhood, always loved Brookefield.
Robert Cain makes a perfect district attorney heavy. His villains are always competently cared for.
Fred Turner has to credit the very ever before seen Lew Ellinger, a born gombler. He relates the somewhat depressing subject with some good comedy which might, nevertheless, have been better placed in the scenario.
Others included in the list of players are Charles West and Genevieve Bilan.
William D. Taylor is responsible for the direction of this Paramount production.

A novel preview of "The Invisible Power," Goldwyn's production of the Charles Kenryon photodrama featuring Irene Rich, was recently given at the Palace Grand Theatre, Glendale. It was put into the evening's program unannounced. About twenty film folk slipped into the theater and were given seats here and there among the regular patrons.
After the preview they were guests of Mr.
Kenyon at a dinner party which included
Pauline Frederick, House Peters, Sydney
Ainsworth, Will Rogers, Clayton Hamilton,
Rex Beach, Gloria Swanson, Harry Carey, Milton Ross, Charles Clary, De Witt Jennings, Ruth Roland and others.
Otto Nelson has finished with Neal Hart in "Black Sheep."

Al Martin, director, has returned to New York for a brief visit, to arrange the releases for his forthcoming productions.

Leon Bracker has designed six posters for "The Oath," copies of which were received by Mr. Walsh yesterday at the Brunton studio.

Allen Holubar and Dorothy Phillips are expected here for the premiere of their special feature, "Man, Woman, Marriage," which is scheduled to take place soon at the Ambassador.

Fred A. Turner has returned from Porto Rico where he played the title role in "The Tropical Tramp," filmed by the Porto Rico Photoplay Corporation.

J. E. McCormack of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., has moved his office from 209 Knickerbocker Bldg. to 619 Pacific
Finance Bldg., 6th and Olive streets.

Max Linder has moved from his Los Angeles bungalow and is now residing among the orange perfumed hills of Hollywood.

Lee Barnes and Sam Little, who have served as cameramen for the last four years at studios in Hollywood, have opened their own laboratories at Bronson and Hollywood Bldg., and are now operating as commercial photographers.

MYSTERY FILM COMPLETED

“The Tell-Tale Eye,” a five-reel mystery film, has been completed by Allen Russell of Russell Productions. The picture is being state-righted through the offices of C. O’D. Blanchard, who is handling the sales and distribution of the picture.

Edwin Frazee is now directing Lee Moran at Universal.

James O’Neill is appearing this week in “The Smart Sex,” at the Superba.

Tod Browning is working on a one-act play for vaudeville in his spare time.

Henry A. Barrows has been given an important part in the next Katherine MacDonald picture.

Little Nancy Fitzgerald has signed to play a child part with Katherine MacDonal.

Eddie Burns has been cast opposite Katherine Macdonald in her eleventh Associated First National release.

Dwight Crittenden and Wade Boteler will have prominent parts in the next Katherine Macdonald picture.

Gareth Hughes is making use of his spare time to supervise the building of his new lodge in the Hollywood foothills.

Viola Dana departed for Mojave on completing work in her latest Metro picture, “Life’s Darn Funny.” She will spend two weeks there.

William Badger who has just finished a leading character part with Anita Stewart, is playing in this week’s playlet, “The Pool Room,” at the Ambassador.

Tex Parker has just finished his first two-reel comedy, “Midsummer Gladness,” and will start work on his second two-reel western comedy, “Many 2nd, Written, Directed and Produced.”

The Italian-American Film Co. is preparing a series of two-reel comedies featuring Frank Hayes, Alexander v. Bode (King) is directing. Mr. Bode was formerly with the Metro East Coast Co. and before that he was with the French Pathé Freres.

Upon the occasion of a preview showing of his latest picture, “An Unwilling Hero,” at the Strand Theatre in Pasadena, Will Rogers was presented with a silver loving cup by the management.

Mayme Krasne, selected by theatergoers of Omaha, Nebraska, as the most popular business woman in that city, will arrive in Hollywood next month to be the guest of Viola Dana. The trip constitutes the contest prize.

Gertrude Atherton, one of the Goldwyn Eminent Authors, has found time between novels and photoplays to write a paeon called “California—The Land of Dreams,” which will be presented in Yosemite Valley the last week in May at the State Convention of the California Federation of Women’s Clubs.

The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"
An American Production Crisis

Just after the outbreak of the Great War, Robert Goldstein, producer of "The Spirit of '76," was sentenced to serve a term of years in a Federal prison because his very elaborate motion picture was proven to contain anti-British and therefore pro-German propaganda. In other words, it quite inopportune depicted the vices of the English court during the Colonial period at a time when England was our ally against a common enemy and when, as a result, we did not relish raking up past differences with the older country.

In that first mad rush of patriotism it was generally understood that anything which tended to weaken the position of one government was found to prove equally detrimental to its friends. The world was at arms, and Goldstein went to jail!

Today, after many months of political strife, we are still theoretically at war with Germany, and yet because, with the passing of the actual battle cries much of the old bitter prejudice has dissolved into nothingness, we have recently witnessed a countrywide sweep of enthusiasm as the result of the exhibition of "Passion," a German made cinema, the plot of which circles entirely around the worst side of French history in a very obvious manner. The fact that this picture was made in Germany before the war at a ridiculously small cost is now common knowledge, which has only gone to make the fact that from many standpoints it is an exceptionally artistic production all the more remarkable to the public. Never, for one moment, has a question as to its anti-French theme been raised. Without any desire to commend the retention of warped outlooks, we are forced to challenge the consistency of the two viewpoints which have been held so comparatively close to one another as months are reckoned.

All of the foregoing merely brings us to other and far more vital angles of patriotic ideals as they apply to a serious situation with which we are now faced. Probably anticipating a reception of the same nature as that which was accorded to Miss Negri's starring vehicle, Goldwyn has just purchased another Teutonic picture, "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," which will be given an early Los Angeles showing. Simultaneously with this announce-ment comes also the report that thirty-six other foreign made films, of which fifty per cent are German, have been procured by this and other foremost American companies that combine production and exhibition.

These European films, which are admitted to be greatly inferior to the American output, are being imported entirely free of duty at a competitive cost of ten cents on the dollar to the purchasers. Sort of clears the atmosphere and lets the cat out of the bag, doesn't it?

Is it to be wondered that these big corporations are finding it entirely profitable to cut down their American production when they can collect the regular rate on this scandalously cheap material? They are gambling upon the existence of enough "Passions" to pass off the other technical impossibilities which they will exploit to the detriment of their own industry.

Meanwhile, what of the independent producer and the professional man? Naturally, with the market thus flooded, the former will not be able to dispose of his pictures at a fair profit, and an exaggeration of the present quiet condition about the studios will keep hundreds of competent actors, cameramen, directors, scene artists, etc., unemployed.

This threatening condition is especially deplorable since it has been brought about by the utter greed of one small class of disloyal capitalists. It is not, however, passing unheeded, and we wish to congratulate the motion picture post of the American Legion and the Actors' Equity upon their fight to right matters by seeing that Congress impose a fair duty upon this invasion. Competition is not to be resented ever, but that which bids fair to conduct a wholesale slaughter of an American industry and force inferior entertainment upon an American public may not be termed competition. A much bigger traitor is the man who would cut his professional brother's throat than is he who produces an unsavory but historical story of his country's ally—F. R.

If ever the industry needed a representative in the City Hall, it is today, when we are threatened by blue laws and censorship. Vote for Edward Roberts for Councilman on May 3rd, primary day.
DORALDINA TO FORM HER OWN COMPANY

Doraldina, exponent of the terpsichorean art, has organized her own company and within a few weeks will begin production on her own account, according to an announcement made by her manager, Frank Saunders, this week.

Mme. Doraldina is now in New York seeking a suitable vehicle for her first stellar production while the details of her new organization are being worked out. According to the present plans Mme. Doraldina will make not more than three, and probably only two, productions annually.

Arrangements are being made for a studio, either there or in Los Angeles.

Ernest Shipman, well known in the independent field both as a producer and executive expert, will be identified in an executive capacity with Mme. Doraldina's production activities and also in exploiting and marketing her pictures.

GARDNER PREPARING FIRST STORY

Jack Gardner, who is to produce the Louise Dresser-Willard Louis comedies, has purchased a story by Rex Taylor, which will be filmed under the temporary title of "The Shepherd." This is now at work on the continuity and the company will begin shooting this week.

George W. Stout, business manager for the David Butler Productions, has been loaned to act in the same capacity for the Gardner organization.

TO PRODUCE PORTER STORIES

International Higher Culture Films, Inc., has been organized to produce pictures from the books of the noted writer, Gene Stratton Porter, and other authors. Production will start in the near future, with "Michael O'Halloran." This will be followed by "The Harp of the Islands," and the other fiction works of Mrs. Porter.

Offices of the company have been opened at 815-817 Union League Building.

AT GOLDWYN

Tom Moore is in the midst of "Beating the Game" under the direction of Victor Schertzinger.

"Ace of Hearts," an original story by Gouverneur Morris, was completed last week under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Paul Bern has been made a director by Goldwyn following the completion of "The North Wind's Mamma," which he co-directed with Carl Harbaugh.

Director Frank Lloyd is in New York taking the final scenes in Rita Weiman's original screen story, "The Grim Comedian."

Officials of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation will gather at the studio on May 9th for a week's conference, at which important steps will be taken in planning the sales campaign for the fifth Goldwyn year.

In addition to the officials of the company, the managers of twenty-two exchanges throughout the country will be present.

President Samuel Goldwyn, who is now in Europe, will be in Los Angeles for the meeting. P. J. Godol, Chairman of the Board of Directors, is already here in consultation with Abraham Lehr. Vice-President is in charge of production. A. S. Aros, Vice-President and Manager of Sales Organization; Alfred Weiss, Vice-President and Distribution Manager; Eric Shay, Assistant Treasurer, and Howard Dietz, Director of Advertising and Publicity, will also make the trip.

AT METRO

"Over the Phone" is the communication title of Alice Lake's new starring vehicle, a screen version of a story written for her by April Shipman Ruggles. The story is scenarized by Ed- lowe Lowe, Jr. Wesley Ruggles will handle the direction.

"The Match Breaker," a story from the pen of Meta White, soon will find its way to the screen with Viola Dana in the stellar role.

Arthur Zeiller, of Metro's West Coast scenario department, is preparing the screen version of the forthcoming Dallas Fitzgerald production. Mrs. Zeiller, who recently arrived in Hollywood from New York, has taken charge of the story department for the Fitzgerald producing unit and will write all of the scripts for his pictures.

June Mathis has just lately completed the scripts for two special productions, and in well on the way is a forthcoming Western by Bayard Veiller, who has just completed editing, cutting and titling the first production made under his personal direction—"The Last Card"—is taking a week's vacation before starting his new picture, the title of which has not yet been announced.

"The Conquering Power" is the title selected by Rex Ingram for his production of one of Dazac's stories. June Mathis adapted it for the screen and John P. Seitz will photograph the production.

AT VITAGRAPH

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, has assigned William Duncan to a seven-reel special production, which is from a magazine story by Ralph Cummins, "The Princess of the Desert Dream." The title will be altered before release. The continuity was prepared by Thomas Dixon, Jr., son of the author of "The Clansman." The star will direct his own production, and Edith Johnson, (Mrs. Duncan) will play opposite to him.

Larry Semon is starting a new comedy entitled "The Fall Guy."

"The Silver Car," Earle Williams' latest feature, has been shipped to London editing and the star has left for a motor trip before starting his next production.

Alice Joyce, Corinne Griffith and Alice Calhoun are starting new pictures at the Brooklyn studios. "The Blood Red Dawn," recently published in book form by Harpers, will be Miss Griffith's new feature. A stage play has been chosen for Miss Griffith, while Alice Calhoun will appear in "Closed Doors," written especially for her by Henry Dittmar.

Antonio Moreno has started on "The Secret of the Hills," a well known English novel, under the direction of Chester Bennett. The cast is still incomplete.

"The Son of Wallingford" company will spend next week at Balboa, where outdoor scenes will be filmed. The picture is being made as an extra length special production.

AT UNIVERSAL

Mabel Julianne Scott has started work on "Pretty, Perfect," under Tod Browning's direction.

Gladya Walton is busy on "What Can You Expect," her forthcoming feature in which she is being directed by Harry B. Harris.

Eddie Polo is busy on the first of the series of "Cyclone Smith" stories in which the star is being directed by Jacques Tourneur. The initial short reeler is titled "Cyclone Smith's Vow."

"THE GILDED LILY"

Gruman's Rialto

Adolph Zukor presents "The Gilded Lily," a Bob Leonard production, starring Mae Murray for an indefinite local run. The picture is an unusually artistic piece treating the subject of human lih. It is largely the story of an artificial little dancer who through love casts off her superficialities to find her sacrifice of fame and fortune unappreciated by the man for whom it was made. The entire production excels in unusual lighting effects, beautiful photoplay and lavish sets.

Miss Murray's interpretation of the title role is fascinatingly accomplished. Everything from her simplest of scenes to her dancing is perfectly timed. She has evidently made an intense study of her photographic angles, a fact which adds greatly to her attraction.

Lowell Sherman's deliberate, subtle rendition of Creighton Howard, a man about town, who, until almost the close of the picture, remains an enigma, is one more cinema success to be added to this actor's fast growing list. His work always interests and Jameson Robards, a stage recruit, enacts the juvenile. This is his first screen performance and consequently the fact that his heavier action is exaggerated will not be too severely criticised. In a more experienced film performer it would be inexcusable. Mr. Robards gives a very convincing impression of youth, however, in several of his sequences.

Charles Gerard carefully handles the strictly minor part of John Stewart, general trouble-maker. The small part of Howard's mother is delightfully done by a character actress whose name is omitted on the film. The different trend of this picture will make it very entertaining to those whom it attracts at all.

"KAZAN"
California

The Selig screen production of James Oliver Curwood's "Kazan," contains many thrills for the ordinary audience and includes much impressive northwest scenery which assists those thrills materially. It is the story of a wolf dog who, hating men, reverts to the primitive only to emerge now and again to assist his one friend, a woman. It is also a drama of that woman's sojourn in a rugged land which is foreign to her nature.

Unfortunately some of the big punches are lost through the poor cutting which even renders the introduction a little illogical. Improved photography would also have shown up the interesting Frank Greene art titles to better advantage.

Jane Novak is seen in the leading role of Joan Radison. She is the well cast and convinces as the girl whose nerve carries her where her physical strength would avail nothing.

Ben Deely also gives a good performance as Jim Thorpe, a man whose unrelenting senses of justice and revenge nearly bring tragedy to the girl. Very nearly Deely gives a B.B. Hardin performance.

Edwin Wallock makes an excellent "brute" heavy. He enacts "Black" McCrea, the man whose word is law, until Kazan even up an old score.

William Ryno and Ben Haggerty do the Radison brothers.

Although mention is made in the press books of the lad who plays Humpy Joe, the fiddler, he is due particular commendation for his several well played scenes.

RUSSELL SIMPSON

"WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS"

Grauman's

William de Mille's film adaptation of Sir James Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows," is one of the year's most entertaining Paramount productions. It contains and subtly presents all of the important material of the original which silhouettes a universal problem against a simple Scottish background. It deals with a quietly brilliant, infinitely patient woman whose devotion to her younger, politically successful husband surmounts his egotism and brings him back to her. The author allows his heroine to go through no superficial heroics or sentimental spasms, but rather has her employ all of her cleverness in the manipulation of the man who overestimates his own greatness and mercifully tolerates his wife's plainness without realizing that she is it who holds his career in the hollow of her hand.

It is certainly refreshing to have a feminine character of the screen win by her own bigness. It will be remembered that in most Lasky specials the woman usually discovers about the third reel that to renew her husband's love she must adorn herself with bizarre lingerie and lackless evening gowns. The public is weary of such unreal sex stuff; consequently, this worthwhile scenario, which we understand to be the combined effort of a great playwright and a foremost director, is assured country-wide success.

The atmosphere surrounding the story is consistently maintained in sets, costumes and characterizations. It is largely responsible for the rare humor which balances the heavier action so beautifully.

The subtleties are excellent, no matter what their tenor.

Lois Wilson has never given the public better work than she does in this picture's leading feminine role. As Maggie Wylie, the plain but romantic Scotch woman, whose brilliance makes and whose insight keeps an unappreciative man, her performance could not have been improved. The part is for the actress a great opportunity, well exploited.

John Shand, Maggie's almost impossible better half, is excellently characterized by Conrad Nagle. He provides the audience with many delightful chuckles although his part is played heavily. Shand's introduction shows him to be a scholarly British "butcher." He gives his part with an ambivalence and no sense of humor. His progress in that serious ego is quite amusingly imperceptible. We can imagine no one but Nagle underplaying such a complicated part with success.

Charles Ogle, as Maggie's adoring father, and Fred Huntly and Gay Oliver as her worshipping brothers, both have done better work than they have been given. It is apparent that the extreme honor of the male Wileys is only overshadowed by their desire to please their beloved daughter and sisters.

Lillian Tucker is the only misplaced performer in the picture. One can hardly imagine her in the role of Lucy Sybil, an enchantress gently reared by the nobility.

Winter Hall and Claire McDowell are "there" as usual with carefully handled pieces of acting. They do Venables and Comtesse de la Briere.

We are positive that more pictures of this type would be appreciated by today's public.

"THE LITTLE CLOWN"

Clune's

Another, and if possible even less exciting, version of circus life than was "Polly of the Circus," is this week's Realart offering, "The Little Clown." Mary Miles Minter is starred in the picture which is by Avery Hopwood. The story is a stereotyped affair with no weight and certainly little point.

The theme, however, if such it be, is based upon the foolish idea of the advent of a professional female clown into the home of her lover's aristocratic parents, and her solution of this problem by her sobbery and her pranks fail to develop a very tense plot. Furthermore, much crude humor incidentally located only increases the picture's uninteresting note. The only real laughs that we received came from the efforts of a sprightly monkey used in several of the scenes.

The photography is fair. The lighting might have been much better.

Even an exceptionally entrancing actress could have done little with the illiterate, capricious Pat, whose grammar has been made far from consistent by the title writer. As it is, the role means absolutely nothing. Miss Minter's work is not improving.

Jack Mulhall as Dick Beverly, the scion of southern blue blood aristocracy, who wanders to the circus and meets its clown, has also little opportunity to entertain. His forte is farce.

Winter Hall and Helen Dunbar are good types for comic roles and do their work.

Cameron Coffey has several appealing scenes as Roddy Beverly. He appears to possess a remarkable interest.

Noel Edwards is good in the role of Toto, while Wilton Taylor and Lucien Lightfield complete the cast.

TO FEATURE CONTEST WINNER

Universal claims to have made another discovery in the person of Mary Phibbin, the seventeen-year-old winner of the recent Braille and beauty contest held by a Chicago newspaper. She has been given a contract by Carl Laemmle, and will be featured in "The Harbor Road," the novel by Sarah Ware Bassett, which will shortly be placed in production.

George Stewart is cast as one of the principals in "Over the Phone," which Wesley Ruggles is directing for Metro.

Edward Connelly has been engaged to enact one of the prominent roles in Rex Ingram's forthcoming production for Metro, "The Conquering Power."

Leo White has been engaged for a part in "The Clinging Vine," by Elmer Harris, Wanda Hawley's current production.

Allan Hale will play a prominent role in the Alice Lake Metro production, "Over the Phone."

Geo. H. Kern's five-year-old daughter, Katherine, is playing a part in his production, "The Unfoldment."

George B. French and Charles K. French, playing important parts in Kern's production, "The Unfoldment," have returned from a short vacation in Big Bear Valley.

Charles Meredith has been added to the all-star cast of Thomas H. Ince's latest drama for the Associated Producers, "Hail the Woman," which is now in its fourth week of production at the Ince Studios.

Bobby Mack is playing Eddie the Eel in "Three Sevens" at the Hip this week.

Little Bernie Radom is playing Fannie as a child in Tod Browning's Universal production of "Fanny Herring."

Vlon Kalo, consulting technical director on Chinese settings, costumes, plays and Chinese etiquette, has left Los Angeles after finishing a part in Emmett Flynn's Chinese production, "Shame," to become connected with pictures in San Francisco.

Joey McCreery, a Los Angeles girl and one of the winners of the recent Thos. H. Ince screen contest, has been engaged by Universal and is now appearing before the cameras.

Kathleen Meyers will play opposite Eddie Polo in his forthcoming series of "Cyclone Smith" stories.

John Smith is now assistant director to Chester Bennett, who is directing Antonio Moreno at Vitagraph.

Frederic Vroom has a part in the Mary Roberts Rinehart story, "The Glorious Fool."

Lillian Langdon has been cast in "The Glorious Fool," under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

Edward Martindell has been engaged to play in support of Gladys Walton for Universal.

Albert Roscoe will play opposite Alice Lake in her latest starring vehicle, "Over the Phone."

NEILAN RETURNING

Marshall Neilan, accompanied by his staff, is expected in Los Angeles within the next few days. Immediately on arriving here, Mr. Neilan will start work on a production to the filming of which he plans to devote six months.

DIRECTOR RENews CONTRACT

Robert North Bradbury has again signed with Cyrus J. Williams Productions to write and direct the new series of pictures just arranged through Arthur S. Kane to be produced for Pathé, similar to the first two series recently completed, which featured Tom Santschi in western pictures and Bill and Bob Bradbury in boy trapper stories.

It is expected that George Deban will arrive in Los Angeles the latter part of May.

Wheeler Oakman has signed with Oliver Morosco as star of Slippy McGee, the Morosco play which is another stage success to be pictured.

Eagle Eye is cast as "stunt" man in R. A. Walsh's production, "Serenade."

David Winter will play opposite Katherine MacDonald in "Stranger Than Fiction."

Gertrude Douglass is cast in Ruth Roland's new serial.

Nollie Thompson will have a part in the forthcoming Ruth Roland serial.

Chick Morrison will have a part in the new Ruth Roland serial.

Erie Kenton has just signed with Hal E. Roach to direct the Gaylord Lloyd Comedies.

"Bob" Kerr has been added to the force of directors at the Hal E. Roach Studios and will take up his duties presently.

Charlie Stevenson, who was assistant director for Nick Barrows, who made the Eddie "Bo" Roland Comedies, has returned to stock and will play character parts in the various companies on the Hal E. Roach lot.

Fred Newmeyer, director; "Red" Golden, assistant director; Walter Lundin, first cameraman; "Hank" Koehler, his assistant; and Freddy Gill, "Prop" man, all of the Harold Lloyd company, are taking their vacation in the mountains where they plan to bring down big game.

Irene Dalton, formerly of the Christie Studio, is supporting Lloyd Hamilton.

Harold Miller is playing the male lead opposite Gladys Walton at Universal.

Marie Prevost, former Bennett player, has been signed by Universal to star in light dramatic features.

F. G. Becker is playing a part with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers."

Grace De Garro is supervising the dancing and playing a part in Larry Semen's current production.

Jimmy Adams of the Mermaid Comedies and his director "Chuck" Reisner have returned to the studio after vacationing for several days following the completion of their latest comedy, "Grief."

Eva Gordon is cast in Bert Lytell's "A Trip to Paradise." This is Miss Gordon's third Metro picture since her arrival from New York recently.

Art Dennis is doing a comedy lead with Nate Gater at the Arthur Gooden Studios.

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS’ ASSOCIATION NOTES

At the last bi-monthly meeting which was held in their club rooms, 5444 Hollywood Blvd., Friday, April 29th, Louis B. Mayer was the principal speaker of the evening.

William Rau has just finished assisting Lee Kohimer in the production of Hoot Gibson's two-reel features and will start with Director Jack Conway, who is to direct Carmel Myers at Universal.

Buck Connors arrived this week from Globe, Arizona, and is at the Horsley Studios cutting the last two pictures he made there.

Joe McCloskey is assistant with Director Edward Sedgwick, who is making "Live Wires" at the Fox Studios.

Mack V. Wright returned last week from Chicago.

Thomas P. Walsh, a member of the A. D. A., and President of the Walsh-Fielding Productions, New York, advises that their second five-reel picture is now being cut and will be released within the next thirty days.

Edward Sowders is Chief Assistant Director with Director Von Stroheim at Universal.

NAZIMova LEAVES METRO

Nazimova will sever connections with Metro, according to late reports, to return to the stage. Her version of "Camille" is her last picture. It is said that she was to have entered the field of independent producers but satisfactory arrangements for her personal supervision of her productions could not be made.

Tod Browning personally has purchased "Just Outside of Hell," by Rene de Salles, a French writer.

Frederick Palmer recently addressed the Orange County Federation of Women's Clubs on the subject of censorship. Mr. Palmer is president of the Palmer photoplay corporation and a member of the board of directors of Affiliated Picture Interests, Inc.

Vincent Hamilton, who plays an important part in Katherine Macdonald's latest production, is considering an offer from an English producer to star in a series of feature pictures to be made in Europe.

Helen Jerome Eddy has just completed a role in the picture, "The March Hare."

Colleen Moore, who plays the leading feminine role in Marshall Neilan's "The Lotus Eater," is expected to return to Los Angeles in the near future.

Betty Francis has just completed a part in "Daughters of Joy," Louise Glau's latest picture.

Vin Allain will write a series of two-reel Northwest Mounted Police stories for Irving Cummings, one of which will be produced every two weeks.

Films are to be made in Hawaii by both Allan Dwan and George Loane Tucker.

Earle Williams has returned from a visit to Santa Barbara.

After a sojourn in the East, Douglas MacLean has returned to Los Angeles.

UNIVERSAL BUYS STORIES

Several stories have recently been purchased by Universal and will be produced as feature pictures as soon as they can be put into continuity form.

INCE AIDS CRIPPLED CHILDREN

To assist in a campaign for funds to aid the crippled children of Southern California, Thomas H. Ince has just donated a one reel picture to the drive which started this week by the Los Angeles Orthopaedic Hospital-School.

The campaign has opened in five leading Los Angeles theatres, where the picture is to be presented. Five other down-town theatres will present it the second week, and the fourth week it will commence its tour of the neighborhood houses. By this means of distribution, which is being furthered by the co-operation of the Los Angeles theatre owners, it is expected that from three hundred thousand people will have seen the pictorial call for support for the unfortunate kiddies within ten weeks.

KINEMA BUREAU TO CAST PORTER PICTURE

The Kinema Bureau—a newly organized concern with a novel idea for casting picture—has just visited its first subject and scored a hit for its system of casting from screen-tests of actors rather than from the old studio-type of casting pictures. It has closed a contract with The International Higher Culture Film Corporation to cast the series of Gene Stratton Porter productions. Work on the first novel, "Michael O'Halloran," will begin June 1st and the Bureau is busy getting its material together to cast this production.

ANITA STEWART PURCHASES HOLLYWOOD RESIDENCE

That Anita Stewart has finally decided to become a permanent Los Angeles resident is evident from the fact that she has just purchased the Frederick Anthony Kimp place at Franklin and Vista streets in West Hollywood. She will not take possession until early in May.

Reginald Barker's next production will not be "Who Shall Judge," as first reported.

Tilling and cutting of "The Love Eke," first of a series of twenty-four comedies to be produced by Warner Brothers for educational release, is completed and the film is on its way East.

—Harold Lloyd has changed his plans about going to New York and instead will motor with Roy Brooks, a member of his company, to San Francisco, where he will remain a week.

Harry "Snub" Pollard is making arrangements to accompany his mother, Mrs. Isabel Pollard, to San Francisco the last of May, when she will sail for Melbourne, Australia.

The Harry "Snub" Pollard Comedies have acquired a permanent string orchestra.

Tom Santschi is putting into scenario form some of the experiences of his 12-year screen career. They are being incorporated in the more series of picture pictures he has just signed to make for Pathé release.

The Cliff Smith Productions, with a releasing contract for eight five-reel Westerns, has entered the independent field. The company has just started its second picture with Pete Morrison as the lead.

Production Notes

Edward Kull is in Bear Valley making exteriors for his series of Northwest Mounted Police stories. Josephine Hill and George Lauten are also featured roles.

Art Acred is working on the middle episodes of "The White Horseman," his forthcoming serial in which he is being directed by Alfred V. Boy. Ford Beebe writes the story in collaboration with the director.

Three Universal directors are assembling their casts and making preparations to begin work on as many stories as Stuart Paton is getting ready to film "Conflict," a super-feature for Priscilla Dean; King Baggott is making ready for "The Gossamer Web" in which Edith Roberts will be starred, while Fred LeRoy Granville is all set for "The Shark Master," a story of his own in which he will direct Frank Mayo.

Five productions are in the editorial rooms on their way to the screen. They are: "A Monkey Movie Star," a Joe Martin comedy: "The Scarlet Shawl," "My Lady of the Island," "Edith Roberts' latest starring vehicle, "Christmas Eve at Pilot Butte," and "Whose Wife Is Kate!" Leo Moran's latest comedy.

One of H. C. Witwer's short stories, "Robinson's Trouseau," has been purchased for the use of Lee Moran and will be placed in production on the near future.

"Out of the Storm," a lighthouse story from the pen of John Hothenest, in which Edith Roberts will be featured, has been purchased as her next starring vehicle.

Hoot Gibson has just finished his last two-reel picture, under the direction of Lee Kohman. Within the next ten days he will begin his first feature production, taking Harry Carey's place on the Universal program, while Carey will devote his time to the making of Universal-Jewel feature pictures. Gibson's first picture will be an adaptation of J. Allan Dunn's story, "The Mascot of Three Stars," which will be followed by Peter B. Kyne story, "The Sheriff of Cinnabar."

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

"How She Lied" is the title of the single reel comedy which Scott Sidney is making with Irene Dalton.

Scott is also finishing a Gavety Comedy featuring Henry Murdock and Maryynn. It is called "Queens are Tramps." William Beaudine is cutting a new Vanity Comedy entitled "90 Days or Life," in which Irene Dalton and Feeney again appear as the leads.

On completion of this picture, Beaudine will direct a two-reel Christie Comedy featuring Nial Burns and Vera Stedman.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Production started this week on a new Eddie "Bo" Boland Comedy, with Ethel Broadhurst playing opposite the star. Bob Eddy is directing. The script is by Marguerite Houghton.

The two stories of the building room is now ready for occupancy. Below are three star and three cast dressing rooms for the men, with three offices, while above are the same number of dressing rooms and offices of the various companies. The star dressing rooms are arranged in suites with bath and all toilet facilities. The second floor also contains a wardrobe room.

The Garry Productions, which comedy unit is co-starring Billie Rhodes and Harry Keaton, has completed its first production.

CLEVER COMEDIES

Newhall and Owsnahtrone furnished the opening scenes in Clever Comedies' initial two-reeler, "The Hound of the Tankevilles." Melville Brown is directing under the personal supervision of Webster Cellison.

Clever Comedies will produce this two-reel subject every three weeks until its series of 35 pictures have been completed. It is expected that Clever Comedies will be purchased at the end of the first year. The Production quarters of the company are at the Francis Ford studios.

CELEBRATES COMPLETION OF STAGE

Celebrating the completion of the new 7,000 square feet open stage, authorized by President Morrie Roberts, his recent trip to this city, employees of the Realart Studio held a big dance thereon recently. Among the guests were Wanda Hawley Katyn Williams, Charles Eyton, Walter Hiers, Sylvia Ashton and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Heffron. Studio talent furnished the music. This screening was W. No. 1 on the lot. The glassing-in of the No. 2 ten thousand square foot open stage will commence shortly.

The present project, cleverly starring production is well under way.

Eltner Harris, supervising director, is working on a new story for Bebe Daniels. It is announced that "The Virginia Courtship," from the old play by Eugene Presbrey, has just been purchased and will shortly be produced as a vehicle for one of the stars.

AT LASKY'S

After a brief vacation following the completion of her recently made picture, "The Lifted Veil," Ethel Clayton will start work next month on the comedy "Her Own Money" by Mark Swan. It has not yet been decided who will direct Miss Clayton.

Cecil B. DeMille is busy on his new picture suggested by a story by Leonard Merrick called "The Lady and the Laurels." William deMille is scheduled to start work presently on a picture based on a story by Rita Weiman.

Double exposure and split-screen work have been occupying the attention of Producer George Arliss, who is working upon E. Phillip Oppenhein's story "The Great Impersonation," featuring James Kirkwood, the "The temporary little[Fatty Arbuckle's next comedy, to be directed by James Cruze, will be "Should a Man Marry." This story is an original by Sarah Y. Mason. The screen play by Walter Wood. Work will start next month on this Paramount production.

Judy Compson is working on "At the End of the World," directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws and adapted by Edfrid Bingham from the European success by Ernst Klein.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Marcella Pershing

Marcella Pershing, the beautiful little lady who has been playing leads in Universal productions the past few months, has spent her entire life preparing for a screen career. Just fifteen years ago when she was but two summers old her father purchased two motion picture theaters in Woodward, Oklahoma. To that incident Miss Pershing's family lays the responsibility for her entrance into the films, since it was there that her interest was aroused, even though the houses were early disposed of. During the falter of the film it made the first year. The Production quarters of the company are at the Francis Ford studios.

In the fall of last year, immediately after Marcella's arrival with her parents from Wichita, she won the Collegiate Tribune Beauty Contest, an event which directly preceded her setting forth to Hollywood and resulted in joining the comedy company.

Miss Pershing who, by the way, is a cousin of General Pershing, made one comedy with Billy West before she was engaged to play the leading female in this Art Acred production for Special Pictures. At present the young actress is working with Hoot Gibson in his Universal series. She has to date accomplished eight plays with this actor.

Besides constantly studying her profession Miss Pershing is engaged with such subjects as French, Spanish, voice and aesthetic dancing. She is both athletic and domestic, a most desirable combination of tendencies.

Her natural attractiveness, personality, youth and perseverance assure her a remarkable career in the line which she has chosen.

TO MAKE COMEDIES

A new company has been recently formed which will be known as the Samuel M. Sargent Productions. "Shooting" will start at the Arthur Gooden studios within a few days.

Rex Story, an English comedian, will be featured in one and two reel comedies.

Fred D. Moore will be host of the new Greenwich Inn which is presently being erected on Santa Monica Blvd. The Inn will cater to the theatrical people.

Rupert Hughes is writing a novel about the Los Angeles film colony, to appear in the Red Book in serial form, beginning next October. The novel will touch upon the psychological effect upon the players of the commercialization of their emotions.

Dr. Henry A. Conway, of the California Hospital, has been employed as technical advisor to Director E. Mason Hopper, who is producing "The Glorious Fool," a Mary Roberts Rinehart story.

Mr. and Mrs. Haile Knight have recently completed character engagements with the Victor Schertzinger Co. at the Goldwyn Studios.
SCENARIO DEPARTMENT

WYCLIFFE A. HILL
President, The Photoplaywrights' League of America.

PLOT BUILDING

People who are anxious to write for the screen are continually spinning new ideas on me concerning some arbitrary rule or regulation in the manner of building dramatic plots.

A number of them have shown me their scripts in which they have “doped out” their stories in fifty incidents—evidently some new ruling established by a scenario school or text book publisher. Others have brought in their scripts and have hastened to assure me that they contain just exactly two hundred and fifty words and no more, while one institution, I am told, advises its students to write a detailed synopsis of fifteen or twenty pages and to accompany the same by a brief one of a couple of pages, double spaced.

I do not believe that any of these rules or regulations are observed by professional writers. In the first place I never heard of a professional writer laying out his story in so many incidents, as a child would handle a certain number of piles of sand. The way
I build a plot is as follows:

(1) First I select a big dramatic situation of an inspiring nature which will furnish a smashing climax for my story.
(2) I next select my principal character, either man or woman, who is to be involved with others in the climax already selected.
(3) Having done this, I next select my other two principals, one to introduce the love interest with my hero or heroine and the other to play a heavy. I now have my dramatic triangle.
(4) I then endeavor to invent one or two more dramatic climaxes, or “punches,” which will not only thrill my audience, but which will give the characters in my story an opportunity to do some wonderful acting and portray some unusual characterizations.
(5) Now I begin my process of deduction to determine what chain of circumstances might place my leading characters in the situation described and which will lead up to my final climax. Except as described in the next paragraph, I do not introduce any additional characters other than those which are necessary to place my principals in the situations in which they cannot place one another. I give all of my hero “business” to one man or woman and all the dirty work to one villain, if possible.
(6) Now I consider the proposition of in-roducing some comedy into the plot in order to contrast the heavy drama. This na-naturally calls for a comedy character and I use my reasoning powers to decide what type of character he or she shall be.

(7) I now go over my story forward and backward, in search of “loose ends.” I look for superfluous action and situations with a view of eliminating everything that does not advance the story and have a direct bearing on my plot. I study every act of my principals and every incident in the story, to determine whether or not it is logical and true to life. The question of whether or not I have a sustained thread of suspense is very carefully considered also.

(8) Now I get busy with a typewriter and write my story. I do not “dope it out” in incidents or count the number of words as I write them, but I simply tell the story in the most interesting fashion I know, eliminating unnecessary descriptive matter and practically all dialogue. In fact I never suggest dialogue except as an effective way of establishing the attitude of my characters, or when I wish to preserve what I consider an unusually clever title.

I believe all successful story writers subconsciously follow the same rules I have laid down here. They have no written rules and regulations—that is why I say “unconsciously.” Just as soon as the writer realizes that he is following a certain form his plots will become mechanical.

I do not believe that any writer can do justice to his story in a two-page synopsis.
There is also such a thing as saying too much and yet not saying enough. I prefer

THE MARKET
The best leads for a sale of stories that have come to my attention during the past week have been as follows:
A small company, which is making five-reel westerns, want a strong cowpuncher story, written around a star with a somewhat unsympathetic character. In other words they want a "good" bad man story.
They will not pay over seven hundred and fifty dollars for a synopsis.
One of the big companies is very anxious for a story for an emotional leading woman of the type of Norma Talmadge.
We are still looking for that five-reel comedy drama featuring a little character ingenue.

TO MAKE SOCIAL PICTURES
The Home Life Motion Picture Company has recently been organized by Nate Solomon, former business manager for the William Farnum unit at the Fox Studio; A. E.
Rosenberg, who for many years acted in the capacity of foreign representative for Universal, and Lester Reider, well known capitalist.
The new company is specializing in the production of films of private families, social affairs, such as balls, weddings, etc.
Professional screen tests will also be made.
The organization has taken a suite of offices in the New Pantages building.

Tom Gubbins, who has been serving as Chinese technical adviser to Penhryn Stan-laws at Lasky's, has been recently engaged by Chester Bennett of Vitagraph as technical assistant on things Chinese.

"SOWING THE WIND"

Ambassador

Anita Stewart pays here this week in an adaptation of the old novel, "Sowing the Wind." It is a depressing, complicated story, based on the conventionalized morals of a quarter century past. The scenario, which follows itself in circles, proves more or less tedious and the conversational lecturing with which it is marked becomes physically tiring after it has been carried on, discontinued and started out afresh in all possible corners of the production's various sets. Although the picture opens long before the beginning of the star's romance, it is unfortunately never shown. Instead, an unexpected spoken title calmly announces that it is under way and ready for the opposition of which, by the way, it is to receive plenty. Something vital is lost for the story as a result. As in the case of "Harriet and the Piper," the big punch is sacrificed in order that the heroine may remain virtuous.

The camera work is unusually uneven. Miss Stewart does not at any time entirely convince as Rosamond the unsophisticated title convert who acquires a startling amount of philosophy in one short "inexperienced" year. The fire that marked her performances in the old days is also lacking.

James Morrison is very good in the role of Ned, a part which will, however, prove scarcely sympathetic to the modern audi- ence on account of its indecency and extreme impulsiveness. Nevertheless it is a well handled juvenile. Myrtle Stedman very nearly steals the picture with her interpretation of Baby Brabant, Rosamond's unknown mother. Her work in this production, which is never lightened, is representative of the best of her art which we have long appreciated and admired.

Ralph Lewis and William V. Mong do some excellent team work as the millionaire Harbazon and his beloved friend, "the grouch." Their characters are sharply contrasted, since the action of the former is at all times serious while Mr. Mong depends entirely upon his always amusing comedy to carry his part. Its timely placing roes a long way toward counteracting the morbidity of the theme.

Josef Swickard's role of Petworth, the gambler, is a valuable touch to the whole. Harry Northrup and Herb Deasly each offer well executed minor parts.

John M. Stahl directed this Louis B. Mayer-First National production.

"THE POOL ROOM"

One of the most interesting sketches yet presented at the Ambassador Theater by Frank Egan is "The Pool Room." Charles Wildish's personality written and directed vaudeville act. Mr. Wildish, who also plays the featured role, accomplishes some of the best melodrama that we have recently wit- nessed in it.

He is well supported by a company which includes: W. Harvey Scott, William Moran, William Badger, Frank Braidwood and Fred Watson. The boys all give consistently good performances.

The Ambassador might present more such playlets to everyone's increased satisfaction.

Eugenie Desserer, who recently finished an engagement with T. Hays Hunter in "The Light in the Pheasant" has been signed to play a special part in "Molly O," Mabel Normand's next feature.

FORM SCENARIO STUDY CLUB

The Palmer Scenario Club has been formed in New York. It is composed of Palmer students who plan to study the greatest photoplays of the day. Each member has a copy of the standards for production issued by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, so that their scenario will be censorship-proof. David Bader is president.

Landers Stevens, who has just finished an important part in "Keeping Up With Lizzie," soon to be released, will assume one of the principal roles in the third Rockett feature, a story by Charles Belmont Davis.

Peter B. Kyne has been signed by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to write a series of original stories for Harry Carey.

Metro is planning to send a company to the Orient to make a film play with native players under the direction of Daniel Frawley.

Frank F. Greene art titles are being designed for the Seigel company, tentatively called "The Policeman and the Baby."

Jan Kubelik, violinist, visited Universal while in Los Angeles. He met most of the Universal stars and watched Frank Mayo at work on the opening scenes of "The Shark Master."

Lieutenant Commander Leo Compo, who was missing six days with the NC-6 sea-plane during the recent California-Panama flight of the Pacific Air Fleet, U. S. N., recently visited the Fairfax studio.

June Mathis, head of the Metro scenario department, has purchased a home in the Hollywood foothills.

Mary Miles Minter will presently build a permanent home in Laughlin Park.

W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro Pictures Corporation, is spending a few days at the Hollywood studios. Mr. Atkinson expects possibility to continue on his tour of the Metro exchanges throughout the United States.

Thomas H. Ince was recently the guest of Admiral Hugh Rodman at luncheon aboard the flagship, "New Mexico."

Douglas MacLean is reading a number of scenarios with a view to selecting one to be placed in production within the coming month.

Charles Hutchinson, Pathe star, will make his next appearance on the Pathe serial schedule in a melodramatic stunt production "Hurricane Hute." Lucy Fox has been given the female lead and Warner Oland is cast in the heavy role.

Ann Hastings will have a prominent part in "Hurricane Hute"—the new Pathe serial featuring Charles Hutchinson.

Under-production and the Investor

Never in the history of the motion picture industry has there been a time when things have looked so favorable for the investor as they do today. Strangely enough, this is directly due to the unusual quiet which the studios have been experiencing of late weeks, a condition which has brought the exhibitor face to face with a picture famine that promises to be far more fatal than the sweep of over-production about which he was heard to complain so loudly several years back. In that day he could at least discriminate in his booking. This he did with the result that dozens of mediocre pictures accompanied the really poor ones to the shelves in a short space.

Significant isn't it, that the spring of 1921 has seen many of those same five-year-olds dragged forth from concealment, rehashed and sold at a premium? But it is no more significant than the fact that even more antiquated foreign films are being rushed into the country by the frantic distributors who are going to tremendous expense in their exploitation. Neither one of the two occurrences could possibly have taken place ever before.

Briefly, it all means just this: the law of supply and demand has been overlooked with the result that the demand has overtaken the supply. A few months ago with money tight the big corporations believed themselves forced to cut production and the majority of independent companies were unable to secure sufficient capital to start them off. Today the former are too busy chasing down all immediately available "prepared food" for the distributing organizations which they maintain, to bother about catching up in the only manner which will bring real satisfaction, and the latter class (which probably contains the majority of the brains and art of the profession) is still largely financially incapacitated.

It is easy to discern that this is the opportunity of a life time for the moneyside man to get behind the independents and "clean up." With them alone lies the possibilities for the accomplishment of the big picture progression upon which the public is insisting, for they will expend unstintingly the time, energy and money (provided they have it) required in the construction of film triumphs.

At this particular time the backer couldn't lose. We only wish that we had a million or so that wasn't working!

F. R.

Gillmore Explains Equity

The following is a portion of the speech recently made by Frank Gillmore, secretary of the Actors' Equity, at a meeting of the Los Angeles members of that organization. Lack of space renders the printing of it in its entirety impossible:

"First of all, I want to congratulate you all on what I consider your great wisdom in throwing in your lot with the Actors' Equity Association. When I was here fifteen months ago I agitated that question, but the time was not yet ripe for it. I looked around when I came and I saw three organizations, the Screen Players, the Photo Players' Equity Association and the Actors' Association; three units, each possibly doing fine work in its way, but I thought to myself, "Supposing a crisis ever came which affected the actors here in Los Angeles, how could these individual units be of any effective power to resist, we will say, oppression should it come?" However, as I say, my advice at that time was not received, but it was working—it was working, and about four months ago there was a distinct and decided view on the part of the actors here in Los Angeles that they should unite. That was a wise step to take, but it was wiser still not only to unite in one body, but to throw in this body with the larger body, the Actors' Equity Association of the United States. I want to tell you new members here that you are not joining any poor organization. Even as a financial step it was by no means ill chosen, although you didn't think of that when you came in. Let me tell you that the organization to which you belong today has assets of $110,000. I also want to say, in cold cash your association has today $72,000, so you see that if we were to break up tomorrow, you would all of you not only receive your initiation fee which you paid into the Association, but a bonus besides. Is it necessary for me to outline or tell you the need of organization? Every group of people in the country today has its organization. The authors have their organization; the painters have their organization, the butchers have their organization, the architects have their organization, the theatrical managers have their organization, and would you like to be alone, speaking individually for yourselves, without an organization today, in this day and age? Why, it is unthinkable. I am sure you would not. Let me tell you what the organization has done for the actor up to now, and I am going to put the most important thing first. It is a thing which I will say in your own organization has done for the actor of the United States this: It has given him back his self-respect. There are a great many in this hall I know who, like myself, remember the times when—well, we were treated unjustly, and all we could do was to get into corners and complain. (Continued on Page 16)
Film Capital Production Notes

HOLUBAR TO MAKE PICTURES ABROAD

Associated First National, Inc., announces that Allen Holubar has signed an agreement with that organization that will complete six productions from the Holubar studios during the next six years, six productions from the Holubar studios.

According to the terms of the new contract, two productions will be made in California with Miss Phillips as the star, and four abroad. The foreign-made pictures will have all-star casts. Mr. Holubar states that he will be ready within a short time to announce the names of the stories that he will produce.

“Man, Woman, Marriage,” Mr. Holubar’s latest film, will have its Los Angeles premiere at the Kinema Theatre on May 21st. Mr. Holubar will personally supervise the prologue presentation.

RUGGLES TO DIRECT MOROSCO PRODUCTION

Oliver Morosco’s next adaptation, “Slippy McGee,” is about to go into production at the Mayer studio under the direction of Wesley Ayles. The negotiations between Ruggles and Morosco become a member of the Morosco directorial forces this week.

STEWARD TO MAKE ONE MORE PICTURE FOR MAYER

Anita Stewart has completed the filming of “The Price of Happiness.” This is Miss Stewart’s third picture of the year for Associated First National release, and it was directed by Edwin Carewe. After a short rest Miss Stewart will start on her fourth and final production for the 1921 season. Upon its completion she will take an extended vacation.

PREPARING “THE WANDERING JEW”

From the Louis B. Mayer studios comes the announcement that preliminary work has been launched preparatory to the picturization of “The Wandering Jew.” The story is now being moulded into shape and production is expected to begin on June 3rd. The direction has not yet been decided upon.

ARTHUR S. KANE CONFERING WITH RAY

Arthur S. Kane, president of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, has arrived in Los Angeles to confer with his various stars concerning their future productions. Mr. Kane will confer with Charles Ray and Richard Willis, general manager of the Charles Ray Productions, Inc., regarding future production and distribution plans.

Mr. Ray has released four productions through First National, and under the terms of his contract there remain eight more pictures to go through the distributing channels of the exhibitors’ circuit, four of which have already been completed, namely “Scrap Iron,” “A Midnight Bell,” “R. S. V. P.” and “The Barnstormer.”

TO MAKE KYNE STORY

R. A. Walsh of Spanish production, “Serenade,” is nearing completion at the Brunswig studios. The producer announces that his scenario staff is now engaged in preparing the continuity for “Kindred of the Dust,” Peter H. Kyne’s novel, which will go into production immediately after “Serenade” is completed.

STAHL PICTURE CUTTING

John M. Stahl is about to finish the cutting of his latest film for Louis B. Mayer, “The Child Thou Gavest Me,” which will be released in due time as a First National attraction.

Mr. Stahl is already making arrangements for his next production.

AT GOLDWYN

Tom Moore finished “Beating the Game” last week, under the direction of Victor Schertzinger. Charles Kenyon wrote both the story and collaboration.

Frank Lloyd and company, who have been in New York filming scenes for “The Grim Comedians,” Rita Weiman’s original story, are expected to return shortly to the studio.

The next Reginald Barker production will be called “The Poverty of Riches,” a picture called “The Mother,” an original screen story by Leroy Scott. Arthur F. Statter wrote the continuity in collaboration with the author. Leatrice Joy will play the leading role, and John Bowers will have an important part.

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan, Edith Johnson, and their company of fifty returned this week from filming in the mountains above Saugus and departed again for Big Bear Lake, where a week or more will be spent. Duncan is filming “The Princess of the Desert Dream,” a mining story, from the novel by Ralph Cummins. Don Chandler and director and George Robinson is in charge of the camera staff.

After a week of location work on an inlet near Balboa, Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester and several hundred players have returned to the studio. The company will spend the next two weeks on indoor scenes.

Jimmy Aubrey, comedy star, recently signed a new contract with the company for a series of two-reeler subjects. He will continue to produce one subject a month.

AT THE GERSON STUDIO

Work has been started by the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation of San Francisco on its second studio building, which is to be erected immediately, adjoining the first unit. The new studio will be completed during the next sixty days, when work on the first of the Gerson Features will begin.

It is planned to use the new studio exclusively for feature productions, while the adjoining unit will be utilized for the William A. Howell comedies, which are now being produced.

Director Tommy Wright is completing the final scenes of “Broke ’n Idle,” the second of the Howell comedies in which Billy Evans and Geraldine Karma are being featured.

AT UNIVERSAL

Production has been started on the “Gosserman Web,” the prize winning story of John A. Morosco, which will be filmed as a starring vehicle for Edith Roberts. King Baggot will direct.

Tod Browning is well under way in his production of “Fanny Herself,” featuring Mabel Joliet Scoville.

Ward Hayes is filming a mirth reel. Elvis Betcher, the photographer, is in the featured role, while Gertrude Olant described and Jody McCutrey plays in his support.

Edward Kull is in Dear Valley with Josephine Hill and George Larkin, who are being featured in a series of two-reelers.

Albert Russell is progressing with “The World’s Horseman,” a series serial in which Art Acedor is in being featured.

Four Universal directors are working with Frank Lawrence, film editor, cutting their recent productions.

THE PASSION FLOWER

Ambassador

In reviewing a film, it always make it a point to discover if possible what its director has attempted to accomplish, after which it is easy to determine whether or not he has met success. Never for one moment during its screening were the points which Mr. Herbert Brenon intended to suggest with his manipulation of "The Passion Flower," Norma Talmadge's latest First National release, conveyed to us undimmed.

It is a colorful Spanish story, artistically started off only to be immediately overpowered by a mass of unnaturally ponderous action, eccentric characterizations and philosophy that would be terrifying were it not for its ridiculousness. The conglomerate of unreasonable tragedy which it provides almost hysterical amusement for the audience which surrounded us. Burlesque is always fatal to a tragedy. Altogether this foolish thing is Miss Talmadge's worst recent vehicle. We would advise our directors to remain away from Europe if such productions as these are to result.

The sets and their photography are very attractive, and several of the performances are as enjoyable as their action will permit.

The star has not lately been more fascinating to look upon than she is as Acacia, "The Passion Flower," and her scenes are handled as Miss Talmadge alone can handle them, but her characterization of the Spanish youth is muddled by the scenario and direction until it loses its sympathy. Courtenay Foote's interpretation of Esteban, Acacia's stepfather, is illogical, to say the least. He gives the impression of attacking his scenes independently, without any knowledge or desire of action. It is impossible to classify his role, which means, humanly speaking, nothing.

Eulalie Jenson plays Raimunda, Acacia's mother. She displays many possibilities, but her business merely assists the chaotic note of the whole.

Harrison Ford far excels his usual standard in the rôle of Tarkides, a poet to whom Acacia is wed. His work as the faithful lad who is unhappily more or less of a coward, is beautifully rendered.

Charles Stevenson, Alice May, H. D. McClellan, Austin Harrison, Herbert Vance, and Robert Agnew complete the too large cast.

We will expect a decided improvement in the next Talmadge picture. It is necessary.

UNCHARTED SEAS

Tally's

Metro-Screen Classics' film version of John Fleming Wilson's "Uncharted Seas," starring Alice Lake, has just been released This Week's His one of the most enjoyable pictures of its class that has come along for some time. It is the story of a woman who, after suffering years of indignities at the hands of her husband, finally leaves him upon proof that he is an irretrievable coward and turns to "the man she hadn't married," with whom she endures months of cold and agony, while frustratingly uncharted Arctic Seas.

Privately we don't care for fake icebergs and unreal miniatures in the scene, and the terrors experienced by the hero and heroines make one wish that one of the tumbling glaciers would end it all. But then many souls are more dramatic than ours and for them the film may be made.

Let it be said seriously that an excellent aurora borealis effect has been obtained. It is far more convincing than some of the foregrounds upon which it shines.

Miss Lake does Lucretia Eastman, the disgusted wife, with dignity. Mature roles suit her better than the flappers in which we have so often seen her cast.

Rudolph Valentino does little, well, as Ralph Underwood, the romantic explorer who loves the wife of another man.

Carl Girard is also good as Tom Eastman, "the other man," who fails to appreciate his legal possession.

EUGENIE BESSEWER

Who has been engaged to play in "Mollie O."

Charles Hill Mailes and Fred Turner play respectively the fathers of Tom and Lucretia.

Westey Ruggles directed the George Elwood Jenkins scenario.

THE LITTLE FOOL

California

Edward Lowes's screen adaptation for C. E. Shurtleff, Inc., of Jack London's "The Little Lady of the Big House," retitled "The Little Fool," makes just average entertainment. The fact that the scenario strays quite a way from the original is rather fortunate than otherwise, since it is "naturally necessary for a film story of this type to have a happy ending.

Mr. London's novel was even morbid. There are times when the overly careful direction does not make the most of the picture's punches, but at that it mostly moves along to fair satisfaction. Technically "The Little Fool" is standard.

Ora Carewe enacts Paula Forrest, the title role. As the wife of a millionaire 'toiler' who experiences a fascination for her husband's friend, she is quite interesting. It may not be said, however, that there is anything about her performance to mark it unusual.

Milton Sills offers a characteristic piece of work with Richard Forrest, the husband whose over-confidence revert to absolute intolerance with amazing rapidity.

Nigel Barrie balances the triangle in the role of Evan Graham, Forrest's romantic literary friend. Mr. Barrie is quite competent to handle the almost sympathetic opposition that his part contains.

Philip E. Rosen directed the production.

THE HOME STRETCH

Grauman's

Douglas McLean appears in "The Home Stretch," another of his breezy Paramount comedies of this week. As may be guessed from the title, it is a horse-racing story. Moreover, it has more kicks than this director's pictures usually possess and the plot is somewhat more probable. From a technical standpoint, everything is satisfactory.

McLean, himself, this time gives us a real characterization. He plays Hardwick, a typical "raised on the track" pony player, who is a continual delight in his checked suit and tan derby. The "wise guy" manner in which he runs Dillon Springs, a jerk-water summer resort, is in reality all about that there is to the story. It is enough!

Beatrice Burnham is suitable the feminine lead or Margaret, the village post mistress.

Margaret Livingston contacts a sprightly member of the Friolezes with quite some abandon. Her grand-stand conduct is a bit terrifying but novel, and consequently it holds the attention.

Wade Boteler is good in the rather irrelevant part of Madison Springs' hotel owner, while Mary Jane Irving's juvenile charm is evident as she ensnare his daughter.

Joe Bennett and Jack Singleton contrast nicely as the rural "city boy" heavies. Their parts are comparatively unimportant.

Jack Nelson directed this latest production.

THE DANGEROUS MOMENT

Superba

Universal offers a much padded production of uncertain classification as Carmel Myers latest release, "The Dangerous Moment." The mysteriously titled picture is woven about a somewhat show-worn plot of which, as we inferred above, there is none too much. It is less than five reels in length. The material justifies but two. Several excellent performances have been wasted, if such is possible, upon Miss Myers is to be complimented upon her interest and her evident desire to utilize all possible opportunities for action in her role of Sylvia Palpini, a Greenwich Village waitress who is unjustly charged with murder. Apparently as a result of this industry, she is inclined to overdo her work in a manner that plainly detracts now and again from the scenario's intent. Doubtless greater care the direction could have overcome this tendency.

Lule Warren's characterization of Mrs. Turkides, the propriétaire of the Black Beetle Cafe, could hardly have been improved. What it lacks in length it makes up in effectiveness.

George Rigas plays his several scenes as her son, Mavrux, admirably.

Herbert Heyes is seen in the male lead opposite Miss Myers. Let it be said to his credit that he makes the role of George Duray, a Greenwich artist, as interesting as possible.

Smoke Turner, as the long-haired Socialist whom "the black mark of New York is his own," provides a clever comedy touch to the story. Even after they drag him into the "tragic" climax, he works much better.

W. T. Fellows, Billy Fry, Bonny Hill, F. G. Becker and Marion Skinner play in the cast.

Marcel De Sano directed.

Hobart Bosworth is now at the head of his own organization and has commenced the first of a series of six pictures, "The Sea Lion."
OAKMAN GETS BRIEF REST

Wheeler Oakman, who has just finished the leading role in Oliver Morosco's "The Half Breed," for First National release, is having a week's vacation in the mountains before beginning on the second Morosco production, "Silly McGee.

Mrs. Oakman (Priscilla Dean) will accompany him.

Vivian Ogden is cast in "Star Dust," the Fanny Hurst story.

Gertrude Douglas is a member of the Ruth Roland company.

"Brace," the golden tan Dane "movie" dog, is cast in Clever Comedies' Philo Gubb series.

Allen Quarrier Thompson has been engaged as second cameraman in the new Ruth Roland serial.

Edward Kull is in Bear Valley shooting scenes for his forthcoming Northwest Mounted Police stories.

Mark "Slim" Hamilton is doing one of the doormasters in the Philo Gubb series being produced by Clever Comedies.

Lillian Guenter is at present working in the children's feature picture being made by the Wonderland Productions.

Ray Berger, co-directing for Eddie "Bo" Boland, is a recent addition to the directorial forces at the Hal E. Roach Studios.

Noel Tearth, who plays the leading part in "Over the Hill," is engaged for an important role in "Star Dust," featuring Hope Hampton.

Cesare Gravina was called by telegram to New York, where an important part awaits him in Sidney Olcott's forthcoming production, "The Gossa mer Web.

Charles Musset, Tom McGuire and Mary Foy have important parts in the production of Fannie Hurst's "Star Dust," under the direction of Hobart Henley.

Arthur S. Kane of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation is in town on business. He is accompanied by John F. Fritts, prominent official of the Kane organization.

James Rennie will be leading man with Hope Hampton in the filming of "Star Dust," which is being produced at the Fort Lee Studios under the direction of Hobart Henley.

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, New York society woman, is to appear in motion pictures. Julia Hoyt, as she will be known, will support Norma Talmadge in "The Wonderful Thing."

Wallace McDonald has been added to the cast of "A Poor Relation," Will Rogers' latest starring vehicle, being made at the Goldwyn studios under the direction of Clarence Badger.

Captain S. J. Bingham has been selected as Assistant General Manager, and will have charge of productions of International Higher Culture Films, Inc., producing the works of Gene Stratton Porter.

Following the completion of her present picture, "Her Winning Way," Mary Miles Minter will leave for a two months' vacation in Europe. Accompanying Miss Minter will be her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, and her sister, Margaret.

HELEN FERGUSON

MISS WALTON TO APPEAR IN HOME TOWN

David Brill, manager of the Universal exchange in Portland, has forwarded a petition, signed by over three thousand theatre-goers of that city, asking for a personal appearance at one of their theatres of Gladys Walton. Miss Walton was formerly a Portland school girl and has a host of friends in the Oregon metropolis. Universal officials arc planning to let Miss Walton take a trip to her home town as soon as she finishes "What Can You Expect," her current production.

Reversing the tables and making legitimate stage plays from motion pictures is the latest. Laurette Taylor's new vehicle is to be "Humoresque."

Throughout the summer months Clair Du Brey is planning to be hostess at a series of week-end parties given at her seaside home. Miss Du Brey is the wife of a prominent physician.

Harry Carey is spending a few weeks on his ranch in the San Francisco-Canyon area and is being a frequent visitor at the Du Brey home. Several motion picture celebrities, including both Texas Guinan and Ton Santachi, are guests at this home.

In "Hostile Hands" is the title of the third episode of "The Sky Ranger," the new Pathé serial starring June Caprice and George B. Seitz.

NEW GRAUMAN HOLLYWOOD THEATRE TO START BUILDING

The new Grauman Hollywood theatre, work on which will soon begin, will be modeled after the Egyptian style of architecture. Its classic beauty will be further enhanced through such modern accessories as a children's nursery, a woman's rest room, and a man's smoking room. The theatre will seat more than 2000 persons.

Meyer and Holler (Milwaukee Building Company) are the architects and are in full charge of all building and construction.

OPEN NEW LABORATORY

E. H. Hinds, well known laboratory man, has opened his own laboratory on Lillian Way, in Hollywood. He is cooperating in the work with the Farnsworth boys, still men and chemists, who are planning to execute new and progressive ideas in the manufacturing and printing of pictures.

Those who are interested are invited to inspect the new laboratories.

Frank Greene art titles decorate Selig's "The Northern Trail."

TO REPRESENT ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS IN JAPAN

To represent the Associated Producers, Inc., in the Orient, and to establish American methods of film distribution in Japan, China, the Philippine Islands and India, Harry M. Owens, a special sales representative, will sail for Japan on June 2, according to a recent announcement from the Thomas H. Ince公司. Owens will make his headquarters with the Oriental Film Co., in Tokio, and will remain in the Orient as long as is necessary for the completion of his work.

The decision of the Associated Producers to dispatch a representative to Japan was reached as the result of negotiations just closed between them and the A. H. Woolacott Co., importing and exporting firm. A deal was consummated whereby the Woolacott company is to have the exclusive Oriental rights to all of the Associated Producers pictures released during the first year of its operation.

Owens will represent the Associated Producers, and will devote his time to modernizing the Japanese film and in furthering an extensive sales and exploitation campaign throughout the Orient.

We’ve been wondering a bit at the strange silence of one Mr. Don Hix upon a rather vital story about which he was most vociferous last week. Could he have been silenced?

Mathilde Bundage is the latest addition to the all-star cast of “Hail the Woman,” Thomas H. Ince’s drama of American domestic life for the Associated Producers, which is now in its fifth week of production.

Clarence L. Brown, co-director with Maurice Tourneur, expects to return in a few days from New York, where he is filming the final scenes of the new Tourneur production, “The Foolish Matrons.” The studio work of the production has already been finished and the production is now ready for filming at various locations throughout the Associated Producers in the early summer.

Cliff Maupin returned last week from Bear Valley, where he photographed scenes of Big Bear Lake for a special scenic film, “The Call of the Open Road,” under the direction of L. G. Thompson.

NAME OF QUEEN OF ROUMANIA STORIES GIVEN OUT

Lois Weber has acquired the rights for photoplay production of the following books written by Carmen Sylva, the late Queen of Roumania, who died in 1916, and Marie, the late Queen of Roumania’s Fairy Tales.” “Golden Thoughts,” “From Memory’s Shrine.”

Webber has secured the libretto of Queen Marie’s story, “The Lily of Life,” which was staged at the Paris opera last winter.

BARBARA BEDFORD IN NEXT TOURNEUR PRODUCTION

Maurice Tourneur has started the filming of “Lorna Doone.” For several months Mr. Tourneur has been making plans for visualizing Blackmore’s classic, but he is expecting to have it ready to release through The Associated Producers, Inc., early in the fall. Barbara Bedford will interpret the title role.

After finishing work in Maurice Tourneur’s production, “The Foolish Matrons,” Mrs. Wanning has been working at Milford, N. J., where she will spend the summer vacationing at her farm. She expects to return in the early fall.

Doris May has returned to Los Angeles after her first trip to New York City, where she went with Clarence L. Brown and members of Maurice Tourneur company to film scenes for his forthcoming production, “The Foolish Matrons.”

Bayard Veiller has returned to the Metro studios after a ten-day vacation spent in Northern California.

SCENARIO DEPARTMENT
Edited by WYCLIFFE A. HILL
President, The Photoplaywrights' League of America.

THE PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

The dramatist or the photodramatist must use exactly the same constructive process in the building of a dramatic plot that a detective adopts in ferreting out the details of a murder mystery. He must use the processes of deduction and elimination. For instance:

"Bang! Bang! There are two shots of a gun in rapid succession! Then the sound of a falling body! We rush into a room and find a man who has just breathed his last. By his side lies the gun. There is nothing about him to identify him. We examine him and can find the trace of only one bullet. Here we have a climax. What was the beginning?"

The first question that a good detective asks himself is "Who is the man?" Then, "Who shot him? Why? Who are his friends or acquaintances? Did he have any enemies? If so, who were they? Who was he last seen with? Who were his business associates? Did he shoot himself? If so, what was his motive? Was he despondent or happy recently? Has he had any reverses in business affairs? Has he had any unfortunate love affairs? Was he in good health?"

As he asks himself each of the above questions, he sets about to obtain an answer to each of them. Perhaps several or even all possible answers present themselves. He weighs each of them carefully and eliminates all but the most plausible. Many times he finds something that is very apparent but which absolutely does not fit in with the rest of the structure that he has built. Then, he either makes it fit, eliminates it, or does away with the rest of the case which he has built and starts all over again.

When the detective has finished his case, made his arrests, and when the Court and the jury are through with the prisoner we have a very interesting dramatic plot, and one which involves many characters, and a multiplicity of dramatic situations. It will probably be found that love, money, greed, and many other of the necessary ingredients of a good dramatic plot are present.

As was before stated the plot builder must do exactly the same thing that the detective does. He must start with a big idea in which he expects to involve certain characters, and then by a process of deduction and elimination, he must set about to build to this, just as the detective has done in the solving of the murder mystery.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"

I think it would be very interesting for this department to illustrate the process of plot building by actually constructing a dramatic plot, in a number of installments of the magazine. We will start with a single big situation and then we will proceed to use our process of deduction in stimulating the imagination to forge a complete chain of ideas which will result in a finished plot. I believe that this process is the only one successfully adopted by any writer in the construction of plots. It is a process which I have not seen described and illustrated in any of the text-books or instruction courses on scenario writing that have been published in the past.

Here is an interesting situation which promises plenty of complications and is a good one to build to:

"A masque ball is in progress. Both a husband and wife are there in disguise. The husband knows of the wife's presence, but she is ignorant of his. Believing her to be in peril in a room, the husband breaks in the door. Thinking that the husband is another man who is pursuing her, the wife shoots him. He is not killed, but seriously wounded. (This is basic situation number 56, To Slay A Kinsman Before Recognition.)"

Next week we will start our line of reasoning to determine how such a situation as we have described here, could have occurred.

THE MARKET

I know of two campaigns now who are looking for five-reel westerns with plenty of fast red-blooded action, which will not cost over $15,000 to produce.

No one has rung the bell yet, on the five-reel character western story. Bear in mind that what is wanted is a drama of the ideal type, in which the characterization is very strong, plenty of pathos, and heart interest injected, but in which the love interest and physical conflict may be secondary.

One of the large producing companies is looking for a five-reel farce comedy, for a juvenile, on the order of Douglas MacLean and Doris May stories.

Another call just in is for a very strong dramatic and emotional story for an actress around the age of twenty-four. This may be the "neglected wife" type of a story or something of that kind.

A certain motion picture star, feminine gender, who desires to make a smashing big comeback, is anxious for a super-dramma. She must have a story which has a big wallop and one which will line them up at the box office. The story should be for a woman around the age of twenty-one to twenty-five. Her financial backers will not quibble about the price that must be paid for such a story as they want.

I suggest that every one of my readers subscribe for Camera! so as to insure them getting the magazine regularly. We are going to have some interesting features in our Scenario Department.

WITH THE MUMMERS

The regular meeting of the Mummer, which was postponed from the first Tuesday in May to the second, will be held at the Workshop, May 10.

Charles Meredith will entertain with a talk on the Washington Square Players and Madame Baronovski will speak on the Moscow Theatre.

All members are invited.

PALMER PUBLISHES MAGAZINE

A new publication on scenario writing entitles The Photoplaywright is being gotten out by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation. It will contain feature articles by Rupert Hughes and will be sold on all newsstands for twenty-five cents.

SPECIAL SHOWING OF HOLMAN DAY PICTURE IN NEW YORK

At the request of The Maine Society of New York City, a special showing of the Holman Day Special production, "The Rider of the King Log" will be held in New York City on May 14th at Aeolian Hall. All the members of the society have been invited to attend the performance. The picture was made in Maine and more than a year was spent in the filming of it.

CRAWFORD Elected TREASURER OF ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Announcement is made of the election of Roy Crawford of Topeka, Kansas, as Treasurer of the Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Crawford arrived in New York recently and has already assumed active work at the home office. In coming to the Associated Exhibitors, Mr. Crawford again becomes a business associate of Arthur S. Kane, Chairman of the Board of Directors of that organization. Mr. Kane and Mr. Crawford were partners at one time in the operation of the Crawford and the Grand Theatres at Topeka, Kansas.

George Stewart will have a prominent part in Alice Lake's forthcoming picture, "Over the Phone."

Ralph Lewis will enact a leading character role in "The Conquering Power," Rex Ingram's next Metro production.

The Hollywood station champions of the City Firemen's baseball league will play an open date today with Larry Semmon's Vitaligraph nine, one of the studio teams. The game will be played at 3 p.m. on the firemen's lot at Cahuenga and Selma avenues.

Are You a Good Judge of Motion Pictures?

What do you see in them? Are you fair in your criticisms? You will be able to get more out of the photoplay after reading "What was Clytemnestra but a Stage Vampire."

By Rupert Hughes
(author of "Hold Your Horses," etc.)

If you are writing a photoplay, it's just as important to know what producers do not want, as well as what they do. You'll know when you've read, "What to Avoid in a Scenario."

about it. Oh, the indignity of it all! To think that we were compelled, through the nature of our calling, to accept things which no man who was a citizen in our own city would submit to, but we were helpless. I can remember the time, as all of you can, when we first received the thing eight, ten, even twelve weeks’ free rehearsals, and then when we started up and the thing was a failure, we would get two or three days of the same thing. That was two years ago with one of the biggest managers in the country who had two weeks’ lay-off around Christmas time, with the money for a company—more than sixty people. They went to Waterbury and gave a play, two performances in the one day, I believe, and the other one was a failure. They at least gave two performances in two weeks, don’t you think they should receive two-thirds at least? He said, ‘No, one thing is certain, that is, you are going to have to pay us what you are going to do about it.’ And I am bound to admit that is all that they did get. That was the way they day after day resorted to our sight and said, ‘This thing has got to stop,’ and it has stopped, and the very fact that we made that sort of thing stop has brought us back the respect of the very men against whom we fought. There is no rancor in their hearts. William A. Brady said three years ago, when we were asked, ‘Do you think it is right to give us the equity contract?’ said, ‘When you make me.’ He is perfectly satisfied because we have made our point. That is what we were won through taking the issue in his own hands and enduring everything for the right. ‘Now, there are a few other things that organization can do for the actors. It is absolutely necessary that you should have your representatives and your spokesmen, and that you can appear before the legislature of the country and before Congress, if need be, and speak for you. Without an organization that cannot be done. Now let me tell you the point that has occurred in the last two weeks. Two weeks ago, or three weeks ago, there was an organization formed which was termed the Central Trade Labor Organization. Oh, it was four authors, four managers and four members of the Actors’ Equity Council. At the first meeting of this Central Trade Labor Organization somebody said, ‘Why, the censorship bill comes up tomorrow in Albany; what are we going to do about it?’ We said we believed we had the whole thing in hand. Mr. William A. Brady, who is the president of the National Picture Association, who said in words that will ring in the ears of everybody in this room: ‘Here is a thing going on in this city, and it is going to be done right.’ That is what we have been doing.”

If we get together, actors, managers, di- rectors, and unite our forces, why, we will get somewhere and we will prevent these hypocrical, villainous laws which are passed in some of the states. I want to touch on another thing which some of you may think perhaps is even more serious. It may affect your very livelihood. A few months ago a picture from abroad, a Ger- man picture, came into New York City. It was an enormous success. That picture was bought for from $40,000 to $50,000 at the most. I was informed last year—a year ago—there were forty or fifty films from the same country waiting in New York City for buyers. Six of those pictures have not been released here. Now, you want to think this matter over very seri- ously. If fifty pictures come from a country where labor is cheaper, the production is cheaper, and the difference in the value of money is so pronounced, if those pictures should be admitted in this country, how is it going to look to you? If you have fifty pictures, and there may be five prints of each one showing in the different theatres of the country, it means to say that the productions are necess- ary. Now, in theory I am a free trader, but we have got to look out, as an economic organization, to the employment of our people. Who is it particularly benefits from this? It is those people who go in for only one-tenth or one-twentieth of what it would cost them to make it in our own country. Now, good luck to him, as far as that is concerned, but it means a big loss, so long as it doesn’t keep our people out of work; and it will keep our people out of work. Is this the logical conclusion? If they can pro- duce pictures in a foreign country for so much less than they can produce here, how are we going to prevent them going to that foreign country, producing that play, translating the subtitles and sending them to us? No, I hope that you all seriously consider this question and, if neces- sary—we are not going to act hastily, because that is not the practice of your asso- ciation, but if necessary, we will send a delegation down to Congress and point out the possible and probable injustice to not only moving picture actors of this country, but to motion picture directors, to motion picture scenario writers, to those who make your scenes, to those who make your costumes, your backgrounds, your sets, and manipulate your cameras, to all these people for the benefit of us, you will have, of a few finan- ciers in New York who want to rob you—men who will not get the film a little cheaper than they would otherwise do. Now, your chairman stated, and very truly, that we, the Actors’ Equity Association, are not. We are not. I defy anyone to state one single radical step which this organization has taken in the past ten years. When we went on strike I want to remind you that we went to the managers again and again and we begged them to confer. We finally reached—Mr. Taft and Mr. Hughes kindly consented, after our asking them to arbitrate the points of difference between us and the managers, that we would be glad if they would accept Messrs. Taft and Hughes for this purpose, and what did they say? They said, ‘Messrs. Taft and Hughes are very charming gentlemen, but we don’t think they know very much about our business,’ and they refused. It was when they started the problem which I continued that it would be the end of any ac- tors’ organization which had any possible chance of survival. After the strike an agreement was entered into. They agreed to temporize on the basis of the requests which we made by your committee. The strike has lasted a year? In spite of the fact that we have an agreement which clearly states the basis of employment between actors and managers, we have lowered the bars again and again and again, so as to help the managers in what we believed was a bad season, and we will continue to do that.

"Many have insisted that we were a closed shop. The closed shop means that an or- ganization can close and we know the people that will not come in. We are not going to stop any actor or actress from making his living on the stage. All we say is that you have no absolutely to have the decision of the Actors’ Equity Association—and this only affects the dramatic end—if you want to play with us, you have to be a member of the organization which has done so many and brought you so many concessions, and by which you—month after month and year after year, are now being protected. Heretofore, Mr. chair- man said, the conditions in the motion pic- ture industry are very different to what they are on the speaking stage—and believe me, I try to understand, and I think I do, I hope I do—there are very few abuses. Most of the abuses have been produced by white men and treat their employees fairly and squarely.
THE ITALIAN AMERICAN FILM COMPANY is willing to consider scenarios for one-reel and two-reel comedies. Also Westerns.

"But, and here is the point, they want to continue treating you fairly and squarely, but if some of the new directors or motion picture producers come in and start under-selling them, we might say, and under-selling them and under-selling, we want to see that the standard which the present producers have made shall be upheld. And so in that way all we are doing is what? It is an insurance. It is an insurance to see the continuance of the conditions which now exist in the motion picture industry, and it is an insurance to prevent—to weed out whenever they may appear—any abuses which may occur. Of course, when I say any abuses, that is very sweeping. I don't mean to say that now and then, maybe more now than then, abuses may not creep in, but we trust we will be able to remedy those.

"Now, what is the Actors' Equity Association going to do for you all right here in Los Angeles? I want to say that you have a big office, that you have a big agency, and understand that is a great big thing, much more than you people think, at the present moment we know, and you know, what has been happening in New York with agents—agents charging 15, 15 and 20 per cent. Now, your agency here is more or less a check on all that kind of thing. Your agency here is going to charge just enough to cover expenses—a per cent for up to five weeks, which will cover expenses; and while that agency exists it will always be a check on other agencies coming in. If other agencies do come in and try to charge more than that, then we have got to take it up with that agency, and believe me, when we start taking a thing up—well, it is very often remedied.

"Any organization with a name like Equity has a serious work to do. It has got to live up to its name. It has got to see that it not only secures Equity, but that it gives Equity. Now, I think even those who are opposed to us will say that we have endeavored to live up to this."

"I am going to tell you one other thing, and don't imagine I am doing it to throw bouquets at the Equity. I am not. I am throwing bouquets at you. We have an arbitration committee composed of three members of the Managers' Association and three of the Actors' Equity Association and these three try the different cases and complaints which come up, and in one case which came up the committee voted unanimously that the actor was right and should receive a certain amount of money. The next day evidence reached us which proved that what had been told at that particular committee meeting was not true; that there had been a miscarriage of justice, and that our member was not entitled in all honor to the money which he had been awarded. We went to the next meeting and we said, 'Gentlemen of the Arbitration Committee, the Equity Association desires to take nothing for its members which does not rightfully belong to them.' We have discovered since the last meeting that there was an error, and certain things have come to us which show that the manager was right in his contention and not the actor. We, therefore, as members of the Arbitration Committee, beseech you to reverse your former verdict and give the decision to the manager.' I think that was only equity. I am telling you these things because you who come into Equity must realize that you have your obligations and that the council of your association will insist always that its members live up to the spirit of their agreements and to the spirit of their association. . . . I am reminded of our motto, which is at the head of all our literature. Probably many of you have seen it. For those of you who have not I am going to repeat it, because it has been our motto ever since we started. It is a quotation from Marcus Aurelius: 'Love the right, poor as it may be, which thou hast learned, and be content with it, making thyself neither the tyrant nor the slave of any man.'

"Now, I have talked so much that I am just going to conclude with just a little about our future. The Equity is not solely an economic institution. It thinks of the theatre, and when I say the theatre, understand, I include naturally the motion pictures. It thinks of the future of them. The motivation of the Equity, amongst other things, is to found community theatres. You may ask how will that assist us in the motion picture world. I will tell you how it will assist you. There may be times when you are beginning to feel a little rusty. We feel that with these community theatres, after you have worked two or three years on the screen, will oil up the machinery should you consider a change to the speaking stage.

"Now, in conclusion I am just going to say this: My suggestion to the producers and to the managers is that we form a joint committee to talk things over; to meet, we will say, at least once a month to get an understanding entirely of what is in the other fellow's mind. Nothing is ever lost by talking a thing over. Lots and lots of trouble has been averted by sitting around a table and saying, 'Now, have you got anything to complain of, old man?' and we think it over and say, 'Yes, we think so and so and so and so,' and the other party rubs his chin and says, 'Well, perhaps you are right.' Wouldn't that be something? If we could get some committee here in Los Angeles, just the same as we have in New York, to meet periodically and discuss and prevent any possible trouble in the future. Not that I anticipate any, but doubtless by meeting and talking together we can prevent any possible discord in the future. So you see that? (Exhibiting a check.) This is a check for $2,000. The Actors' Equity Association believes that its brothers and sisters of the Equity in Los Angeles need something to start its bank account. This is a little start."

An Anticipated Triumph

Probably the Los Angeles actors' greatest victory to date was accomplished last Saturday when a concentrated demonstration by them forced those in charge of Miller's Theatre to remove the German-made, Goldwyn release, "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," which had been booked, we understand, for an indefinite run at that house, and replace it with an American picture.

The film colony, well organized this time, turned out en masse to dignifiedly see justice done. We were present and great was our gratification to observe that the remonstrating crowd was made up not only of the hundreds of screen performers who are unemployed, and have been, in some cases, for months as the result of decreased American production and to whom, therefore, the menace of this foreign intrusion which threatens the very life of our industry, has been brought home; but that it was composed also of many of their more fortunate brothers and sisters who happen to be yet under contract. These last were there not alone for their personal gain but with the good of their profession foremost in mind.

Yes it was a good thing to witness, and as may be judged by the results, the entire demonstration was effectively manipulated. We have noticed that it is a bit difficult to successfully battle the American Legion, the Actors' Equity Association and several other young blooded organizations which are now unmistakably "in our midst." Particularly is a combination of their efforts an excellent thing not to fight. The tariffless foreign film is one of their mutual grievances and last week they spoke their opposition in unison.

Taken altogether, the occurrence indicated many things, all of which are promising for the opening up of the studios, a subject in which we are all vitally interested. Everything considered, another attempt, at least in the near future to insult the helpless West Coast actors with the local running of continental, especially German screen entertainment, will scarcely be made. So far—so good! However, we believe that last week's prompt action will have a much farther reaching effect than merely that. As a follow-up the Equity and the Legion are instigating a nation-wide agitation which is bound to eventually reach Congress. The outcome can only be the levying of a fair import tax upon these photoplays, a duty that will thoroughly protect an industry which the United States alone has conscientiously developed. Let it be explained that by the phrase to protect, in this instance, we mean largely to feed!

A consistent keeping after this situation is bound to bring studio activity again, which means more prosperity for all. If we don't engineer our own campaigns, who will?

Mutilated Classics

In answer to a published criticism of the manner in which our scenarists and producers mutilate the classics that they film, "Billboard" says the following editorially:

"We cannot present in detail the very just protest made in this article, but we admit that it applies to many screen adaptations made from famous novels dear to the hearts of the reading public. Likewise, we cannot blame authors who protest at the liberties taken with their brain children in the process of transferring their original story to the screen. This happens in so many cases where pictures are made unrecognizable when placed before the silver sheet.

"Much improvement is necessary in these adaptations and the scenarist should bear in mind the impression held by the public in the original form presented by the novels. However, there are drawbacks in this line not easily calculated. The screen angle necessitates changes which an author can scarcely comprehend. As a rule, picturized novels do not succeed very well. It is difficult to screen dialog, which is usually an integral part of a picture. Condensation is another obstacle which robs the picture of much of the original quality in book form. The adapter is compelled to conform to the conventional standards of the screen and is handicapped in retaining the original ideals of the book. The screen has a language of its own. We have to show a scene, not talk about it, in order that the spectator will visualize its meaning. Often stories which read interestingly are not effective in the photodrama; hence a switching of conditions and an elimination of episodes are absolutely necessary to put the story over. The director is thus enabled to make clear for the vision what is merely spoken of in the book. We realize there have been some atrociously bad pictures from the works of prominent authors, and the admirers of these novels are frequently disappointed after viewing the picture. But the screen is inexorable; it has only one line to follow.

"Now if Shakespeare's works were to go over to the screen—and assuredly they will in time—we can imagine all sorts of cruel happenings to the Bard of Avon's works. We might even expect to see Shylock placed in an eastside shop with three brass balls over the door instead of the way Shakespeare conceived his surroundings. Also beautiful Juliet might be filmed on a fire escape in a Baxter street tenement, where the lines of a multi-colored wash, red flannel shirts, babies' needfuls and voluminous kil- monos could act as a background for her balcony scene. "An audience will pay to see 'The Merchant of Venice' or 'Hamlet,' but not a perverted version of the great author's work. To take liberties with these classics is to venture on dangerous ground, but how can the story reach the public without interpolations from the director who knows his craft?"

BOSWORTH STARTS SECOND INDEPENDENT PRODUCTION

Hobart Bosworth, now at the head of his own production organization, this week completed his first special feature, a story of the Alaskan whale fisheries, for Associated Producers distribution, and is busy with the preliminary preparations for the second of the series of six pictures scheduled for release during the coming twelve months.

The second feature, which will enter production during the coming week, is temporarily titled "Renunciation," and has been adapted to the screen by Joseph Frankore Poland from the original script by Emily Johnson. Rowland V. Lee will direct, and J. O. Taylor has been engaged as head cameraman.

HILLYER TO DIRECT INCE SPECIAL

"Lucky Damage," a drama by Marc Edmund Jones, is the production with which Lambert Hillyer will make his return to the Ince banner after an absence of two years, during which time he was associated with William S. Hart productions. The continuity is now being written and other preliminary arrangements have been started so that active production may commence inside of a month. An all-star cast will be featured and it is expected that Henry Sharp will be assigned to the photography.

THE ROCKETTS MOVE

The Rockett Film Company is leaving Universal City and will henceforth produce its pictures at the Louis B. Mayer Studio. Production of the third Rockett special feature, "Handle With Care," has already started. The play has been reconstructed from a Charles Belmont Davis story.

The Rocketts are planning expansion to double their product, which for the remainder of 1921 is already fixed at five special features.

CUTTING "ONE A MINUTE"

Final cutting and editing was commenced this week on "One a Minute," Douglas MacLean's next Thomas H. Ince comedy scheduled for Paramount release at an early date. Ince is in charge of the work and is being assisted by Louis Milstone. The story was adapted to the screen by Joseph Franklin Poland from the stage play of the same name by Fred Jackson.

FILMING OF SANTSCHI STORY TO START

Arthur S. Kane and Cyrus J. Williams have practically concluded their conferences bearing on stories and casts for the new series of Tom Santschi pictures to be directed by Robert North Bradbury. As in the past, Mr. Williams will produce at the studio he acquired last year from the Brentwood Film Company.

MAKING STORY COMEDY

The first story for the Rex Story Comedies, entitled "Lord Knows What," has been started. It is a one reel comedy and will be completed within a week.

Mr. John C. Browne, Universal scenario editor, announces the purchase of "Bransford of Rainbow Range," a Eugene Manlove Rhodes novel of several years ago. It will be used as a starring vehicle for Harry Carey.

"A Question of Honor," the Ruth Cross story, has been selected for Anita Stewart's next production. Edwin Carewe, who has directed the star in her last three pictures, will handle the new one.

AT GOLDWYN

"From the Ground Up," an original screen story by Rupert Hughes, will be the next vehicle for Tom Moore. Mr. Hughes wrote his own continuity.

House Peters will have the leading part in Frank Lloyd's next production, "The Man from Lost River," an original screen story by Katherine Newlin Burt. Lambert Hillyer wrote the continuity.

Harold Barker has started work on Lew Scott's original screen story, "The Poverty of Riches," the continuity of which was written by Arthur F. Statter.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Eddie "Bo" Pollard's comedy, the working title of which is "A. D. 1912," is nearing completion. Bob Kerr is directing.

Gaylord Lloyd has started production on his latest comedy which is as yet untitled. Eric Kenton is directing.

W. S. Van Dyke, directing the Ruth Roland serial now under production, is at work on the third episode.

Harold Lloyd's latest three-reeler, "Imagination," production of which was recently completed, is now remodeled, cut and titled and will soon be run in preview. Mr. Lloyd's next comedy will be a college picture.

Production started today on Harry "Spud" Pollard's seventy-fifth comedy. Charles Parrott is directing.

"My Lady Friends," co-starring Carter De Haven and Flora De Haven, is rapidly nearing completion.

It is expected that Allen Holubar will begin shooting early in June on his new production which is based on an original story. Holubar will again be assisted by Harold Bucquet.

AT REALART

"A Virginia Courtship," from the old play by Eugene Presbery, will be the next production in which May McAvoy will be featured.

"The Girl Who Pays Dividends," by Earl Dehr Biggers, will be the next Wanda Hawley production, which will be produced under the working title, "Her Face Value." Percy Heath wrote the scenario.

AT THE MAYER STUDIO

Although well up to date on his schedule of releases through Associated First National, Louis B. Mayer now has three pictures in the cutting room and is making preparations for the filming of two more productions to get under way within the next two or three weeks.

Both the Anita Stewart and John M. Stahl companies expect to resume production work as soon as the negatives of the foregoing pictures are ready for shipment East.

NEILAN TO PRODUCE TWO FILMS DURING YEAR

Marshall Neilan has just finished a picture starring John Barrymore entitled, "The Lotus Eater." It is an adaptation from Albert Payson Terhune's story of that title. Mr. Neilan is now on a route to Los Angeles to start work on his next production. He announces that he will confine his activities during the next twelve months, to the production of two big pictures.

The first of these productions will take six months to complete and will feature Colleen Moore.

As yet nothing has been decided concerning the second photoplay.

“AN UNWILLING HERO”

California

O. Henry’s “Whistling Dick’s Christmas Stocking” has been made into a very pretty little celluloid epic by Arthur Statter for Will Rogers. In fact, the picture, which has been retitled “An Unwilling Hero,” fills an hour as amusingly as one could possibly desire. It lacks the usual pathos of its star’s vehicle, falling back entirely upon his comedy hobo characterization which, may the heavens be praised, remains consistent to the end. There is an unsatisfactory reaction to the cleaned-up tramp and refined laggard. The effectively photographed locations are beautiful. Will Rogers is in his element as Whistling Dick, a lazy, easy-going thorn whom circumstance silhouettes for a space against aristocracy as a romance. Garbed in even more ridiculous clothes than ever, he strolls delightfully through his performance on the back of his heels. He will appeal to anyone with a sense of humor. Molly Malone and John Bowers as Nadine, an heiress, and Hunter, her true lover and the conscience of the period costume, are happily cast and form a convincing reason for Dick’s temporary heroism. Darrel Foss has a few good scenes as Richmond, the gentleman crook, and Edward Kimball characteristically plays Mr. Lovejoy, Nadine’s father, a gentleman of the old South. Nick Cogley and Jack Curtis complete the cast. Clarence Badger is again responsible for the direction of this Rogers-Gouldwyn picture.

“BLACK BEAUTY”

Tally’s

Quite naturally we were curious to see how Grant and Dialling Chester treated Anna Sewell’s renowned novel, “Black Beauty,” when they scenarized it for production by Vitagraph. We have, and let it be said that this admirably difficult subject has been handled admirably and in a manner that is not liable to disappoint the original’s enthusiasts. The period costume and gracious character of the book are captivating on the screen, while the horse himself is given the necessary amount of attention to make it really “Black Beauty.” There is nothing to adversely criticize from a technical standpoint. Jean Paige heads the human cast in the role of Jessie Gordon, a gentle miss who would willingly sacrifice herself for the good name of her dead brother. Her character could not have been better placed than it is here. James Morrison utilizes all of his refined appeal as Harry Blomenden, Jessie’s faithful suitor. George Webb makes a perfect Sewell villain. With subtly deliberate heartlessness and a subtle pole position he complicates Beckett, the much-hated wretch whose servant at last betrays his crime. Bobby Mack is an excellent type for the Dorkin Ghost, which he plays very well indeed. John Stepping also makes the forceful Squint Gordon very realistic, while Antrim Short retells the story of all his own in his few short scenes as Joe Green, a stable boy. Adele Farrington and Charles Morrison complete the cast. The animals are well managed and their action is convincing. David Smith personally directed this Vitagraph special.

drugs and alcohol, forgets temporarily a New York engagement and remains in London’s Limehouse, only to have her name and reputation stolen from her by her equally talented but unknown daughter.

The mother’s further degradation and her revenge upon the woman who deceitfully took her place provide big moments of the story, while the final discovery by the woman that the wronged girl is her own, and the consequent suicide of the former immediately following the vindication, form a highly effective climax.

Photographically the picture is average. Miss Dean does the most unusual acting of her career as the selfish but gorgeous Laura Figlan, who, with only a passing thought for the little daughter whom she believes dead, treats her dissipating way until she brings about her own downfall. Never has she displayed such a keen sense of dramatic proportion. Her make-up is excellent.

The star also enacts Pauline Stevens, the great Figlan’s forgotten daughter, who, to save an old man, accepts the identity of the missing artist without realizing their relationship. This part is strikingly contrasted with the former.

Niles Welch is more than sufficient in the leading male role. He plays the press agent of the supposed Figlan.

Harry Van Meter and Harry Carter, both as good as Figlan’s lovers, while a tender touch is given us by Spotswell Atkin, who plays “Uncle” Karl.

May Giraci and William Welch complete the list of players.

Stuart Paton directed this special Universal-Sudow offering.

“REPUTATION”

Superb

What is by far the most plausible and best handled picture in which we have seen Priscilla Dean is “Reputation,” Universal’s local release. It is the dramatic story of a famous but disreputable actress who, due to

“THROUGH THE BACK DOOR”

Mission

Mary Pickford comes back strong with her latest United Artists Production, “Through the Back Door.” It completes out-collating all dissatisfied memories of “The Love Light” and re-proving herself America’s most remarkable and the world’s representative ingenue. It would indeed be difficult to choose a more suitable vehicle for little Mary’s interpretation than this Marion Fairfax scenario which includes all of the delicately shaded comedy and pathos necessary in her successes. Charles Fosoter’s photography of the “just right” sets and locations is unusually beautiful. The subtitles also add their bit of art to the picture, which anyone could profitably see.

The star herself has never given us a more clever child characterization than she does as little Jeanne, the American kiddie whose negligent mother permits her to be raised on a Belgian farm by her old nurse. As the adorably incorrigible ten year old, we see again “Rebecca of Sunnybrook” and “The Little Princess.” Miss Pickford has never been more convincing as a child. Moreover her work is just as great when Jeanne’s ten summers stretch to fifteen. We have never admired her more.

Gertrude Astor is excellently cast as Mrs. Reeves, Jeanne’s ultra modern mother, who, despite her frivolity entertains a conscience. She gives one of her most interesting late performances.

Wilfrid Lucas is typical in the role of Jeanne’s jealous stepfather, Mr. Reeves. Helen Raymond departs from her customary “dressed” parts to play Marie, the nurse, who mother’s her charge. As may be expected from her previous interpretations, she is very good, while C. Norman Hammond is more than picturesque as Marie’s husband.

John Harron appears in the juvenile lead opposite the star. He displays a touch of Doohan’s appeal in his role of little Gill, the seventeen year old “boy next door.”

Adolphe Menjou and Ellnor Fair accomplish together the story’s heavy work. The latter, a couple of sailing-mayten-tendencies. Menjou has already shown himself to be competent to handle any opposition and Ellnor Fair is simply magnificent.

Theo Alice Carpenter makes a consistently attractive double for the star at five years. It is not at all necessary to strain one’s imagination into reality, he is one individual, as is so often the case under such circumstances.

Peaches Jackson and Doreen Turner also are well chosen to fill the roles of Conrad and Constant, two Belgian orphans whom Jeanne rescues.

Al Green and Jack Pickford are to be congratulated upon the direction of this entertaining screen play.

“THE CITY OF SILENT MEN”

Grauman’s

A Frank Condon adaptation for Paramount, “The City of Silent Men” is released in Los Angeles this week. It stars Thomas Meighan. The story deals with a man who, having been unfairly railroaded to prison, escapes and rises high only to be haunted by visions of the law until he is finally discovered and later exonerated. A suspense type film, it is filled with much of the shock to the somewhat usual plot and two or three well handled comedy situations further support it. The scenario presents the play, interestingly, and Patricia Palmer and George Cooper have been added to the cast of "The Glorious Fool," the Mary Roberts Rinehart story which is being directed by E. Mason Hopper.

Marie Mosquini, playing leads in the Harry "Snub" Pollard Comedies, has purchased a new home on Victoria Drive and has already taken possession.

Wilbur Higby has been signed by Lois Weber to appear in her forthcoming productions. Mr. Higby will play a leading role in a photoplay upon which Miss Weber started work early in May.

L. E. Wall, formerly connected with the Kernco Film Corporation in the capacity of director at Bakersfield, is now associated with the Harter-Wall productions. This new company expects to complete its first two-reel comedy about June 1st.

"Red" Golden, assistant director; Walter Lundin, cameraman; Fred Gill, "prop" man, and Hank Kocher, all of the Harold Lloyd Company, have returned to the studio after a five days' fishing trip at Deep Creek and Summit.

Benjamin B. Hampton has just returned from a four day sojourn in Ventura County, where he retired to put the finishing touches on the photodramatization of his next production, "The Mysterious Rider," photoplay of the novel of Zane Grey, which recently finished production.

Pickups By the Staff

PAT O'MAILLEY HURT

Pat O'Malley, working in a scene for Marion Fairfax's "The Lying Truth," was painfully hurt when he leaped from a twenty-foot bridge to the limb of a tree which broke under his weight. A sprained ankle and a wrenched knee were the total casualties. Pat is still in bed, but expects to be at work again in a few days.

PALMER DISCUSSES CENSORSHIP

In order to gain a more friendly and understanding attitude towards motion pictures, a number of citizens of Santa Ana gathered at the home of Superior Judge Thomas recently to discuss motion picture censorship with Frederick Palmer, president of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation. Those present included members of the local board of censors, the board of education, and many clergymen.

ANNUAL EQUITY MEETING

The annual meeting of the Actors' Equity Association will be held at the Astor Hotel on Friday, June 3d, at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon, when the election of officers and members of the council and other business will be transacted. Members are informed that the semi-annual dues of $6.00 are payable on May 1st.

RealArt Studio employees are to have an old-fashioned picnic and barbecue on Sunday, May 15th.

The Century Film Corporation will remove its lions to Universal City. They will still be handled by Charles Gay, their former trainer.

Mr. and Mrs. Hal Wilson will celebrate their silver wedding Friday, May 13th. They were married in 1896 in Melbourne, Australia.

Julius Stern, president of the Century Film Corporation, has left for a trip to Europe. He will make a week stop-over at New York.

Edward Pell has returned to Los Angeles from New York where he filled a twenty-three year engagement in D. W. Griffith's "Dream Street."

Charles Ray has returned to the studio after a vacation trip to the Grand Canyon, following the completion of "The Barnstormer," his latest First National release.

Maurice Tourneur announces that Charles Von Enzer photographed "The Last of the Mohicans." Other parties have been taking credit for the camera work on the picture.

Max Linder, the French comedy film star, will journey to New York to see his countryman, Marshall Neilan, meet the American heavyweight champion, Jack Dempsey.

May McAvoy is planning a ten days' rest before starting her new picture, "A Virginia Courthouse." She has just completed "Everything for Sale" by Hector Turnbull, which was directed by Frank O'Connor.

Marjorie Daw, who has been with Marshall Neilan for the past two years, has been released from his organization by mutual arrangement. Miss Daw is now appearing in Marion Fairfax's initial production.

KATHLEEN NORRIS ADDED TO EMINENT AUTHORS

After a protracted holiday in Europe, Kathleen Norris and Major Norris will return to their literary work. Mrs. Norris is the latest author to be added to the Goldwyn roster and she will come to the Culver City studio after her arrival in New York.

ANN SCHAFFER

TUCKER RECOVERING

Dr. Robert V. Day, physician to George Loane Tucker, wishes to state that Mr. Tucker, while still confined to his home, is on the road to recovery.

Lee Morin will henceforth be introduced as an individual comedy star, having split professionally with Eddie Lyons, his earlist partner.

Theodore Roberts, who has been playing a prominent part in "Hall the Woman," at the Ince studio, is in a Los Angeles hospital having undergone a serious operation.

Metro has signed Director George D. Baker, whose first picture will be a Gareth Hughes starring vehicle. Mr. Baker has just arrived from New York and is preparing to make three productions. The first is "Hunch," by Percival Wilde.

Various changes are taking place in the personnel of the Goldwyn organization. Victor Schertzinger's contract expires at the end of his current production. Clarence Badger is reported as having completed his contract, and Will Rogers, it is thought, will leave Goldwyn to form his own company.

F. J. Godslo, Goldwyn executive, Charles Chaplin and Dorothy Dalton were the guests of Max Linder at a dinner party at the Ambassador in Los Angeles, together with Clarke Windsor, Grace Kingsley, M. Gomier and Clarke Irving. The dinner preceded the preview of Linder's new comedy, "Who Pays My Wife's Bills?" at the Rosemary Theatre in Ocean Park.

UNIVERSALITES STAGE MUSICAL COMEDY

Employees of the Universal Fort Lee laboratories will present to the public a three-act musical comedy entitled "Black and White" at the Hughly's Point Palace, 153rd St. and Southern Blvd., New York City, Saturday evening, May 14th.

The revue is the work of H. R. Parsons, author of several soldler talent musical comedies in the A. E. F. Parsons now is a member of the staff of Universal's laboratory department.

Carrie Prevost, who is to be starred in Universal pictures, will make a personal appearance during the performance.

The proceeds are devoted to the welfare work being conducted by the mutual welfare association of Universal employees.

ELECTRICIANS MEET

The regular meeting of the Electric Illuminating Engineers' Society was held this week at the Louis D. Mayer Studios where R. E. Naumann acted as host and chief guide in a tour of the studio stages.

"SCREEN SNAPSHOT'S" YEAR OLD

With issue Number 26 of "Screen Snapshots," which is now being edited and fitted for release during the coming week, is rounded out the first year's output on this single-sheet novelty release.

Mildred Davis plans to motor to Santa Barbara this week.

Harry "Snub" Pollard and his mother spent the week-end at Big Bear Lake.

Hal. E. Roach and H. M. Walker have returned from Big Bear where they went for trout fishing.

Eugene Louise, Continental representative of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, is writing photoplays in London.

May Allison's Metro contract has expired and she is expected to affiliate with another organization or return to the stage.

Arthur Statter has severed connections with Goldwyn and will leave the studio upon the completion of his latest scenario.

The American Society of Cinematographers will suspend any member who accepts an engagement to film Clara Smith Hamon.

William Badger, who plays in Anita Stewart's "The Price of Happiness," is recovering from a surgical operation on his throat at the Whittier Hospital.

Harold Lloyd recently returned from San Francisco that he might appear at a benefit here for disabled soldiers. Mr. Lloyd will be a camper during the rest of his vacation which he will spend at Catalina, along with Director Fred Newmeyer, assistant director "Red" Golden and Walter Lundin, his cameraman.

ENTER—NOVO FILMS

The Novo Syndicate will shortly enter the feature production field and "The Two Films" will make their first bow to the public. The new concern is backed by St. Louis capital and its vice-president and general manager, Mr. R. R. Glasgow, arrived in Los Angeles last week to make the necessary preliminary arrangements for its entry into the independent field.

Mr. Martin C. Anderson, theatrical and motion picture man, is secretary-treasurer and production manager for the syndicate. Mr. Anderson will reach Los Angeles on or about May 25th, and shortly after his arrival the company will begin operation. The management has several studio and office locations under consideration and production announcements will be made as soon as negotiations for a location have been completed.

The policy of the company will be to produce five to seven-reel feature pictures and the output will be limited to twelve pictures per year.

The company expects to exploit and market its own productions, in all of which all star casts will be used.

AT LASKY'S

Plans for Gloria Swanson's second Paramount star picture have been altered and it is now announced that she will next make a screen version of "The Shulamite," instead of a story by Edward Sheldon as formerly stated. "The Shulamite" was originally a novel by Alfred and Claudio Askew, and was later made into a three-act play by Edward Knoblock and Claudio Askew, and is now being screenized by J. E. Nash. Sam Wood has again been assigned to direct Miss Swanson, but as yet no details of the cast have been decided upon. May 16th is the approximate date of starting. Meanwhile Elmar Glyn's "The Great Moment," Miss Swanson's latest starring vehicle, is being cut and assembled.

FINAL TITLE GIVEN BUTLER STORY

"Making the Grade" has been chosen as the final title of David Butler's newest five-reel feature which was recently made for Irving Lesser. It will soon be released.

Katherine Macdonald's forthcoming starring vehicle, "A Man's Game," is nearing completion, under the direction of J. A. Barry.

John M. Stahl is expecting to be busy by the end of the week, on the preliminary arrangements for his next production.

ORGANIZATION FORMED TO COMBAT IMPORTATION OF GERMAN FILMS

Last Wednesday evening twenty Los Angeles civic and film organizations were represented at a gathering held as the U.O.C. of organizing a concentrated campaign against the importation and exhibition of German films.

Several committees were named to facilitate matters. The following is a list of them and their chairmen: Organization Committee headed by Ernest Joy; Legislative Committee, John Clark, Los Angeles attorney; Finance Committee, J. Horne; Information Committee, C. D. Butt of the Central Labor Union and the Publicity and Advertising Committee, William Mooney.

The Organization Committee will immediately select a full-time executive which will be conducted along purely patriotic lines. Its eventual mission is to influence the passing of a tariff bill in Congress affecting all European films.

GOLDWYN IMPORTS FILMS FROM ITALY

While in Rome during his recent trip abroad, arrangements were concluded by Samuel Goldwyn, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, with the Unione Cinematografica Italiana, known as the U.O.C., whereby a series of pictures made by this company will be distributed in the United States by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. This announcement was made recently at the sales convention of Goldwyn branch managers now in session at the studio.

The Goldwyn Company is now making plans to release the first two pictures of the group. The first one will be "Theodora," based upon Victorien Sardou's drama. "Theodora" will be followed by "The Ship," founded on d'Annunzio's novel, "La Nave," with Ida Rubinstein, the Russian dancer, in the featured role. This picture which was a year in the making, was directed by the son of the poet, Gabrielle d'Annunzio, Jr.

Anna Q. Nilsson has been working opposite John Barrymore, under Marshall Neilan's direction, in "The Lotus Eaters."

CENTURY COMEDIES

Fred Fishback has just finished a comedy entitled "The Thinker," and has already started a "Brownie" comedy, featuring Brownie the wonder dog.

Billy Watson has recently completed a Peggy Jean and Charles Dorothy comedy, a rural story entitled "Third Class Male," and is at work shooting his new comedy at the beach with a cast including Charles Dorothy, Peggy Jean and Cupid Dolan.

Tom Buckingham has started a new Harry Sweet comedy. Dorothy Dee is Sweet's new leading lady.

"The Eagle Man" is the title of the two-reel Western thriller, the newest of the C. Edward Hatton pictures, which Hatton is producing for release by the State Right Market through C. D. C. Film Sales Corporation.

Catherine Loraine's last comedy, just completed under the direction of Fred Caldwell, will be titled, "The Poor Drunkmen."

AT METRO

Metro's fourth producing unit has gone into action at the company's Hollywood studio with the arrival from New York of George D. Baker and his corps of assistants. Mr. Baker has selected "The Ranch," a story by Percival Wilde, as the first production. Gareth Hughes will be featured in this picture.

Viola Dana with her company will spend the next ten days at Coronado Beach where the exterior scenes for "The Match Breaker," the star's newest picture, will be filmed.

AT VITAGRAPH

William Duncan, Edith Johnson, and a troupe of fifty players, have completed their location work at Big Bear on "The Princess of the Desert Dream," and have returned to the studio.

Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester are expected to complete the film version of their latest story within another month. Most of the studio scenes have been finished.

NEW R.C EXCHANGE MANAGERS

Charles R. Rogers, General Manager of the Robertson-Cole Company, has just announced a number of changes in the personnel of the branch exchange managers. Roy E. Flaggier has been appointed manager of the Indianapolis branch. Sherman C. Webster has been selected as the manager at Cleveland. Carl J. Conin has been appointed the Washington branch manager, and William C. Cook, is the new manager at Omaha.

SCENARIO DEPARTMENT

President, The Photoplaywrights’ Society

We started out last week to demonstrate the process that is used by the photodramatist in building a plot. One of the favorite means of making a start was described as being the selection of a big situation which would constitute a dramatic climax and then by the use of the process of deduction and elimination to establish a chain of circumstances which would logically lead to such a situation.

Some writers will tell you that they begin with a situation, others choose a title, while still others get their inspiration from a character. When we bear in mind the dramatic titles and strong characters suggest big dramatic situations, it brings us back to the suggestion above—that is, building our story around a single big idea.

In order to demonstrate the combination of a strong character with a big situation, I am going to discard the idea with which we started last week and adopt a new one. Let us start all over again.

A couple of years ago I made a trip into the foothills of the Sierras from the central part of California. After traversing a mountain road by automobile for ninety miles out of Fresno, it was found necessary to travel two days and nights further into an almost unknown country, by pack train. Finally arriving at our destination at the foot of the famous Tehripe Dones, we camped.

Away back in this isolated country, which during the winter time is totally cut off from civilization by heavy snows, we met two prospectors. One of them was an old man of perhaps sixty-five, while the other was a much younger chap of around thirty. Naturally, they welcomed the advent of human beings to their camp. For two years these men had been alone in this great silent expanse of mountains and forests. In search of the elusive yellow metal, they had driven a tunnel three hundred feet deep into the mountains, and through their lonely association and work they had become inseparable.

The younger man impressed me greatly. He possessed a very strong character and was just such a type of man as Dustin Farnum, or Tom Santschi. Around the camp fire that night, as we smoked our pipes and discussed everything in general, I asked these two men if they never felt a longing for the companionship of the fairer sex. They had told me that for two years neither of them had seen any human being other than each other, with the exception of a few cattle men, who had come in the spring of the year and again in the fall. The reply of the two men to my question was a loud, clear, emphatic "never." But right then he got an idea for a big story. Why not use the younger man in my story as the principal character, involving him in a big dramatic situation, and then build my plot around that?

One of the most inspiring situations of the kind that I have in mind is "To make a sacrifice for an ideal." This suggested that I involve my prospective friend in a big situation which would lead to a voluntary sacrifice for an ideal at the climax. A very dear thing to a woman who in some manner is brought into his isolated domain. One's own honor is certainly an ideal. This suggests the idea of having the love story of a little girl for his honor. Therefore, this shall be the climax of the plot, which we are going to build, and to which we will apply our process of deduction and elimination in the next chapter.

THE MARKET

We lost out on the sale of one of the five reel situations which we treated in last week's Camera. The company desiring the same advised me today that they have already procured a story for their next release. It will, therefore, be five or six weeks before they will need another story.

The other company, being a new one which has not yet started production, has just finished out a number of delightful little stories in view. There is, therefore, still a market for a good fast-moving, red-blooded western story, featuring a male lead, and which can be produced for $15,000.

There is a call for a number of breezy, two reel, fast-moving sporting comedies, with a male star. These stories should deal with such locale as Los Angeles, the prize-fighting, the base-ball game, the gymnasium, Olympic games, etc.

An independent producer, here from the East, who has not as yet selected a studio director, cast or story, is in the market for a series of five reel society dramas. The stories must be clean, and should be of such nature that they can be produced for fifteen to twenty thousand dollars each. Several stories have been submitted to him, but nothing has been decided upon.

Another thing we lost out on was the five reel farce comedy of the Douglas MacLean type which I mentioned last week. After trying everywhere for a story, and not finding anything that suited, the love department of the studio which was looking for this story got busy and rushed out one, and then the company advised them that they were not given a chance first.

There is still a market for one or two stories with character ingenue leads, although a couple have been produced in an unusual manner. I suggest that all of my readers send in their subscriptions to Camera in order to be assured of receiving the paper regularly and benefiting from the valuable information which it contains in every department.

George M. Yohnam has completed the continuity for "Lotus Blossom," to be produced by the Leon Hess Jung Productions, Inc. The original story was written by Mr. Leong, who did the practical work in "Broken Blossoms," "Crooked Streets," "Pagans God," and "Pagan Life," and for forthcoming Thomas H. Ince production.

James Cruze plans to start presently on Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle's forthcoming comedy, "Should a Man Marry?" The company making "At the End of the World," headed by Betty Compson, and directed by Henry Stanleys, will leave shortly for location on the coast.

ESTABLISHES PACIFIC COAST BRANCH OFFICE

Bernard A. Goodman, who arrived here recently from New York, has established a Pacific Coast branch office in the Mason Building and is negotiating a releasing contract for the feature pictures of the Van Curan Productions Corporation which are to be distributed on the state rights basis by the Clark-Cornelius Corporation of New York.

Negotiations are also being concluded for the world-wide distribution of a series of six five-reel pictures for the Milburn Morante Producing Company, the first of which, "Hill and the Baby," has just been completed and shipped.

KERN REPRODUCING PAINTINGS

George H. Kern has added James Rowe, Louis Troster, Joseph Ro, Meyer Oubakou, Jos. Stern, Nancy Brown and Ami Trotzmann to his staff of players staging the biblical episodes of "The Unfolding." Mr. Kern has also completed the reproduction of Dore's 'Jesus Healing the Sick'; Hofmann's "Christ in the Temple"; Dore's "Nativity" and Raphael's "Sistine Madonna" for "The Unfolding." During the coming week Dore's "Crucifixion" and the works of other notable artists will be reproduced.

Mrs. Ada Moss and her four weeks' old daughter are playing the roles of "The Madonna" and the "Child" in the biblical episodes of "The Unfolding."

Percy Marmont is creating the leading of "The Prince," to be called "Love Is Everything."

The Vera Gordon Dramatic Club of Milwaukee has been organized as a tribute to the art of Vera Gordon.

ON LOCATION

Harry Le Vere is progressing rapidly with the first production of his series of two-reel westerns, featuring Nevada Carson in the character of "Jimmie Del Mar," and shot near San Jacinto.

Freeman Smith, formerly purchasing agent for the Robert Brunton Studios, is now associated with the Arthur H. Gooden Studios in the capacity of assistant studio manager.

Exclusive rights to the only motion picture that will be made of Jack Dempsey in actual training for his coming fight in defense of his heavyweight crown against George Cenaparver have just been obtained by Page Exchange.

Josephine Miranda is playing a prominent role in "The Canyon Kid," starring Eileen Percy, at Fox.

Three-year-old Muriel Frances Dana has just finished an important role in the Life cycle cast production of "Hail the Woman."

With a carefully selected cast, William de Mille has started his new production, a Rita Weiman story.

The prima-donna, Estelle De Shon, formerly with the original De Koven Opera Company, will be the featured soloist during next week at the Grauman Broadway Theatre. She will be heard in the Santupza number from Mascagni's one-act opera "Cavalleria Rusticana" from the Sicilian tale of Giovanni Vergi, the romanza in which Santuzza tells her sad story of betrayal to Lucia, Turrida's mother. This song, "Voi lo Sapete," was a favorite of Calve, who always gave it a place on her song-recital programs.

TO MAKE COMEDIES

The Robert L. Fargo Productions will start filming the first of two one-reel comedies a month, starring Harry Mann. They will be released through the Arrow Film Corporation. The Kinema Bureau will do the casting and Miss Bob Hunter has charge of the scenarios. These one-reelers will be filmed at the National Studios.

COMEDIANS SIGN WITH ITALIAN-AMERICAN FILM CO.

"Shorty" Callahan and Steve Soldi have just signed a year's contract with the Italian-American Film Company to make a series of two-reel comedies. The first of the series entitled "Hans and Jans," will go into production shortly.

Goes South

Reginald Lyons whose latest photographic accomplishment is "Black Beauty," is on his way to Tulsa, Oklahoma, to fill an engagement with the W. M. Smith productions starring Franklin Farnum under George Holt's direction.

Mr. Lyons will film eight features for this company.

Marshall Neilan—through the courtesy of Gilson Willett—secured the services of Lucy Fox, Pathe Star, for the John Barrymore picture, "The Lotus Enter," now being completed.

Mr. George Rowan has accepted an engagement as assistant director to Fred Caldwell, who is now directing Catherine Loraine in a series of two-reel comedies. Mr. Rowan was formerly associated with Caldwell in musical comedy.

camera work is satisfactory. Real shots of

Mr. Meighan offers an excellent performance as Jim Montgomery alias Jack Nelson,

Lois Wilson manages the small but sympathetic leading feminine role, Molly

"HABIT"

Ambassador
First National presents the Louis B.
Mayer production, "Habit," featuring an all star cast headed by Mildred Harris, at the Ambassador this week. The story, which in itself is a highly inconsistent drama, is probably saved by a surprise dream finish, a method of smoothing over the improbable which has been out of practice just long enough to let this one "get by" with the public. We certainly hope, however, that our scenarists won’t get into the "habit" of utilizing this once-so-run-in-the-ground manner of winding up our future screen entertainment. Memories of the days when it was crammed down our throats on every hand as the usual course of procedure are too poignant to permit our taking another chance.
Photographically the production is satisfactory, but it was poorly projected when we reviewed it.
Mildred Harris fails to create any impression whatsoever as Irene Fletcher, a victim of the habit of luxury. She is neither fascinating nor wholesome in her work, and certainly she fails to offer a convincing characterization. Her interpretation in "The Woman in His House" was superior in every way to this one.
William Lawrence is well cast and quite consistent in the role of John Marshall, a young architect, whom Irene prefers finally to an expensive wardrobe.
Walter McGrail’s performance of Munson, the heavy, is the picture’s most commanding acting and the best that we have seen hina do. His personality is suited to this type of thing.
Emmett C. King is good as Fletcher, Irene’s bankrupt father, and Ethel Grey Terry plays Mary Chatres, Irene’s confidante.
Edwin Carewe directed the production for Mayer.
Miss Mayne Kraske of Omaha is seeing screenland at close range as the guest of the

AGAINT GERMAN FILMS

The Assistant Directors' Association of California passed the following resolutions at its last meeting, April 29th, held in its clubrooms in Hollywood:

1. That competent authorities have not made a peace with Germany, and that a state of war still exists between this country and Germany.
2. That during the war it was found to be a fact that the popular motion picture was the greatest means used to mold public opinion, and our Government did use this vehicle continuously during the great war.
3. That evidence has been conclusively presented by proper and competent authorities that this country is being propagandized by Germany not only to foment civil unrest, but to create a feeling of animosity between the citizens of this country and those of its allies.
4. That at this time American capital is being heavily invested in German film companies and the product of German film producing companies.
5. That motion picture films from these sources are being brought to the United States for exhibition purposes.
6. That these films are being exhibited and advertised not as German films, but as "European films."
7. The above mentioned American capital is now and has been for some time withdrawing its financial support from its American producing enterprises that it might participate in the exploitation of the cheaply purchased German films.
8. This withdrawal of financial support has been the cause of the closing of many motion picture studios in Hollywood and New York.
9. That this closing of studios has been the cause of thousands of men and women being thrown out of employment.
10. Two German films exhibited to date have taken for their subjects the fictionalized lives of two rulers of countries allied with the United States, thus holding up to ridicule those rulers and their countries in the eyes of the American people; therefore,

Be It Resolved, That the Assistant Directors' Association of California does go on record as being unqualifiedly against this most un-American practice of removing the resources of America to a foreign country, particularly Germany; and,

Be It Further Resolved, That Congress should be requested to take immediate action to stop this wrong, either by prohibition of trade with an enemy country or by enacting such tariff laws as will fully protect American industry from the encroachment of these German products which in no way assist in supporting the Government or citizens of this country; and

That copies of this resolution shall be sent to the President of the United States, members of Congress, the Governor of California, State Legislature, the Mayor of Los Angeles and the City Council, the Motion Picture Producers' Association, Motion Picture Directors' Association, and the general public.

Cecil B. de Mille will go on location shortly for scenes in his new production adapted from Leonard Merrick's story, "The Lady and the Laurels."

"Her Own Money," by Mark Swan, and scenarized by Elmer Rice, is to afford a starring vehicle for Ethel Clayton. Work will begin around the last of May. In all probability Joseph Henabery will handle the photography.

Wallace Reid left today for New York, where he will co-star with Elsie Ferguson in the George Fitzmaurice production of "Peter Ibbetson." Mr. Reid is expected to return in July to continue his work at the studio.

A Film Fair

Partly because we live in sunny and enterprising California, we know much about stock fairs, fruit exhibitions and such. Indeed we read constantly of them in the papers and note many billboard and placard mentions of them from month to month. Moreover, they have always occurred to us as being very commendable in that the custom of holding them was occasioned by the just pride of the men who, down through the years, have expended their energies unstintingly to perfect the various industries which are thus publicized, and the interest of these people in contributing all possible knowledge concerning their accomplishments to the education of the world. We also recognize the fact that affairs of this sort invariably prove highly profitable to the business of the communities in which they are held, since they attract thousands of open purses within their gates.

Yes, certainly such a practice is a good thing and one to be maintained; which brings us to a subject which we have had under consideration for some days. How much would a world's exposition of the motion picture, staged in Los Angeles, benefit our profession? How much would it mean in dollars and cents for the third industry to gain the attention of the world's big minds for its latest artistic and technical achievements in this manner?

With the Chamber of Commerce behind us, a position which it would occupy to its own great good, who can estimate the extent of the results?

Aside from the financial end, which would in itself encourage an attempt upon the part of the city, what would the moral influence of an undertaking of this kind mean to us, as partners in the furtherance of one of the world's foremost lines of artistic endeavor?

Thus far, we have never properly "cashed in" upon our popularity and we have repeatedly neglected good bets for the elevating of our position otherwise. Why? Still further, a thing of this kind, correctly put over, would bring together, probably at Exposition Park, the best that we can offer in the latest work of our actors, artists, writers, producers, photographers, etc., and the interesting materials with which they gain their effects. Even our contemporaries would learn much.

It is easy to discern why the commercial life of the city would back us in this, for a sufficient campaign would fill to capacity the incoming trains, not only with representatives of the various phases of picture making, but with hordes of tourists, fascinated with the idea of witnessing all filmland on display.

Very nearly as much wealth as poured into San Francisco during the Fair would inevitably be scattered in Los Angeles' midst.

We do not indulge in much impractical pipe dreaming, but this plan seems to us both feasible and vital. What about it?

A Producers' Split?

If one were to listen to current rumors, it would be learned that the foreign film question will quickly split the Motion Picture Producers' Association; that that organization is liable to contain three corporations after the break; that they will represent the capital which has been invested in the cheaper product from "over there," and that the rest of the original body, and by far the largest part of it, will in all probability then create an association of its own, with American production foremost in mind.

It seems that several companies who might otherwise have favorably considered following in the footsteps of their pioneering brothers in the corralling of this continental material, which is so attractively economical (at least to them), have been restrained, as it were, by the agitation against these films which has cropped up over the country. The Independents, of course, have always been opposed to this procedure, and many outfits are quite strenuously inclined to denounce the entire principle.

Indeed, it is not likely that those who have not yet become financially tied up with European producing concerns will do so now. Meanwhile, it is up to those who have, to fight it through or lose their investments.

All very plain, isn't it? At that, we marvel, as we undoubtedly will continue to do, at the financial antics of our very fascinating industry. In the words of the immortal ————, "You never can tell!"

The "Type" Again

This week's reviews brought to mind again the idea that some of our casting directors would do well to forget the word "type" and supply in its place the welcome noun "actor." The fact that a man looks a role certainly does not comprise cleverness on his part, to say nothing of its failure to provide even near-technique. A real actor fills any bill and is an economy to his company. Every man in his place, say we!
U. A. TO MAKE "PEG O' MY HEART"

That the United Artists plan to produce "Peg o' My Heart" with Laurette Taylor has been brought to light through an offer from Hiram Abrams, President of that organization, made to Marshall Nellan to handle the film adaptation of the Manners play.

The picturization of this play has involved a number of court actions resulting in the injunction awarded J. Hartley Manners, the author, preventing Famous Players-Lasky from releasing the motion picture version of the production. Several years ago, with Wanda Hawley in the leading role.

Recent activities indicate that United Artists have secured the motion picture rights and it is said that Laurette Taylor has been engaged to play the role which was here originally.

Mr. Nellan is prevented from accepting Mr. Abrams' offer on account of his own production, which is expected to keep him busy during the next six months.

"LORNA DOONE" IN PRODUCTION

After months of preparation, the designing of costumes and settings, the selection of locales, etc., Maurice Tourneur has started the actual filming of R. D. Blackmore's immortal story, "Lorna Doone," from the adaptation and continuity written by Catherine Red and Cecil Mummford.

Mr. Tourneur is reluctant to mention the names of the various players who will appear in the production, other than the fact that it will be an all-star production which is being cast as the story progresses.

BUSTER KEATON FIRST NATIONAL STAR

Associated First National's newest star is Buster Keaton, who has been making a series of comedies for Metro release.

Keaton is now in New York whether he was reported to have gone to make final arrangements for his marriage to Miss Natalie Talmadge. It is believed that he will continue to produce in Los Angeles.

Final scenes of "Serenade," the R. A. Walsh production, have been taken on the Brumton lot and the film is to be titled and edited simultaneously with the preparation of the script of "Kindred of the Dust," the next Walsh production.

Mirlam Cooper, who played the leading female role in "The Oath," and "Serenade," will also be the heroine in the next R. A. Walsh production.

FIRST KIRKWOOD FEATURE READY

The first of the Lasky productions featuring James Kirkwood has been shipped to New York and will be released shortly for a Broadway showing. "The Wise Fool," developed by Gilbert Parker's "Money Master," is the title of this Paramount picture, which was directed by George Melford.

PHIL HURN SCENARIST

Philip H. Hurn is responsible for the continuity of the current Rockett picture, "Handle with Care." The play was reconstructed for the screen from a Charles Belmont Davis story, "All the Men Who Would Die for Her."

WALLACE MACDONALD

Who Plays the Son in "The Sage Hen"
“THE EDUCATION OF ELIZABETH”

California

This is a great week for Paramount comedies. Even the California is showing one in the Zanuck produced production, “The Education of Elizabeth,” which stars Billie Burke. The scenario, which is by Elmer Harris, is not balanced although not particularly new or startling little affair, containing some excellent characterizations and good contrasts. The locations and sets are consistent and the photography adequate.

Billie herself is charming and altogether satisfies her performance of Elizabeth Banks. Her few chorus girl, who finds it necessary to “improve” that she may merit her blue-blooded but unromantic fiancé. She is delightfully awkward and slanty, and her old pep is present in large quantities. Her girlliness is quite remarkable.

Lumsden Hare is himself responsible for an excellently rendered part. He gives a bald-headed aristocrat Thomas Fairfax who, despite his family traditions and middle age, is a perfect gentleman in disposition and a hankerling for the bright light, manner in which he manipulates his two rowdy lady loves “gets over” his character to a fine degree.

Donald Cameron really plays the leading male part, Harry Fairfax, but his action is far from complicated. In fact it is unusually brief.

Edith Shayne is very good as Lucy Fairfax, the spinster, who educates Elizabeth only to be rejuvenated herself. Her work is always finished.

Frederick Burton in the role of her elderly suitor, Charles Middleton, is quite amusing. Harold Rosson, Helen Dahi, Kay MacClaud, and Frank Goldsmith are included in the list of players.

Edward Dillon handled the direction of this picture, which was made in the east.

“TWO WEEKS WITH PAY”

Clune’s

A Reprint picture which is somewhat more entertaining than that company’s usual exploitation, is this week’s release, “Two Weeks With Pay,” starring Bebe Daniels. At that, it doesn’t contain the valuable characterizations that “Ducks and Drakes” had to its credit, either in the way of story, characterizations or subtitles. It is a tale of a shop girl who poses as a moving picture star for several more or less worthy reasons, and is relieved by new angles. However, some artistic sets and ample photography add their share to the satisfaction of the piece.

Miss Daniels is seen in the role of Pansy O’Dowell, whose striking resemblance to Marie La Tour, a screen actress, lends her to borrow the latter’s identity for a space in the name of charity and romance. The star also plays the La Tour part which, while necessary to the plot development, involves little or no action. The former role Miss Daniels treats about as usual. It will please her followers.

The masculine lead is competently filled by Jack Mulhall, who does J. Livingston Smith energetically. This gentleman also has a heart, is a near death late in the production, and reveals little or no action. The former role Miss Daniels treats about as usual. It will please her followers.

Mr. Mulhall is certainly doing his share of Reallinking.

James Mason is excellently suited to his part,那个大坏蛋, the heavy. Mason has upon his list some of the “dirtiest” villains that we have seen celluoided.

Walter Hiers, George Periolat, Frances Raymond and Lucien Littlefield all handle supporting roles well.

Maurice Campbell directed the production.

“BURIED TREASURE”

Grauman’s Rialto

Famous-Players releases this week the Cosmopolitan production, “Buried Treasure,” featuring Marion Davies. It will have an indefinite engagement in this city. The play, which is taken from a story by F. W. Cameron.

Edith Shayne is good as Mrs. Vanderploven and Earl Schenck plays their son, George.

John Charles makes a spectacular villain out of Duc De Chavannes, to say the least. He gives the best performance of the vocal conversational pest that we have seen. He even sets our nerves on edge away down in the audience. We sympathized with poor Marion for most of his volubility was directed at her head.

George D. Baker both directed the picture and scenarized the story.

“THE TRAVELING SALESMAN”

Grauman’s

Enlivening indeed is Walter Woods’ adaptation of James Forbes’ laughable stage comedy, “The Traveling Salesman,” which was prepared for the consumption of Roscoe Arbuckle. In it a great deal is made of some of the play’s best parts; and much of the original amusing conversation is presented in the titles. The small-town atmosphere is realistic as are the country types.

The production, which will draw many who enjoyed the stage version, will be well photographed and cut.

“Fatty” is quite in his element in the title role. In fact, his get-up and personality could scarcely be more appropriately set than it is in the part of Bob Blake, a rotund drummer, whose line is woman’s love and whose heart is unaffected—for a while. Arbuckle’s physique is greatly in his favor in this instance. Of course he depends upon several of his old slapstick “gags” to obtain laughs but these are logical reasons. As a whole his performance is exceedingly enjoyable.

Betty Ross Clark makes of Beth Elliott the same demure, wholesomely capable village girl that we all have known.

Frank Holland and Wilton Taylor are the typical small town merchant, Royce, and Drury, the politician. It is easy to imagine them as opposing forces of anything desirable.

Lucille Ward as the well meaning busybody of Grand River, adds a comedy characterization that is included in the scenario addendum.

Richard Wayne and George Pearce are good in minor parts.

Joseph Henabery directed the picture for Paramount.

“OVER THE HILL”

Philharmonic Auditorium

Possibly because, after the ravings of our Eastern press brothers, we anticipated too much in Fox’s “Over the Hill,” we were greatly disappointed. We had expected a powerful drama comparable with “Way Down East,” chuck full of wonderful characterizations and presented in a technically irrefutable manner. Instead, we found a poor scenario in which a proper balance of comedy and pathos has not been struck. The picture which we have seen, far from ordinary performances, and a production which in spots is scarcely standard technically. This adaptation of Will Carleton’s superpathetic manner, will save one, far from extraordinary performances, and a production which in spots is scarcely standard technically. Anders Randolf inserts much of his forceful personality into the interpretation of WM. Vanderploven, the “pirate of Wall Street” and Pauline’s inescapable parent. William certainly is a discerning terror when one considers the meek position usually accepted with thanks by the modern American father of grown children. For a business man he also takes an unusual interest in the most casual movement of his family.

William Welch also does some good act.

GEORGE BEBAN ARRIVES THIS WEEK

After a transcontinental tour lasting over a period of six months, and taking in every important center in the United States and Canada, in behalf of the uplift of the silent drama, George Beban, character star of stage and screen, returns to Los Angeles this week.

An elaborate reception will be tendered the star upon his arrival, with Marco Helleman acting as chairman of the reception committee which will consist of important business men, social workers, and motion picture stars and executives.

Mr. Beban will make his appearance at the Kinema theatre, starting Saturday, May 21st, and from the stage of that playhouse will personally speak on the better and cleaner pictures topic in conjunction with the showing of his latest photoplay “One Man in a Million.”

Immediately after his Kinema engagement, Mr. Beban will re-open his studio doors and resume his production activities.

CENSORSHIP BEATEN IN 31 STATES

The states now most recently repudiating legalized censorship are Rhode Island, Michigan, Wisconsin and California. In Ohio, a measure further controlling the exhibition of pictures was defeated. Other states which have recently proposed censorship measures during the closing legislative season are: Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Washington and Wyoming. Censorship was also defeated in the District of Columbia. In New York the Lusk-Clay measure is still awaiting action of Governor Nathan Miller.

MORTIMER ENGAGED BY MAYER

Louis B. Mayer has made Edmund Mortimer, one of the largest and production executive, a member of his studio staff to do special work on his pictures as associate with the directors in charge. His first work will be on “The Question of Honor,” Anita Stewart’s vehicle.

In company with Wallace Fox, assistant director, Mr. Mortimer left recently for a mining camp north of Belden, California, where he will make arrangements for Mr. Carewe to film a number of exteriors.

Previous to joining the Mayer forces, Mr. Mortimer was production manager for Maurice Tournier.

PHOTOPLAYERS LEAVING FOR EAST TO SEE DEMPSEY-CARPENTER BOUT

Immediately upon completion of his work in the present Lois Weber production, Louis Calhern will leave for the East, to be present at the Carpenter-Dempsey fight. Mr. Calhern will be accompanied by Earle Hughes, Jack Dougherty, Philip Hubbard and Wilbur Higby, who are working in Miss Weber’s latest photoplay.

NEW BUILDING AT UNIVERSAL FOR SCENARIO DEPARTMENT

A new building is being erected at Universal City to house the scenario department. It will face Lankershim Boulevard and will be located between the hospital and the automobile entrance to the studio.

NEW WESTERNS IN PRODUCTION

At the Film Art Studios a series of twelve five-reel feature westerns is being produced featuring Lee Hill and Georgia Hopkins. Another company will produce a series of two-reel westerns, and casting for the first of this series will begin in a few days at the Russell-Griever-Russell Studios.

D. D. Hare, supervising director of the Film Art Studios, has just finished cutting "Pals of the West," a five-reel western written and directed by E. Middleton. These westerns will be released through Capital Film Co., Russell-Griever-Russell.

NORMA TALMADGE'S NEXT RELEASE TITLED

It will be released early in August.

JUANITA HANSEN STARTS SERIAL

The initial chapter of the Pathe serial productions, formerly titled "The White Elephant," which is being filmed in the Edna Ferber story of the same name, Mabel Julian Scott is playing the title role with all other cast in support.

Joe Martin, orang-outang star, appears as a bell-hop in his forthcoming animal comedy upon which he is now working. Harry Burns is directing while A. C. Stecker is handling the clever monkey-shiner.

NEW TITLE FOR STAHIL PICTURE

"Retribution" has been selected as the permanent name for the first of the John M. Stahl Productions. The picture, made by Mr. Stahl under the working title of "The Child Thou Gavest Me," was completed several weeks ago and is now practically through the cutting stage. It is expected that the finished negative will be ready for shipment East within the next few days.

Perry N. Vekroff is author of the story, which was scanned by Madge Tyrene.

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

"Oh Buddy!" has been selected as the title for one of the new comedies which William Beaudine is directing featuring Neal Burns. "Oh Buddy!" will follow in the new Christie series, "Nothing Like It," which is being made under the direction of Al Christie.

Frederic Sullivan is starting a new Gayety Comedy, which will be entitled "Standing Pat," for early release through Educational. This single-reeler features Teddy Sampson and Henry Murdock. The story is by Ward Caulfield.

BUTLER STARTS SECOND PRODUCTION

David Butler will commence work at once on his second feature production, the title of which is "Ring-Bang-Boom." It has been adapted to the screen from an Earnest Goldman story which ran in the All Story magazine recently.

The cast has not yet been selected but Fred J. Butler, father and director of the star, is busily engaged in this work at present. George W. Stout will retain his capacity of production manager and the picture will be made at the Robert Brunton studios where "Making the Grade," the first Butler special, was filmed.

NEW PRODUCING COMPANY

A new producing company, known as Zenith Features, Inc., has leased space at the Louis B. Mayer Studios, and has engaged Theodore Wharton to direct its first feature, "The Besetting Sin," from an original story by Louis Moran. The present plans of the company include the making of four big productions a year, which will be filmed with all-star casts. Production activities will start at once.

HAMILTON-WHITE COMPANY COMPLETING SOUTH-SEA ISLAND COMEDY

Work is progressing rapidly on the new Lloyd Hamilton-Jack White comedy at their Hollywood studio. This picture, which will be released by Educational, and is laid in the South Seas, is as yet unsold. Director Jack White will personally supervise the cutting.

Harry "Snub" Pollard, with his mother, recently motored to San Bernardino where they visited friends.

Frank Grandon is in the midst of his new feature, "The Guiding Spirit," which is in production at the National Studio.

THE PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

CHAPTER II

We started out last week to build a dramatic plot around a big, strong character and use these dramatic situations. Our character was a prospector and the situation was "His sacrifice—the love of a woman for the sake of his honor." This immediately put into action our process of deduction. The first questions which naturally arise are: "Who is the woman?" "How does she arrive in such an isolated section of the country?" "What chain of circumstances might lead up to the necessity of his sacrificing her love?"

If we are going to make a one or two reel story out of this, we might simply have the girl come in on a camping trip, with her father, or friends, and then involve her and the prospector in the situation which will lead up to the climax. Let us say, however, that we are going to make out of this, a five reel plot. That means that we must have more—which will bring on additional dramatic situations.

I happened to pick up a newspaper this morning and I saw that Eddie Rickenbackers is going to make a cross country flight in an aeroplane. This suggests an idea. Suppose that we use an aeroplane as a means of bringing the girl into the canyon occupied by the prospector. The plane might get lost in the clouds and, going into a tail spin, falls into the underbrush near the prospector's camp. This immediately brings up the question: "Why is the girl making a cross country flight?" "Is she alone, or is she accompanied by some one?" The idea of her being accompanied by some one suggests another character, who might be a young man—an aviator who is in love with her.

Ah! we have it. Let us use this young fellow as a means of bringing about the situation. The aviator (or the prospector called upon to sacrifice the girl to the aviator)? Here is a rule that I always follow in building up a plot: Never introduce an extra character excepting when it is necessary to place your principals in dramatic situations, in which they cannot place one another. Right here it looks as if we will have to introduce another character. His entrance will be logical, however. Let us assume that the girl has a very severe old father, who has obliged all along to her taking up aeronautics. Suppose the young aviator and the girl start on the cross country flight. The knowledge of the father—that they get separated in the clouds, and that after the girl falls the aviator returns to the town in the valley below. It is a very easy matter to see that there is going to be a decision of some kind in the girl's father learns what has happened. It would be intensely interesting and captivating. Do not confuse the need, that the young aviator restore the girl in a given period of time, on penalty of death. It is logical to assume that the young aviator would make a trip back over the mountains in search of the girl. Now we must have the young aviator fall into the hands of the prospector. The prospector, who has fallen in love with the girl, must not be found. That young fellow is in danger of losing his life if the girl is not restored. This places our prospectors right where we want him. If he conceals the girl, she will not be aviator fall to her father, the aviator will lose his life, and the girl will remain in the canyon for him. His honor is certainly involved in this situation.

Now we have simply worked out a mere idea for a dramatic plot. It is far from a finished story. The three principal reasons why beginners at the business of scenario writing fail to sell their stories is that they do not submit plots to the studios that are completely worked out. There is too much left for the salaried staff writer to do and the producer figures that if he has to pay his staff he wants to write the story that it is not worth while to buy it from the outside. In the old days, when studios paid twenty-five and fifty dollars for scenario plots, they were working out plots. Today, when they are paying from two hundred and fifty dollars up, they want plots worked out in detail.

In our next installment, we will apply our process of deduction to the task of further complicating the plot which have started, and build it up with more dramatic situations.

THE MARKET

I am still looking for some five reel society dramas, for the eastern producer, who has recently arrived in Los Angeles and who expects to start production about the first of November. He has decided upon one story, but will need five more.

A couple of calls have come in for some censor-proof, two reel westerns with a male leading. The leading man for this company is an ordinary young, red-blooded cow puncher type. They do not care so much about stock, but want to make him give their star a chance to act.

The producing company, which is in the market for a five reel farce comedy of the type of comedy which Fred Index is handling, wants to cast the picture this week because I made the statement in the last issue of Camera that it was supplied with stories. While it was forced to have its staff write a story, the company is still in the market and does not want us to cease our efforts to secure more material.

In the meantime, another company—a new one—states that it is in the market for the same type of stories.

Three different companies are immediately in need of stories featuring a blond ingenue of the tomboy type. What they want is something on the Constance Tolmadge order.

A scenario writer in San Francisco wrote me the other day and "bowled me out" for not giving the names of the producers who are in the market for the stories which I describe in these columns every week.

For the information of others who might feel the same way, I might say that Camera has been adopted as the official publication of The Photoplaywrights' League of America, and that the page which is edited by me is used by me in keeping our membership, the most of whom are subscribers, advised as to current market demands.

MEIGHAN AFTER EXTERIORS

Tom Meighan and the "Cappy Ricks" company leave for Boston today to secure exterior for the picture which Tom Forman is directing. The company includes Aline Astor. The ship-wreck will be filmed off the Maine coast.

TOURNEUR BUYS ORIGINAL

Maurice Tourneur has purchased "Coals of Fire," an original story by Malcolm Mollan. He will probably produce it after "Lorna Doone."

NEW PATHE SERIES

Pathe announces for early release a series of short reels to be known as Pathe Screen Studies. The releases will be composed of material which Pathe has been holding for some time. Colored pictures will be used in some of the issues.

DEVIL DOG DAWSON HOXIE'S NEXT

"Devil Dog Dawson" will be title of the June release of the second Jack Hoxie series, according to Arrow, who are handling these pictures in the independent field.

NEW RELEASE FOR FEDERATED

"Screen Snapshots," showing intimate touches of the daily lives of film stars, will be distributed by Federated during the next year.

NEW URBAN SERIES

Charles Urban is making a series of pictures which he will call "Modern Truths from Old Fables." They will be taken from the classics.

NEW B. B. HAMPTON PRODUCTION

Frank Hayes and Betty Brice have been added to the cast of "Heart's Haven," Benjaming B. Hampton's latest production, which starts this week. Elliott Nugent and Jean Hersholt will direct, with F. H. Sturgis and Gus Peterson as their respective cameramen.

WILLAT LEAVES FOR NEW YORK

C. A. (Doc) Willat, President and General Manager of the Willat Productions, Culver City, left Thursday with a print of "The Face of the West," Irvin V. Willat's latest feature for Hodkinson release. While there he will confer with the Hodkinson officials concerning the forthcoming Willat productions.

LeRoy Stone has completed the cutting of Irvin V. Willat's newest production, "The Face of the World."

George Bunny has completed his tenth comedy, "Why Worry?" for Goldwyn release, and will start immediately on another.

Joe Mitchell has been added to the scenario staff of the Hallroom Boys Comedies and will collaborate with Lex Neal, who is in charge of the scenario department.

Can You Qualify for Screen Authorship?

A national educational institution to train photoplaywrights by correspondence during spare time at home, has been established in Los Angeles to meet the needs of the motion picture industry.

This institution is directed by experienced writers and sponsored by Cecil B. DeMille, Thos. H. Ince and other prominent producers.

The field for photoplaywrights is lucrative and applicants drawn from every walk of life respond to the call.

Only persons naturally endowed with the gift of creative imagination and dramatic insight, however, can hope for success in this profession, and applicants must be selected accordingly.

All applicants, therefore, are requested to apply by mail to Frederick Palmer, Director of Education, for the Palmer Home-Test Questionnaire to determine their fitness to undertake this course of vocational training.

This questionnaire, scientifically compiled by Professor Malcolm Shaw MacLean, A.M., formerly a Northwestern University instructor of English composition, in collaboration with H. H. Van Loan, noted photoplay author-producer, is the first test of its kind ever adopted by an educational institution.

The purpose of this questionnaire is to help applicants determine the degree of creative imagination possessed by them and consequently their eligibility to enroll in this curriculum.

If successful in making this home test, the Palmer Plan of Instruction in Photoplay Writing is available to you.

Address all inquiries to

Director of Education

BRANDT LEAVES FOR THE EAST

Joe Brandt, president of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corp., who has been here for two months, going over production details on Hallroom Boys Comedies, Screen Snapshots, Star Ranch Westerns, and features which are released through his company, has completed his work, and leaves for the East today. He will make a few stops en route, to look over the state right situation in several of the larger cities.

SCHENCK FOREIGN PUBLICITY DEPT.

Beulah Livingston will sail on the Mauretania June 5th for a two or three months' trip abroad in the interests of Joseph M. Schenck. She will visit all the Associated First National's affiliated foreign exchanges in France, Italy and England.

Miss Livingston has organized a new department for the Schenck activities, a foreign branch of the publicity department, to be known as The Overseas Feature Service.

DREW POST PLANS SHOW

The S. Rankin Drew Post of the American Legion, in New York, to which a number of film men belong, will sponsor a show at the Hippodrome on Sunday night. D. W. Griffith and Frank Bacon will appear in a sketch called "Just Nothing." Others who have promised to appear are Dorothy Gish, James Rennie, Mae Marsh, Gordon Standish, Gilbert Rooney, Mae Murray, Wallace McCutcheon, Arthur Rankin and Betty Blythe.

Anna Q. Nilsson is on her way to Sweden for a vacation. She will visit Paris and London before returning to New York.

A. P. SELLS ORIENTAL RIGHTS

Associated Producers, inc., have closed a deal with the A. H. Woolcott Co., whereby that company secures distribution in the Orient of the company's first year product, Woolcott and a number of Japanese film men are now in Los Angeles. The first release will be "Lying Lips."

TAYLOR GOING TO EUROPE

William D. Taylor plans to take his vacation in Europe. He has been given a leave of absence until Aug. 1.

"Mid-Air" is the title of the fifth episode of the new Seitz serial, "The Sky Ranger," which is co-starring June Caprice and Geo. B. Seitz.

"The Heart Line," presented by Arthur F. Beck, as an adaptation of Gelett Burgess' celebrated novel of the same name, will be released by Pathé Exchange on June 5th.

W. F. Alder is taking a company of players to Tahiti to make a feature film, "The Lagoon of Desire."

It is said that Lloyd Ingraham will be the next director to have his own producing organization. He is completing his fourth production as director of Carter and Mrs. De Haven.

Jay Chapman, who for the last three years has been publicity manager for Benjamin B. Hampton productions and personal representative for Mr. Hampton in publicity matters, is leaving that organization to go into general personal publicity and scenario writing.

ing in the role of Dad Benton, and Vivienne Osborne shows possibilities as Isabella Strong, the little sweetheart of Ma Benton's "black sheep" son, Johnnie.

The last mentioned capacity is filled by Johnnie Walker, who does very little with it. The romance of the youngsters could have been played up more to advantage.

Noel Tearle is a good type for Isaac Benton as is Dorothy Allen for the part of his wife, but particularly in the case of the latter that ends it.

John Dwyer, Wallace Ray, Phyllis Diller, Louella Carr and Edna Murphy complete the adult cast. Their action affords them little opportunity. It is probably better so.

Frankly, we enjoyed the general work of the Benton family in the prologue more than that which was done later, save as we said before, Mrs. Carr's artistic rendition which improves from the start through each sequence. The little Bentsons are played by Sheridan Tansley, Stephen Carr, Jerry De- vine, James Sheldon, Rosemary Carr, and May Beth Carr. The name of the cleverest child in the cast, however, is not included in the program. She does Vivienne at eight years.

Although hampered by the material with which he worked, Harry Millarde must be credited with unusually careful handling of the picture.

Due both to the present state of underproduction and to its sentimental appeal, "Over the Hill" is bound to continue its good box office attraction. Looks to us as though it were time for someone to start a few real masterpieces.

Ogden Crane is leaving for a month's vacation in New York.

La Verne Swizer has a part in Anita Stewart's "Sowing the Wind" at the Kinema.

Ethel Clayton has recently returned from a trip to Yosemite Valley with her parents and brother.

Willard Lee Hall will enact a role with Douglas Fairbanks in his latest production, "The Three Musketeers."

The Border Feature Film Corporation has finished its first two-reel picture, called "The Only Girl," and will start on another Litchon story presently.

Jackson Reade, who has recently finished a part with Frank Mayo in "Three in a Thousand," has been signed by Lois Weber to play in her forthcoming production which is as yet untitled.

Gerald Duffy, who is responsible for the titles of Mary Pickford's latest picture, "Through the Back Door," is titling Katherine MacDonald's "Her Social Value" at the Ambassador Studio.

It is announced that Playgoers Pictures, Inc., will release several independently made productions through Pathé exchanges. The first of these productions is "The Butterfly Girl," a comedy-drama starring Marjorie Daw. It will be released on June 24th.

Anita Stewart has returned from her vacation trip to Coronado and is making preparations to start work on "The Question of Honor," her forthcoming Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction, which will be directed by Edwin Carewe.
Where to Find People You Know

Chick Morrison is cast in the new Ruth Roland serial.

Edith Lemmert is cast in the next Lois Weber production.

Anita Simon is playing a part with Ann Little at the Ben Wilson Studio.

Walter Hiers is playing the lead opposite Wanda Hawley in "The Clinging Vine."

Dorothea Wolbert will have a principal part in the forthcoming Hoot Gibson picture.

Fred Newmeyer, director of Harold Lloyd comedies, is contemplating a home in Culver City.

Blanche Sweet has recovered from her recent illness and is back at her Hollywood apartment.

Jack Nelson has been engaged to direct Lee Moran in his two-reeler comedy, "Robinson's Trousseau."

Lee Hile is playing the juvenile lead in "Pals of the West," being produced at the Film Art Studios.

Clara Horton will play opposite Hoot Gibson in his next picture, "The Mascotte of the Three Star."

Lee Kohlmar has been chosen to direct Gladys Walton in her next picture, "Christian of the Young Heart."

Norma Talmadge has an article in the June issue of the Pictorial Review called "What Do You Mean By 'Sex Plays'?"

Esther Ralston is playing the juvenile female lead in the five-reeler western, "Pals of the West," in production at the Film Art Studios.

Edward Burns is playing opposite Katherine MacDonald in her current associated First National production, "Sticks and Stones."

Edgar Lyons, brother of Reggie Lyons, is photographing his second five-reeler Western with Wm. Fairbanks and Marion Aye for the Western Feature Co.

"Bull" Montana is playing the part of Red Mike, a bootlegger, in "One Wild Week," by Francis Harman, the current Bebe Daniels comedy-drama for Realart.

Theodore Roberts is recovering from an illness and will shortly return to work in "Hail the Woman," which John Griffith Wray is directing.

Henry King is expect here from the East Coast where he has been during the vacation period at Robertson-Cole. He will again direct Pauline Frederick, with whom he has worked on three productions.

In line with the Morosco policy of using wherever practical, the members of the stage cast in the same roles in the picturization, John H. Elliott will play the priest, his original role, in Oliver Morosco's second film, "Slippery McGee."

The Actor in History

Even in this day of the theater's great popularity we are wont to resent what sometimes seems to be the public's inconsideration for the members of the profession which supplies the world with its demanded entertainment. At that, it is easy to realize that we have comparatively little to annoy us when we wander, in our literature, back to other ages when the actor had absolute social persecution to endure for the sake of his art. An encouraging point which is sometimes lost to sight, however, is the fact that the most truly educated of every century have not been unappreciative of the dramatic efforts and accomplishments of their various times. We quote the following from Sir Richard Steele in "The Tatler," issue of May 4, 1710:

"Having received notice, that the famous actor, Mr. Betterton, was to be interred this evening in the cloisters near Westminster Abbey, I was resolved to walk thither, and see the last office done to a man whom I had always very much admired, and from whose action I had received more strong impressions of what is great and noble in human nature, than from the arguments of the most solid philosophers, or the descriptions of the most charming poets I had ever read. As the rude and untaught are in no way wrought upon more effectually than by seeing public punishments and executions; so men of letters and education feel their humanity most forcibly exercised, when they attend the obsequies of men who had arrived at any perfection in liberal accomplishments. Theatrical action is to be esteemed as such, except it be objected, that we cannot call that an art which cannot be attained by art. Voice, stature, motion, and other gifts, must be very bountifully bestowed by nature, or labor and industry will but push the unhappy endeavorer in that way, the farther off his wishes."

"There is no human invention so aptly calculated for the forming a free-born people as that of a theater. Tully reports that the celebrated player of whom I am speaking, used frequently to say, 'The perfection of an actor is only to become what he is doing.' Young men, who are too inattentive to receive lectures, are irresitibly taken with performances. Hence it is, that I extremely lament the little relish the gentry of this nation have at present for the just and noble representations in some of our tragedies. The operas, which are of late introduced, can leave no trace behind them that can be of service beyond the present moment. To sing and to dance, are accomplishments very few have any thoughts of practicing; but to speak justly, and move gracefully, is what every man thinks he does perform or wishes he did."

"I have hardly a notion that any performer of antiquity could surpass the action of Mr. Betterton in any of the occasions in which he has appeared on our stage. The wonderful agony which he appeared in, when he examined the circumstance of the handkerchief in Othello; the mixture of love that intruded upon his mind, upon the innocent answers Desdemona makes, betrayed in his gesture such a variety and viscidness of passions, as would admonish a man to be afraid of his own heart, and perfectly convince him that it is to stab it, to admit that.

Kidding Ourselves Out of Jobs?

"Oh my gosh, No! We cannot consider anything but published stories" I wonder who started that darn fool idea. From the big producer, who ought to know better, down to the 2 by 4 promoter, who is trying to organize a company, we hear the same tune.

The motion picture industry is kidding itself out of a job. It has erected a pretty brazen image in the person of the "published story" and is worshiping the same with a loud beating of tom toms and cymbals. No one else is! The Gink we are all working for—the Public—has not indicated his preference for our "tin god."

The majority of the screen's biggest money-makers have not been "published stories." If a photo play which is based on a published story does make a lot of money, it is because the picture is a good one, and because more people have heard about the published story through the producer's press department, than have read it.

The more widely read the published story, the greater the number of disappointed theatre patrons, when the picture is shown. The film production may be immensely superior, but it never measures up to the imaginary picture in the mind of the reader. They come out of the theatre "cussing" the movies for spoiling their wonderful illusions. The Producer gets the blame for not interpreting the fiction masterpiece as written, but there is no censure for the novelist who has not written a story that can be screened—or has written one that has such a hackneyed or weak plot that some continuity writer has had to rewrite it.

I do not believe that there are half a dozen author's names in existence that mean anything on a pictureplay, to the public. What they want is a good story—well done. When we give them that, there is nothing for them to kick about—which can not be said of the "published story," no matter how much it is improved upon by the producer. It may be good and still be "rotten."

Fiction authors from all over the world have invaded the motion picture field with a rush. We have often wondered why the professional screen writers whom they are crowding into the discard, do not show a few bristles. We guess they are too busy listening to the after dinner speeches of the new-comers—and teaching them the art of photo-play-writing. Yezza, we're kiddin' ourselves out of a meal ticket—both producers and screen writers.

WYCLIFFE HILL.
NEILAN TO PRODUCE BYRNE STORY

Marshall Neilan has closed negotiation with Donn Byrne, the Irish author, for the picturization of his novel, “The Stranger’s Banquet.” Preliminary arrangements have been made for the handling of this adaptation and Mr. Neilan will collaborate with the author in adapting the story to the screen.

ITALIAN-AMERICAN STARTS WORK

A. Guard Hill, president and general manager, and Alexander Bodo, director and supervisor of production of the Italian-American Film Corporation, have engaged the services of Ted Ruggles to codirect their first three productions. This new company started producing Monday, May 23rd. The company is in the market for good two-reel situation comedies.

EAGLE CORPORATION TO EXPAND

The Eagle Producing and Finance Corporation, the organization sponsoring Marion Fairfax Productions, is about to enter the producing field on a large scale, according to an announcement yesterday afternoon. Several well known directors are said to be practically signed to put on a number of special pictures under the banner, and arrangements are now being completed for the financing by the Eagle Corporation of two individual organizations bearing the names of prominent figures in the producing world.

Marion Fairfax’s “The Lying Truth,” which is the initial release of the Eagle company, is now finished and arrangements for its distribution will be made within the next few weeks.

WILLIAM DESMOND PRODUCTIONS

William Desmond has formed his own company, “William Desmond Productions,” with headquarters at the Brunton Studios. Mr. Desmond will make four features a year, and has begun production on H. F. Loan’s “Fitchin’ Mad,” a modernization, with a Western setting, of Alexandre Dumas’ “The Three Musketeers.” The picture is being directed by J. J. Franz, who directed Mr. Desmond in “The Broadway Cowboy,” “The Parish Priest,” “Fandisk Gallagher,” and “The Illustrious Bandana,” and is under the personal supervision of Robert Brunton.

RUBYE DE REMER IN SERIES OF FROTHINGHAM PRODUCTIONS

Rubye de Remer has been signed for a series of feature pictures to be produced by Frothingham Productions over the Associated Producers’ releasing route. She commenced work this week in E. Phillips Oppenheim’s story, “Passers-by,” under the direction of Ted Siohan at the Brunton Studios. The name of the picture will be changed upon release, as a previous production by another author has already employed the title.

The Italian-American Film Corporation has completed its first picture under the supervision of Alexander Bodo (King), directed by Tom Regan, and production has already started on their next picture.

The new David Butler picture, “Bing-Bang-Boom,” will commence this week with Fred J. Butler directing. The cast is as yet incomplete.

AT METRO

Balzac’s “Eugenie Grandet” is the story that serves as the groundwork for the forthcoming Rex Ingram production titled “The Conquering Power.” John Seltz is in the camera work for this picture. Viola Dana, with her company, has returned from a three-weeks’ stay at Corondo Beach locationing, only to set off again for Altadena where remaining exteriors will be taken for her forthcoming picture, “The Match Breaker.”

RINEHART’S STORY IN PRODUCTION

Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix, who had the leading roles in Rupert Hughes’ photoplay, “Dangerous Curve Ahead,” are to play together again in Mary Roberts Rinehart’s first original screen story for Goldwyn, tentatively called “The Glorious Fool.” The screen adaptation was made by J. G. Hertz. The picture went into production last week under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd’s latest comedy, “I Do,” was shown in finished form at a Glendale theatre recently and will be shipped immediately to New York. Eddie “Do” Balon finished his Zeppelin comedy recently, the title of which is “The Non-Skid Kid.” The subject matter is concerned with probable happenings in 1943. Among others in the cast is “Sunshine Sammy,” who makes his first appearance in a Balon comedy. Production begins Monday on a comedy movie, the working title of which is “The Chink.” Harry “Snub” Pollard is working on a pic-nic comedy under the direction of Chaffee Parrott. Bobby Beinn is cameraman. Plans are now under way for Mr. Pollard’s next picture, which will be “shot” mostly in Catalina.

Gaylord Lloyd started production today on a London temenent story which is included in the “Lonesome Lake” series. Erie Kent is directing. The accounting department has moved to its new quarters on the second floor of the main building. The former office will be occupied by General Manager Warren Doane.

AT UNIVERSAL

King Bazett is preparing to shoot the finish of “The Gossamer Web,” Edith Roberts’ forthcoming screen play. All scenes, with the exception of the climax, have been filmed. The story was written by John A. Marsen. Production on the super-feature, “Pammy Herself,” which is being filmed by Tod Browning from the Edna Ferber story, is reaching its middle stretch. Mr. Browning is beginning the third sequence of “Pammy Herself,” with an entirely new cast of characters. The only character carried over from the second sequence is Pammy, played by Mabel Julienne Scott.

Carey is about to begin his first Jewel feature. The story, which is “Broads of Rainbow Ridge,” will be directed by Robert Thorne.

Elmer Sheely, art director at Universal, has just finished the final set for Von Stroheim’s production, “Poisonous Wives.” Billy Fletcher is being featured in another short-reeler titled “Tamale Mine,” under the direction of Ward Hayes. Eddie Polo is in the midst of a series of two-reelers of the romantic old West. Continued on Page 8

“WET GOLD”
California
Once again we are treated to a strenuous story of tender-hearted and intrigue. This time, however, the tale is a little wilder and more inconsistent than any of its forerunners have been, and, unquestionably, it is inferior from the standpoints of cast and dramatic balance. It is J. E. Williamson’s Goldwyn-distributed “Wet Gold,” which Ralph Ince directs. We find it best to the pictures credit the pictures credit that its under-water action is quite realistic, but when the “poor” cast gets out of its diver’s rigging, much falls away from the value of its work.

The introduction of the play is silly and the haphazard chase for hidden riches is quite ludicrous, since it lacks sufficient motive.
Mr. Williamson should leave his yarn spinning and scenario writing to someone who knows the screen and its feasible situations.

Mr. Ince also plays the part of John Cromwell, an enigma adventurer, who, although heading the cast, is not one thing to gain sympathy for himself. In fact, the role is irrelevant to the remainder of the characters involved. He does nothing to make it distinctive, and after all is said and done, it means nothing vital.

Thomas McGrane is evidently supposed to characterize Col. Hamilton, a hard put Southerner who is in pursuit of the illusive greenbacks. He exaggerates his action to an amusing degree and his make-up is that of a white knight amiable.

Aelsie Burr, an empty-faced, fuzzy-headed child, cavorts jerkily through the image as the Colonel’s daughter. She is present, we take it, that the villain may have some one further to rent his bestiality upon.

We were undecided as to whether we were expected to laugh or weep at Charles McNaughton, who is given credit in his introductory title for doing Chipman, “a specialist in women, horses and gambling.” We wondered if McNaughton were especially specialized in screen performing, but he surely has a rampant imagination.

The rest of those appearing in the pictures, John Butler, Harry McNaughton and Alicia Turner.
At that, there may be a real chuckle for the profession in this picture. It may remind many of days gone by.

COLLEEN MOORE AND WESLEY BARRY LOANED BY NEILAN FOR SPECIAL PRODUCTION

Colleen Moore, who appears opposite Mr. Barrymore in "The Lotus Eater," and who is under contract with Mr. Neilan, has been loaned to the Oliver Morosco company for the picturization of "Slippery McGee." Wesley "Primrose" Barry has also been loaned by Mr. Neilan to Warner Bros. for a screen version of "School Days."

STORM ENGAGES BEERY

Jerome Storm has added Wallace Beery to the cast of "The Rosary," on which he shortly will start production at the Selig-Rork studios. Lewis Stone, as previously announced, will have the leading role.

FORREST IN FRANK LLOYD PRODUCTION

Allan Forrest has been added to the cast of "The Man from Lost River," the Katherine Newlin Burt original screen story, which will soon go into production at the Goldwyn Studios under the direction of Frank Lloyd.

ADDITION TO MOROSCO SCENARIO STAFF

Miss Isabelle Johnson, who provided the scenarios for Charles Ray's "Peaceful Valley" and several of the Shirley Mason pictures, has joined the Oliver Morosco forces in the scenario department.

RECENT ENGAGEMENTS BY GERSION

Tenny Wright has been engaged to direct a series of two-reel comedies for the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation, whose studios are located in San Francisco. Production on the third comedy has already started. Harriet Laurel will play the lead and George Hollister has been engaged as cameraman.

Estelle Harrison plays opposite Gaylord Lloyd in his present "Lonesome Lake" story.

Edward Jobson is cast in Viola Dana's current production.

California Truman is occupying her new home on Highland Avenue.

Tom Gubbins is working with Cecil de Mille in the Oriental sequence of his new production, as yet untitled.

T. Roy Barnes is playing the male lead in "Her Face Value," a Reart picture which stars Wanda Hawley.

Darrell Foss is playing opposite Edith Roberts in "The Gossamer Web" at Universal City.

George H. Kern has engaged Henry Knollmiller, laboratory expert, to assist him in editing "The Unfoldment" upon its completion.

Pete Gerald, Phil de Esco and Harry Ellis Dean appear as the three wise men of the east in "The Nativity of the Christ" for the biblical episodes of "The Unfoldment."

Carl Jensen, L. Montrose, James Musso, W. Moultin, Ed. Ellemental and James King have been added by George H. Kern to his list of players who are depicting the scenes of Christ before Pilate for "The Unfoldment," an original Kern story.

GEORGE ADE TO TITLE "THE LOTUS EATER"

Marshall Neilan has signed George Ade, humorist and author, to handle the titles of the John Barrymore picture, produced by Neilan in New York and Florida recently.

McCORMICK WESTERN REPRESENTATIVE FOR FIRST NATIONAL

Word has been received from New York that John E. McCormick has been appointed western representative of Associated First National Pictures, Inc. McCormick will return to Los Angeles within the next few days and make his headquarters in the Pacific Finance Building. Prior to his promotion McCormick was western press representative for Associated First National.

NEXT WEBER PICTURE TO HAVE CUBIST EFFECTS

Lois Weber has engaged Frank D. Oram, art director of "Kismet," "Hypocrites" and "For Husbands Only," to design the sets for the picture she is now producing.

Pat O'Malley is cast as the juvenile in Oliver Morosco's "Slippery McGee."

Edith Yorke has a part in "Slippery McGee," featuring Wheeler Oakman.

Casson Ferguson will play opposite May McAvoy in her forthcoming picture for Realart.

Stuart Holmes is cast for an important part in the Tod Browning special production, "Fanny Herself."

Earl Schenck is selected for an important role in the Edna Ferber story, "Fanny Herself," being produced by Tod Browning.

Alec B. Francis will have an important part in the new picture starring May McAvoy at the Reelart Studios.

William Walsh, character actor, recently seen in "Over the Hill" and "Reputation," is now appearing in an important role with Edith Roberts in "The Gossamer Web."

Harold Lloyd will be supported in the earlier scenes of his new comedy by Mark Jones, Charlie Stevenson, Wallie Howe, George Rowe and Roy Brooks.

Ethel Breadt and Mark Jones will have the principal roles in the new Eddie "Ike" Roland comedy soon to go into production at the Hal E. Roach studios.

Willard Louis, Ernest Shields and Peggy O'Neill have been engaged by Webster Cullison for his second "Philo Gubb" story, "The Stolen Umbrella."

DeWitt C. Jennings, impersonator of policemen on the stage and screen, has been cast in "The Poverty of Riches," Reginald Barker's current production for Goldwyn.

William Wright has been engaged by the Italian-American Film Corporation to play in their productions under the direction of Tom Regan and Alexander Bode.

LIBRARY BOND CAMPAIGN HAS ASSISTANCE OF STUDIOS

Public spirited motion picture producers and exhibitors have acted to assist the library bond campaign which will come before the voters on June 7th. At the suggestion of W. S. Smith, president of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, and general manager of Vitagraph, the actual condition of the present public library have been made into a reel of film. Exhibitors throughout the city will show the pictures on their screens the week before election.
Co-operating with Vitagraph in the production of the reel were Universal, Goldwyn, Metro and the Ince Studios. The titles were donated by the Jacobsen-Meyer Company.

The picture was photographed during a typical rush hour in the library and shows the congestion in all departments, notably the juvenile room where only a few children can be accommodated.

WALTER HIERS VACATIONING

Walter Hiers is vacationing until June 9th, when he will co-star in the new Debe Daniels picture. He is taking advantage of the opportunity to make personal appearances at theaters throughout the South, especially in Atlanta, Ga., Chattanooga, Tenn., and Memphis, Tenn., in connection with the showings of "Oh, Lady, Lady," "Two Weeks with Patsy" and other Realart productions of Debe Daniels and Wanda Hawley.

PAASDENA COMMUNITY PLAYHOUSE ASSN. TO RESUME ART COURSES

Announcement of the resumption of the summer art colony in Pasadena, June 27th, may interest many of the members of the Pacific Coast Institute of Fine Arts, founded by the Pasadena Community Playhouse Association, to elevate public amusement standards by disseminating technical knowledge concerning the allied arts of the theatre.
Dr. Richard Burton, educator, author and former president of the Drama League of America, will head the faculty and conduct a course in practical writing. Other instructors will be Frayne Williams, Hope Knapp, Arthur Farrell and Louise P. Sooy. Courses will be offered in dramatic writing, play construction, costume design, dramatic dancing, interpretation, pantomime, and community music.
The Playhouse Association is a civic enterprise and hopes that the summer art colony will be used to school for training community directors. The session continues six weeks. During the last week a production of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" will be given by the art colony, giving them practice in applying the principles they have learned.
A prospectus containing detailed information concerning this activity will be sent to anyone requesting it of the Secretary of the Community Playhouse Association, Pasadena, Calif. Six free scholarships are offered.

CHANGES IN HAMPTON PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT

King Young succeeds Jay Chapman as personal press representative for Benjamin B. Hampton. The office of publicity manager for Mr. Hampton's producing companies, Great Authors Pictures, Inc., and Zane Grey Pictures, Inc., which Mr. Chapman also held and is now vacating, has not yet been filled. Harry Hammond Beall, well known publicist, has charge of local publicity on pictures showing in Los Angeles. The changes took place this week.

FIRST ISSUE COMPLETED

The first issue of Federated Screen Snapshots has been completed by its producers, Jack Cohn and Louis Lewyn, and after final editing, is now ready for circulation to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for release.

BUTLER RECEIVES STAGE OFFER

David Butler has recently refused an offer to appear in a featured role in a Broadway production scheduled to open the first of the eastern theatrical season.
Mr. Butler did not entertain the offer insomuch as his picture work will keep him busy for many months to come. He is scheduled to make a series of five-reel features.

KIRKWOOD WRITES A BOOK

James Kirkwood is supplying the material for a little book entitled, "I Have Directed—and Directors Who Have Directed Me." The stellar list includes such personalities as John Barrymore, Mary Pickford, Antonio Moreno, Lionel Barrymore, Dorothy Gish, Blanche Sweet, Owen Moore, Jack Pickford, Thomas Meighan, Billie Burke, Henry B. Walthall, Mary Milles Minster and others. Among the directors who figure in the Kirkwood narrative are D. W. Griffith, Marshall Neilan, Allen Holubar, George Mefford, Wesley Ruggles and Allen Dwan.

AT GOLDWYN

Will Rogers has finished "A Poor Relation," under the direction of Clarence Badger. Sylvia Jumper, who played opposite the star in "Looking for Romeo," played the leading female role.

The photoplay on "The Glorious Fool," an original screen story by Mary Roberts Rinehart, for which J. C. Hawks wrote the continuity, was finished last week under the direction of E. Mason Hopper. Richard Dix and Helen Chadwick portray the leading roles.

"From the Ground Up," an original screen story by Rupert Hughes, will soon go into production as a starring vehicle for Tom Moore.

Director Frank Lloyd is at present in the redwood country of Northern California, picking locations and building a camp where most of the scenes will be filmed for "The Man from Lost River," the Katherine Newlin Hurt original screen story which is soon to go into production.

AT REALART

Wanda Hawley starts work presently on her next feature, "Her Face Value." The story is by Percy Heath, based on a Saturday Evening Post story by Earl Derr Biggers, "The Girl Who Paid Dividends." Mary Miles Minter has completed "Her Winning Way" under the direction of Joseph Henabery.

May McAvoy has started work on a new picture under the direction of Frank O'Connor. It is an adaptation by Edfrid Bingham, of "A Virginia Courtship," the old stage success by Eugene Pressey.

Elmer Harris is cutting and titling his original photoplay, "Her Study Oak," which Wanda Hawley has just completed. This was filmed under the working title of "The Clinging Vine." Hector Turnbull is also busy cutting and titling his story, "Every Story For Sale," a new May McAvoy picture directed by Frank O'Connor.

CARL LAEMMLE ANNOUNCES NEW COMEDY COMPANIES

After taking stock of the short feature situation as presented in the reports of last year, Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, has decided that next year's plans shall include an unusual number of single and two-reel comedies. In addition to the single-reel Star comedies, which Ward Hayes has been turning out for the past few months, and which will be continued, Mr. Laemmle announces several new companies of two-reel proportions.

It is his intention to add another two-reel comedy release to the weekly program. The Centuries will continue as heretofore, one two-reel release each week, featuring in rotation Harry Sweet, Charles Dorey and Brownie, the Century Wonder Dog. Also the Joe Martin comedies will continue and will be directed by Harry Burns, assisted by A. C. (Cutley) Stocker, Joe's trainer. D. W. Griffith returned recently to the stage after many years' absence at a benefit performance at the New York Hippodrome. He and Frank Bacon, star of "Lightnin," presented a dramatic sketch.

Frank Lacktime, playing an Indian "heavy" in the Ruth Roland serial now under production at the Hal Roach Studios, has made a translation of the Arabian classic "Esma," which he has put into an eight-reel scenario. The script is a drama on the dimensions of "Risimet." Mr. Lacktime is also translating other Arabian stories and poems for a big eastern publishing firm.

AT CHRISTIE'S

"Spiking the Spooks," a new Vanity Comedy, starring Earl Rodney and Irene Dalton, is in production. The story is by Rose Loewinger, and is being directed by Frederick Sturhann.

At Christie has finished the first comedy in the new series of Christie Comedies, to be released through Educational exchanges. The first under the new contract is titled, "Nothing Like It."

A farewell dinner was given recently at the Ambassador Hotel by Arthur S. Kane in honor of Harold Lloyd, Mildred Davis and Hal E. Roach. Among the guests were Besie Love and her mother, Gus Inglis and Miss Grace Inglis. Mr. Kane, having held various conferences with Charles Ray, whose films he sponsors, has proceeded to New York.

CHAPTER III.

We decided last week that we had developed a very good idea for a dramatic plot but that we did not have enough story for a five-ree picture. Therefore it is up to us to build it up. For lack of space I will not recount the idea that we have developed, but I suggest that those of my readers who are following this little experiment in plot-building, secure the last two numbers of Camera—if they have not already done so.

So far, we have not decided who is to be the villain in the story. The idea of picking on the young aviator does not appeal to us. If our prospect is the big man that we are going to try to paint him, the aviator is not worthy of his steel. Besides, we are going to have the girl in love,—(or she to think that she is) —with the aviator, and it would reflect on her to be in love with the villain.

We want to introduce a real "heavy" whose low-down nature will serve as a good companion to the character of our hero, and one who can put up a whistle of a fight with him. A good hand-to-hand fight between the villain and hero is always exciting and interesting, particularly in the type of outdoor story which we are writing, and in which the primitive side of man can be used to picturesque advantage.

Let us try the introduction of the villain in the person of another prospector who comes into the canyon and takes up a claim across the ranch. This manner of conflict are we are going to establish between the two? is the next question that our process of deduction suggests. It could involve the girl—but if we are going to establish the new-comer as the villain, he should be planned as such before the arrival of the girl. This would have a tendency to heighten suspense for the reason that as soon as the girl does arrive there is a fine promise of something exciting happening down as the villain learns that she is present.

Whatever the nature of the conflict between the hero and the villain, it will also serve to the man that build up the character of the hero. We must bear in mind that it is not sufficient to merely say that a man is brave, sympathetic, magnanimous, or honor-bound to hate him as such. And, bear in mind that this action, whatever it is, must have some direct bearing on the plot, and not be extraneous, or it would read an amateur script the other day, in which the author had written in three hundred feet of action and introduced an extra character for the mere sake of changing over what he thought was a clever spoken title for the leading man.

I believe I mentioned in the first installment of this series that there were two prospectors who were bosom friends back in the isolated canyon where I received my inspiration for this story. Suppose that even before the arrival of the girl on the scene that there is a fight on a cliff between the hero’s friend and the villain, that the hero is kept busy helping his friend, and that the villain throws the friend over the cliff a thousand feet below. The hero arrives and grapples with the villain, finally overcoming him. Although tempted to throw his adversary over the cliff, he resists and casts him aside with a warning never to cross his path again.

In the action described above we not only have some great melodrama with thrills, but we have strengthened the character of our hero. The original pathos as he contemplates the bruised body of his dead pal later, when he hears the crash of the plane and discovers the unconscious form of the pretty girl in the wreckage.

Now, we have built up the plot considerably. Still it is far from finished. The story has just begun to move rapidly when we bring the man and the girl together. In our next installment we will add some more material, and knit the plot more firmly together.

STORIES WANTED

We’re looking for a “wait” story for a wistful little ingenue. Strong characterizations are desired in the plot and the romantic element may be only incidental.

Several companies are in the market for comedy stories, or something of the madcap kind of vehicle such as would be appropriate for Bebe Daniels.

There is a chance to make a quick sale of a strong dramatic plot in which the woman star is given a chance to do some emotional acting with some good comedy relief.

Another company wants a combination Charles Ray and Douglas McLean story.

CLARA WILLIAMS REGAINS HEALTH

Mrs. Reginald Barker (Clara Williams) is celebrating her recovered strength after an illness of six months.

MARY MILES MINTER DEPARTS FOR EUROPE

Mary Miles Minter, having finished her current production, “Her Winning Way,” for Realart, will vacation for two months in Europe. Mrs. Charlotte Shelby (her mother) and Miss Margaret Shelby (her sister) will accompany the star.

FRANK BORZAGE PERFEECTING NEW PHOTOGRAPHIC EFFECT

A new photographic effect whereby colored motion pictures may be taken in soft focus has been practically perfected by Frank Borzage, the director of “Humoresque.” He is now directing Seena Owen and Matt Moore in “Back Pay” for Cosmopolitan.

“Bud” Osborne is provided with one of the leading supporting roles in the new Ruth Roland serial.

Louis B. Mayer has signed Bess Merydeth, scenario writer, to prepare the continuity on the next John M. Stahl production.

Mary Anderson, who is now playing with Charles Hay, has signed to do a series of pictures for the recently organized Enterprise Productions, Inc., under the direction of Scott Dunlap. The pictures will be distributed through Associated Photoplays, Inc., as “The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry”

"DON'T CALL ME LITTLE GIRL"

Culpe's Broadway

Once in a while Realart comes along with a clever farce, some one of its occasional ingenuity. This week's release, "Don't Call Me Little Girl," is one of these. It is a fast moving comedy with many intriguing situations and an ultra modern theme. Moreover, the cast which supports the star, Mary Miles Minter, takes complete advantage of its various characters for characterization and an unusual number of these opportunities present themselves as the plot unravels. Edith Kennedy, scenarist the original, which is by Catherine Cushing.

Miss Minter must be credited with a spirited performance of Jerry Doubleday, a precocious boarding school flapper, who steals her aunt's flannel, after providing that exceedingly shocked individual with a far more suitable husband and petrifying the entire family with her slyly maneuvering. She meets, disengages, woos and wins her man within twenty-four short hours. Miss Minter accomplishes her action in better than usual form.

Jerry Patrick makes a good foil for the flighty Jerry as Monty Wade, the deliberate, settled flanacee of the former old maid aunt. He awakens quickly, as bachelors are wont to do when real romance puts in an appearance, however, and falls heavily for the raffish child. His work thoroughly satisfies.

Some excellent characterizing is done by Ralph Stonehouse, who plays Joan Doubleday, the old-fashioned girl who has enjoyed a ten-year-old engagement only to have husbands shifted for her overnight. Due to the snap theories of her disquieting niece, Peter Flagg, the older woman's real mate, is discovered and encouraged. The resultant bloom brightens Peter is successfully played for comedy by Edward Flanagan.

Winifred Greenwood fits into the part of Mrs. Doubleday, Jerry's merry widow mother, with customary ease. Florence Middely completes the cast in a minor role. Joseph Henabery handled this production.

"ONE MAN IN A MILLION"

Kinsela

George Beban, in the countrywide tour personally presenting his independent photoplay, "One Man in a Million," with this week's Los Angeles engagement. In conjunction with the picture he gives a selection from his well remembered play, "The Sign of the Rose," which as much as anything seems to be attracting the audience and winning their applause.

The film production which Beban both wrote and directed is a wholesome story of a tender-hearted Italian who loves the world and a little waif whom Fate throws in his way. Tears and laughs it has a plenty and a couple of novel twists which lend much interest to the thread of progress.

The inimitable interpreter of Italian roles is at his best as Lupin Delchino, a generous "wop" who provided with the means (he acquires the position of city dog catcher), indulges all the helpless creatures who cross his path. His love for the Belgian orphan and his kindness to, and imaginary attachment for, the child's supposed mother, present situations filled with heart interest which are not found to spoil the impression. We'd wager our powder-puff that the obvious scenes were hold-overs from the terrible Italian effects employed in "Unfamiliar Furniture" which are only adviced with occasional glimpses of them.

Francella Billington enact Miss Althea, the daughter of a more than disillusioned but artistic family, both as a young wife and twenty years later. She lends the part much naturalness and a decided bit of fascination.

Little George Beban, Jr., is a lovely baby and proves himself a performer of ability with his cherubic work as Lapine's adopted child. The diminutive infant finds a mother who temporarily mistakes him for her own, only to exchange her for Flora Valentine. He recognises his true love, and "mamma's" real son puts in an appearance.

Irene Rich makes Charlotte Maureveau, the Belgian mother, wholesomely beautiful. Much more should have been done with Clyde Hartley, the detective suitor of Madame Maureveau. The part is quite inadequately done by Lloyd Whitlock, who fails to recognize the points allowed him.

George Williams and Jennie Lee provide an atmospheric touch in the chain of events, with their work as Mr. and Mrs. Koppel, trainers of thieves.

Ward Boteler in a minor role ends the list of actors in this picture, which Robertson-Cole is releasing.

Beban's unassuming type of work will always please those who are attracted by it at all.

"HEARTS ARE TRUMPS"

Talty's

Rex Ingram has made a very entertaining screen play of the old English melodrama, "Hearts Are Trumps," which is a present Metro release. His direction is as careful as his Mathis' scenario, resulting in a fairly consistent production.

The appealing story has to do with a man who does not forget; with the romance of their convert-bred daughter and with a persistent lord whose forte is wrecking love affairs. It has some strong moments.

A few excellent miniatures are used in Alpine avalanche scenes, and it is a real pity that even two or three faked shots should have spoiled the impression. We'd wager our powder-puff that the obvious scenes were hold-overs from the terrible Italian effects employed in "Unfamiliar Furniture" which are only adviced with occasional glimpses of them.

Francella Billington enact Miss Althea, the daughter of a more than disillusioned but artistic family, both as a young wife and twenty years later. She lends the part much naturalness and a decided bit of fascination.

Current Reviews

Frank Brownlee proves Miss Billington's equal in versatility with his work as Michael Cain, Lady Altrac's husband, at the ages of thirty and fifty. In the role of the Altrac gamekeeper, who becomes cynical after his wife has been snatched away from him under circumstances with which he is unacquainted, Brownlee is excellent. Later he makes his instinctive attraction to his unknown daughter very beautiful.

Alice Terry seems quite sincere and is fittingly cast in the part of Dora Woodberry, who although the daughter of the two, believes herself to be the orphan ward of Lady Altrac.

Joseph Kilgour does his "dirtiest role" with the mocking heaviness. Lord Burtford. Those who follow him know how correctly despicable he can make himself, with his polished screen technique and his deliberate movements.

Lord Altrac, an inveterate gambler, is well portrayed by Winter Hall. It is not often that we see him doing unsympathetic work, but as might be expected, he perfectly satisfies.

Brinley Shaw does well the small part of Fell, a questionable money lender, and Burford's half-brother.

Norman Kennedy, as Dora's American artist sweetheart, and Edward Connelly, as her godfather, complete the cast.

"Hearts Are Trumps" is a Metro-Screen Classics offering.

worst of daggers, jealousy. Whoever reads in his closet this admirable scene, will find that he cannot, except he has as warm an imagination as Shakespeare himself, find any but dry, incoherent, and broken sentences: but a reader that has seen Betterton act it, observes that there could not be a word added: that longer speeches had been unnatural, nay, impossible, in Othello's circumstances. The charming passage in the same tragedy, where he tells the manner of winning the affection of his mistress, was urged with so moving and graceful an energy, that while I walked in the Cloisters, I thought of him with the same concern as if I waited for the remains of a person who had in real life done all that I had seen him represent. The gloom of the place, the faint lights before the ceremony appeared, contributed to the melancholy disposition I was in; and I began to be extremely afflicted, that Brutus and Cassius had any difference; that Hotspur's gallantry was so unfortunate; and that the mirth and good humor of Falstaff could not exempt him from the grave. Nay, this occasion in me, to look upon the distinctions amongst men to be merely scintical, raised reflections upon the emptiness of all human perfection and greatness in general; and I could not but regret, that the sacred heads which lie buried in the neighborhood of this little portion of earth in which my old friend is deposited, are returned to dust as well as he, and that there is no difference in the grave between the imaginary and the real monarch. This made me say of human life itself with Macbeth:

"Tomorrow, tomorrow, and tomorrow, Creeps in this stealing pace from day to day, To the last moment of recorded time! And all our yesterdays have lighted fools To the eternal night! Out, out, short candle! Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player That struts and frets his hour upon the stage And then is heard no more."

Medical Freedom.

He is Your Friend.

Here is His Platform:

I stand for a clean, moral and safe Los Angeles—a City in which the business men are protected from the greed of special interests, and where all may pursue health, prosperity and happiness in accordance with law.

LEGISLATION
I am unalterably opposed to freak, foolish or fanatical laws, and I shall veto legislation of this kind whenever presented to me.

MEDICAL FREEDOM
In an interview published on February 3, 1921, I publicly declared that I stood for medical freedom—that is to say, the right of the individual to choose for himself and his family the method of healing which he deems most efficient. I stand for this now. I believe that medical freedom is equally important with political and religious freedom, and these are guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

GOVERNMENTAL EFFICIENCY
I am opposed to the introduction of party politics in City affairs, and shall at all times appoint only those who can render wise and efficient service to the city regardless of political affiliations. I shall continue to enforce the laws and administer the government of this city upon an economical and efficient basis.

Equity Against Hamon Film

The following resolution was passed by the Executive Committee of the Actors’ Equity Association, May 30th, 1921:

“Moved, seconded and carried unanimously that this committee go on record as being opposed to the making of a motion picture which is to feature Clara Smith Hamon.”

Both the Equity and the Los Angeles Laboratories which have refused to develop or print the Hamon film, are to be highly commended and thanked.

We would personally like to add that any professional player, director or technical man who considers an engagement with this notorious woman's company is, in our estimation, disloyal to an industry which is generally doing its utmost to create wholesome and instructive entertainment for the consumption of the world. Further, he is a detriment to it.

Who is Clara Smith Hamon to either say, “I am a capable actress” or “I will make a motion picture.”? Let us cast off some of these obnoxious hangers-on who expect to cash in on their infamy via the screen. They can do us nothing but harm.

Congress Plays Up

The interesting and vital letter below was written to George Arliss by John Tilson, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives at Washington, in answer to the profession’s opposition to foreign made photoplays. Surely it shows that what our industry goes after earnestly and concentratedly, it will obtain:

“My dear Mr. Arliss:

“In response to your letter of the 12th instant I have to say that the danger to the motion picture industry referred to by you is a real one and one which the subcommittee of which I happen to be chairman has wrestled with in an effort to find a remedy. A substantial ad valorem duty upon American valuation is probably the best we can do, and this it is our purpose to recommend to the full committee.

“Very truly yours,

“JOHN Q. TILSON.”

Are You Voting?

Tuesday, June 7th, you will have voted nine times for a motion picture representative in your city council when you have cast a single shot vote for Edward Roberts, the industry’s candidate. Remember, please, that united, our profession has never lost an issue; but its negligence has often brought failure, even disaster, upon itself. What is your choice?

A Challenge

Los Angeles, Calif., June 2, 1921.

Miss Fanchon Royer:
Editor “Camera!”
Hollywood, Calif.

My Dear Miss Royer:

In the course of my publicity work for the General Moving Picture Industry I have come into contact more or less intimately with nearly every important newspaper in the country recently, and have established myself before their editors as being somewhat of an authority upon matters pertaining to this field. In view of this fact I am repeatedly receiving inquiries and communications from publications all over the United States and Canada asking me various things concerning “Camera!” Among these many inquiries I have been impressed by the oft-repeated quiz, “Who is F. R.?”—“Who is the author of the brilliant editorials appearing over the signature ‘F. R.’”?—“Why don’t you smoke out ‘F. R.’ of Camera!” and give us a chance to see what the animal looks like who can write the splendid dope he or she does”—“Can you get us a series of special articles from your mysterious ‘F. R.’ of the “Camera!” on present movie conditions”—etc., etc., etc.

Frankly, it becomes wearisome to me when I find that their attention for all my efforts, passes over my shoulder completely, ignores me and centers on an impersonal, vague and indefinite thing represented only by angular and unlovely initials, when they might be centering this same worship upon me. I’ve even seriously considered mutilating and twisting my own initials and claiming the title myself on a “printer’s error” of “pied-type,” but I’m afraid they’d trap me the first time they asked me to duplicate your work.

Therefore I am writing you for a double purpose, both for your own sake and for my sake, as well that I may be saved from temptation, and I am taking the liberty of suggesting that you come out from under your “pen name” and “tell the cock-eyed world” (cock-eyed with curiosity evidently) just who you are. You’ve earned it. I hate to admit it out of my professional jealousy, but I have to. The fact that your editorials have been repeatedly reprinted by such standard and sterling journals as “The Literary Digest” and magazines of that type proves your justification and sets the seal of merit upon the splendid work you have performed. So be a sport in the future and “come out of it”—sign your full name and give the world a chance to meet and know you for your own charming personality as well as they have learned to know you and respect you for your brilliant mentality.

And while I am about it there is another reason why I’d like to see you do this. I’d like to show the rest of the Motion Picture Industry here in Los Angeles that “a prophet has no honor in his own country,” that in their smug, supercilious attitude of ignoring “Camera!” or at least patronizingly naming it merely as “one of our local

J. STUART BLACKTON PRODUCING IN LONDON

Commodore Blackton has transferred his activities from New York to London, and is making ready to start on the first of a series of four photoplays presenting the English beauty, Lady Diana Manners, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland. The first of these plays will be a drama of the Charles II period, from an original story by Felix Orman. The art work is in charge of Alcom C. Whiting, and Commodore Blackton will personally direct.

COMPANY FOR DISTRIBUTION OF PICTURES IN ORIENT

The Orient Pictures Corporation, a local organization, headed by A. H. Wellcutt, has been formed to handle the foreign rights of first-class productions, to be distributed through the Orient by a system of exchanges operated by American methods under the supervision of American representatives. Exchanges will be established in Tokyo, Hongkong, Bombay, Manila, and other Eastern cities.

E. S. Holmes has been engaged as business manager of the Orient and contracts have been closed with the Associated Producers for their first year's product.

NEILAN STARTS

Marshall Neilan, who has just renewed his contract for the production of Associated First National releases, returned to Los Angeles last week to start work on the first of the two big features which will occupy his time during the next year.

While in the East, Neilan signed up a number of authors to write titles and scripts for future pictures. Also he has announced that his productions from henceforth shall be picturizations of original stories.

Mr. Neilan has moved his office from the Hollywood Studios to the new Marshall Neilan lot, on North Wilton Place, near Sunset Boulevard.

SEEILING PRODUCTIONS COMPLETE FIRST OF SERIES

The Charles R. Seeiling Productions, Inc., have just completed "The Jack Rider," the first of the six five-reelers to be released through the Aywon Film Corporation of New York.

NEW COMEDY COMPANY

The Max Robert's Syndicate has been formed to produce one-reel comedies, with studios in San Francisco. The pictures will be released through the National exchanges.

PICTURE NEARING COMPLETION

Dorothy Valleron and her director, George Edward Lewis, are in Seattle on their way to the far north to complete their picture, "Dorothy, a Daughter of Alaska," which has been in the course of production for nearly three years.

Director Fred Caldwell is completing "Dr. Houdkowm's Cabinet," his latest comedy burlesque, with the Catherine Loraine Company.

Anita Stewart and her company are still in the Sierras getting exterior scenes for her next picture, "A Question of Honor," a future First National attraction which Edwin Carewe is directing.

SHIPMAN PRODUCTIONS TO RELEASE ITALIAN PHOTOPLAYS

AT LASKY'S

Following the completion of "The Great Impersonation," upon which he is now engaged, George Melies will next produce an adaptation by Monte Katterjohn of S. M. Hul's novel, "The Sheik," in which James Kirkwood will be featured. Meanwhile Mr. Melies is going on location shooting exteriors for his present production, "The Great Impersonation.

Woodruff is working on "The Shulamite" with Gloria Swanson as the star and Mahlon Hamilton as leading man. Two other important members of the cast are announced as Russell Simpson and Lillian Leighton.

Cecil B. DeMille has been to Santa Barbara for several days making exterior scenes for his current production as yet untitled, and returning, will complete work at Naples, after which he comes to the studio for interior work.

James Cruze with his company is back from Catalina Island, whither he went for additional water scenes in "Should a Man Marry?" starring Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle.

William deMille is making progress with his present production, "The Stage Door," in which Jack Holt, Lida Lee, Charles Ogle and others appear.

Penrhyn Stanlaws is still localizing on the coast of Southern California, where scenes of "At the End of the World," starring Betty Compson, are being shot.

AT GOLDWYN

Director Frank Lloyd and company left the Culver City studios last week bound for Huntington Lake in Northern California, where they will film "The Man from Los Rivas," an original screen story by Katherine Newlin Burt.

E. Mason Hopper, who directed Tom Moore in "Hold Your Horses," has been assigned to direct the Irish comedian in another Rupert Hughes story, "From the Ground Up," which will soon go into production at the Goldwyn studios. The story was put into continuity by Mr. Hughes.

Will Rogers is titling his most recent production, "A Poor Relation," the photography of which was completed last week.

LUCKY DAMAGE—NEW INCE SPECIAL

The new Thomas H. Ince feature for Associated Producers, Inc., temporarily titled "Lucky Damage," enters production at the Ince Studios during the coming week under the direction of Lambert Hillyer. The photography will be in the hands of Henry Sharp.

The original story of "Lucky Damage" is by Marc Edmond Jones. Hillyer has prepared the continuity.

FLORENCE VIDOR IMPORTED BY ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Announcement is made by the Executive Committee of the Film Exchange that Arthur S. Kane, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Associated, has signed contracts making Florence Vidor the latest star acquisition of that organization.

Production will be commenced at once at the King Vidor studios on the first of her pictures, and under present plans she will make four of the series in the first year.

SAVAGE
California
The present showing at this theater is Robertson-Cole's "Savage," a production which stars Pauline Frederick. It is a strong drama, containing an unusual amount of heart interest and a deliberately handled plot which unravels quickly in a surprise finish. Because the story's theme is one of mother love, the picture will appeal largely to the feminine audience. There are really very few inconsistencies apparent, which is probably due to the fact that the action is kept natural throughout. The photography is good.

Miss Frederick gives one of her always exceptional performances as Bernice Ridgeway, a young mother who is denied her child by her domineering husband. She puts touching pathos into the woman's departure from her wealthy home and the mothering adventures of her hungering heart which gathers unto itself the little wails which happen her way. Miss Frederick is a rare actress also, and in this film, the role of Kate Martin, a self-indulgent drug addict who abuses her baby to obtain money until, in a fit of despair, with resources gone and her husband in prison, she commits suicide, leaving Bernice Ridgeway the heritage of her name and child.

Pauline Frederick is excellent as Ridgeway, a money-making and man of affairs. His work typifies the class of men to which his aggressive, conceited and yet withal not intentionally loathsome, character belongs. Moreover, he calls forth one of the most commanding tears in the piece.

Milton Sills, who equally serves in the part of John Martin, a father who honors the name of his child sufficiently to sacrifice months of imprisonment to save it from the brink of scandal, which one might doubt, the judgment of such a one to leave his baby to the cruelties and neglect of a moral dregs, rather than to expose the mother and carry the child to peace and safety, we suppose that it is all right. Peculiar conceptions of the heroic are often found in fiction.

Raymond Hatton's work as the pseudo cripple and little Ruth King as Ruthie Martin end the list of players. Henry King handled the direction of the production.

PUPPETS OF FATE
Tally's
A simple little tale of the undying love of a child-wife whose faith is great enough to carry her to unknown America from far away Italy in search of her missing husband, is "Puppets of Fate," Viola Dana's latest Metro release. The original story, which finds its settings in Venice and New York, is a rather over-drawn effort of Donn Byrne; nevertheless it is entertaining, particularly as romanticized by Ruth Baldwin and Molly Parry, besides which it contains some unusually good performances.

The Venetian Canal sets are merely artistic suggestions which are too little seen to appeal strongly. Miss Dana is unusually careful with her interpretation of Sorentina Palombara, the tender little Italian peasant who loves her Gabriel Tellini so faithfully that he goes forth alone to make his fortune. Her wide-eyed trust is very beautiful to follow and her technique is always good.

Francis MacDonald splendidly characterizes Gabriel Palombara, the simple-hearted "wop," who makes his fortune only to nearly lose his temporarily forgotten wife. He is allowed nearly as much footage as is given the star.

After a long absence from local screens, Jackie Saunders appears in a heavy in this photoplay. She is well cast and accomplishes, according to her old form, "Babe" Reynolds, a man she desires Gabriel's quickly won cash. She is delightfully hard-boiled.

Fred Kelsey, Thomas Ricketts and Edward Kennedy also play in the production, which Dallas Fitzgerald directed.

TOO WISE WIVES
Grauman's
Another elaborate Lois Weber written and directed production is released here this week by Paramount. The interest of the story, which treats the problems of two married couples in their search for happiness, varies decidedly. As has been true of Miss Weber's most recent pictures, this one has an unusually weak plot, which is submerged by the very details upon which, it is apparent, that infinite care and much money have been expended. While this superficial story will never solve any world problems nor even prove an unusual drawing card, it is considerably more sensible than "What's Worth While."

Practically the same players who appeared in the last mentioned production, are used in this one. Peculiarly enough, not one member of the cast succeeds in gathering any real sympathy for his part. Louis Calhern quite competently fills the role of David Graham, a selfish individual who goes through much before he learns to appreciate his wife. Calhern is an actor all right, but, at that, he misses many points which a screen performer would never let slip.

Claire Windsor, Miss Weber's latest pro- tege, is seen as Marie, David's fussy, jealous, self-condemning wife. This could have been the big dramatic portrayal of the play, but it is handled in a manner that entirely eliminates all of its possibilities. Close-ups and extravagant wardrobes have never yet proclaimed an actress. Even so, Miss Windsor is slowly improving, we might say, very slowly.

Mona Lisa again steals the feminine action of a Weber picture with her work as Sam Daly, the wife who cleverly manages her husband to gain her own ends. We cannot help thinking that there is a real place for Miss Lisa on the screen, although she hasn't, we think, been perfectly cast, ever. Philip Dalmey has been the target of Sam's indulgent better half, satisfactorily.

We need better film stories than this one, with the leading roles properly cared for. If necessary, we will demand them.

PECK'S BAD BOY
Kinema
Jackie Coogan, who reached fame over night as "the Kid," may be seen in a starring vehicle of his own here this week. It is Irving Lasser's 1921 model of "Peck's Bad Boy," and it is a knockout in its line. The screen version, which was prepared by Sam Wood, who handled the picture's direction, moves easily from a casual start to a riotous, well-developed climax. Most of the Irvin S. Cobb subtitles possess the rare Cobb humor which is a valuable added note, and the supporting cast is exceedingly well placed.

Master Coogan himself is, in our estimation, by far the cleverest child comedian in the profession, especially since he has a situation for a laugh, but lets his action derive ninth from the most ordinary of circumstances. He doesn't belong to the class of starry-eyed "natural" young ones of whom we have so many pleasing examples. He is rather an innate actor, and as clever a little screen woman as one would care to see. He makes of Henry Peck, the nimbled-minded "lamb" of the typical American family, the kid that has always lived next door to us. An admirably impulsive, ingratiating, diplomatic little devil is Peck's Bad Boy. He will beguile both old and young.

The child's continually distraught father is played to the ground by the audience by James Corrigan. He is his son's most persecuted victim, and vice versa.

Tillman Leighton is excellent in the role of Mrs. Peck, Henry's doting mother and only morally supporting friend.

Wheeler Oakman and Doris May provide an unimportant romance with which Dr. Martin, Henry's friend, and Henry's sister.

Raymond Hatton has the easily handled main part of the grocery store-keeper to his credit.

Tar Baby, a clever canine, completes the cast.

First National releases this Irving production.

THE HOUSE THAT JAZZ BUILT
Clune's Broadway
Wanda Hawley's current Realart picture is The House that Jazz Built," a comedy drama with several entertaining twists. The Sophie Kerr story deals with a man who becomes disgusted with the wife which he leads with a wife whose instincts are sluggish save when contemplating a jazz party. That Mr. Husband next imagines himself enamored of the jazz singer with whom he continually contrasts with his spouse, is inevitable. At all ends, however, as it should, when the wife "comes out" and the vamps of the scene dissolve. Her work is really better than usual. It might be said, however, that much as we detest criticisms of a too personal (Continued on Page 17)

Antonio Moreno and Director Chester Bennett have completed their newest feature, "The Secret of the Hills," and it is being edited preparatory to shipment east. Final scenes were taken at La Jolla, from which location the company has just returned.

FIRST FEATURE SHOWN

"The Contrast," the first feature of the Labor Film Service, was given a showing recently in the Simplex Projection Rooms in New York City. Labor Film Service was formed some time ago on the moral backing of the Central Federated Union and the financial support of some of its members. Its avowed purpose was to make pictures depicting the true side of labor's battle and with a number of angles eliminated, which, it was claimed, put the labor world in an unfair light.

GILLSTROM TO MAKE TWO-REEL COMEDIES

Arvid E. Gillstrom, who directed Constance Binney in "Such a Little Queen," for Realart, is presently at work on a series of eight two-reel specials for Educational release.

K. J. Smith, former general manager for Jesse D. Hampton, is now production manager of Inspiration Pictures, Inc.

"Top'ble David" has been purchased from D. W. Griffith for Richard Barthelmess' first starring vehicle.

Gertrude Olmstead and Tiny Sanford are supporting Billy Fletcher in his new comedy "Tamale Mine," now in production at Universal.

Edith Roberts will enjoy a short vacation at Corona Del Mar before starting her forthcoming picture, "Storm Tossed," a Britannia story from the pen of John Hohenwest.

Salient's Second

The second production to be made by Salient Pictures, Inc., will be temporarily named "The Call of the Open," and will be directed by J. Charles Davis, 2nd, who wrote and directed "The Shadow."

Looking for Release

Blanche Sweet is still convalescing. It is understood that her contract with Jesse D. Hampton has been completed and that she is seeking a new affiliation.

New Producing Co.

The South and West Comedies, a new company, has started work at Culver City on a series of one-reel western comedies. J. T. Skinner is head of the organization.

Cullison Comedy Finished

Webster Cullison, of Clever Comedies, has completed production on "The Stolen Umbrella," the second of the series of Ellis Parker Butler stories of "Polo Gubb," with Victor Potel in the title role.

Italian "Ben Hur"

An Italian version of "Ben Hur" is being produced by the Ultra Company with studios in Rome, Italy.

The Mummer’s Workshop will have a Russian evening on Tuesday at 8 o’clock. Roumanova will play and sing Russian folk songs and Madam Barovowsky will speak on the Moscow theater, with which institution she was connected many years. The hostesses for the evening will be Miriam Meredith, Mrs. Charles Neredith, Mrs. Clarence Thomas, Isabel Percival and Helen Yoder.

STRONG WILL STAR IN COMEDIES

Porter Strong, who went east with the D. W. Griffith Company two years ago, is to be starred in a series of comedies, for which distribution arrangements are about to be completed.

The comedies will be made in the Griffith Studios at Mamaroneck, and will represent one of four production units in that organization.

NEW COMPANY STARTS

Bob Horner, author-director, formerly connected with Vitagraph, Lasky, and Universal, is the latest to enter the independent field. Backed by the Prairie Film Company of Chicago, Horner is now organizing the company’s new producing unit. A series of twenty-four two-reel western dramas will be produced. Isabella White, a well-known writer from Nebraska, has already prepared her first continuity, “Hell’s Valley,” from an original story by Mr. Horner.

MARTIAL NEILAN HAS NOVEL STORY

Neilan has started his next production for Associated First National Pictures. This picture is said to present a novel form of story in that it offers the combined effort of four noted writers, namely: Hugh Wiley, Walter Trumbull, Thomas McFarrow and Marshall Neilan. It is titled "Bits of Life," and those heading the cast are Fred Burton, Rockcliffe Fellows and James Bradbury, Jr. A short trip will be made to San Francisco for a number of exteriors and the balance of the story will be made here.

SPECIAL SHOWINGS OF PHOTOPLAYS FOR DENMARK

Jean Hersholt, actor and director with Benjamin B. Hampton, and former actor of the Scandinavian stage, is responsible for the showing to the theatrical profession in the capital cities of Denmark, Sweden and Norway Metro's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and Benjamin B. Hampton's "A Certain Rich Man."

GUNNARD BACK FROM SWEDEN

Andrew Gunnard, former New York and Los Angeles film promoter and director, who for the last six months has been in Norway, Sweden and Denmark getting scenes and engineering an international film exchange project there, has returned to his Los Angeles office at Brunton Studios.

On account of a slight accident to Marguerite de la Motte work is progressing at only half speed on Douglas Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers."

Charlie Chaplin expects to complete his present production, "Vanity Fair," around the middle of June.

HOWE ON CONTRACT

STURGEON WITH F. P. L.

Rollin Sturgeon has been signed by Famous Players-Lasky to direct. He will work in the East. Sturgeon of late has been with Universal.

SENNETT SIGNS LOWELL SHERMAN

Lowell Sherman has been signed by Mack Sennett to appear in a number of dramatic productions.

Bobbie Mack has recently finished "Onion Jones" in "The Son of Wallingford."

Fred J. Butler has chosen Carl Stockdale to play an important role in David Butler's next starring picture, "Bing-Bang-Boom."

William Walling will be seen in the forthcoming David Butler production, "Bing-Bang-Boom," being directed by Fred J. Butler.

Texas Guinan has left the Western film colony, and is in New York. She has recently completed eight Western pictures.

Ruth Stonehouse is playing opposite Tom Santschi in his series of outdoor plays being made for Pathe.

DOUGLAS CRAIG,
Who has been engaged by LOIS WEBER
Holly 2275

IRENE BLACKWELL
Who has just been cast in an important role with Hobart Bosworth

ATHLETIC SERIES

The Donald Mack Co., a new unit, is in the process of cutting its first production, "In the Water," an educational series consisting of swimming, life-saving, resuscitation, etc. It features Elsie Hanneman.

MORE COMEDIES

Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., have arranged with W. S. Campbell to produce a series of animal comedies, 13 in all, for release during the coming season.

"SANDS O' DEE" AGAIN

D. W. Griffith will make a second version of "Sands O' Dee," with Mae Marsh in the principal role. In all likelihood it will follow "The Two Orphans," upon which actual work starts this week at the Mamaroneck Studios. "Sands O' Dee" was made by Griffith some years ago with Mary Pickford. It was an old Biograph release.

Miss Marsh's return to Griffith follows that of Dorothy and Lillian Gish, who have been cast for "The Two Orphans."

Katherine MacDonald's next starring vehicle will be an original comedy drama by George Marion, Jr., written especially for the star and prepared for the screen by Ruth Wightman.

The Border Feature Film Corporation is producing its third Western two-reeler and expects to complete its schedule of twenty-four two-reel Westerns during the coming year.

Lillian Guenther is at present with the Douglas Fairbanks company.

nature, we couldn't help observing to ourselves, when reviewing this play, that a course of exercise such as she indulges in during her action as Cora, would be a great thing for Miss Hawley to "stick to" generally, if she expects to remain physically in the ingenue class. Her fast increasing size is a little incongruous when her roles are considered.

Forrest Stanley makes Frank Rodham, the determined young husband, very interesting. He rather walks away with the sympathy in several sequences.

Gladys George hasn't been better cast than she is as the lily-like Lila Drake, who captivates Rodham with her supple grace. That very grace is a bit detrimental to the star at such close proximity, by the way.

Robert Bolder is with a few spirited scenes as Mr. Foster, a railroad president with domestic ideas.

Helen Dunbar, Clarence Geldart and Helen Lynch all play small parts well.

ANITA STEWART BACK FROM LOCATI

After two weeks of location work at the Lake Elmanor dam of the Stone & Webster Construction Company, Anita Stewart has returned to the Louis B. Mayer studio to make interior scenes for "A Question of Honor," her present Mayer-First National picture. Accompanying Miss Stewart on her return journey were: Rudolph W. B. Cameron, her husband and business manager, and Virginia Norden, assistant to Mr. Mayer.

Director Edwin Carewe and his staff, a portion of the cast including Edward Hearne, Ed Brady, Walt Whitman and Bert Sprotle, and Robert B. Kurle, cameraman, are still on location filming scenes in which the star does not appear. They are expected back within a few days when they will resume work at the studio.

Charles Clary has been engaged to play in the current Ince all star special.

Willie Collier and Mrs. Collier and their son "Buster" recently visited the Ince Studios, as the guests of Thomas H. Ince.

GORDON EXPECTED

Robert Gordon will be in Los Angeles presently to play the leading role in "The Rosary," which Jerome Storm is to make for Selig-Rock.

KING TO DIRECT BARTHELMESS

Henry King has been selected to direct Richard Barthelmess in his first Associated First National production.

Beside Love recently won a dancing contest between various film stars and was awarded a large silver cup by Louis J. Gasnier.

John H. Elliott, who played the part of the priest in the stage version of "Slippy McGee," will enact the role in the screen version.

Robert Badger, son of Clarence Badger, Goldwyn director, has just finished a part with Marion Fairfax at the Hollywood Studio.

Eugene Poyet has been engaged to enact a part in the Rex Ingram Metro picture, "The Conquering Power," from Balzac's "Eugenie Grandet."

Jack Curtis will play the principal heavy role with William Duncan and Edith Johnson, at Vitagraph, in their new feature, temporarily called "The Super Man."

Dorothy Orth plays the leading girl part in a new Vanny Comedy being made by Scott Sidney. The picture has been called "Chicken-Hearted."

The season's queen of Princeton University is Betty Blythe, according to the college election just closed. She succeeds Maude Adams and Norma Talmadge.

It is said that Bert Lytell has been elected as the most popular film star in the eyes of Japanese picture-goers by a nation-wide contest just completed by a Tokyo newspaper.

Alfred Hollingsworth has accepted an offer to take charge of the sales department of the Photoplaywrights League, which work he will combine with his picture activities.

Miriam Cooper has just completed the leading female role opposite George Walsh in "Serenade," the Associated First National production just completed by R. A. Walsh.

Henry Murdock will be absent from the screen several weeks, due to a broken nose, after which director Frederie Sullivan will cast him in "Cyrano de Bergerac" soon to go into production at the Christie Studios.

For his principal feminine support in "Fightin' Mad," William Desmond has engaged Virginia Brown Faire, who recently completed the leading role in the first of the Rudyard Kipling stories, "Without Benefit of Clergy." Other important feminine portrayals have been assigned to Rosemary Theby and Doris Pawn.

Virginia Norden, assistant to Louis B. Mayer, and Josephine Quirk, scenario writer, have left for the northern part of the state where Anita Stewart and her company are filming location scenes for "A Question of Honor" under Edwin Carewe's direction.

John M. Stahl is completing arrangements for his next picture for Louis B. Mayer, and expects to start presently. Neither the title of the production nor the cast have yet been given out but it has been announced that Hays Meredyth is preparing the story and continuity from an original theme by Mr. Stahl. The director's last picture, "Redemption," is now in New York and will shortly be presented by Mr. Mayer through First National channels.

To Finance Independents

Seemingly in direct refutation of a recent speech by a well known representative of the industry to the effect that Wall Street will soon launch another freezeout of the independent producer, comes the announcement that Thomas H. Ince has associated himself with a group of local financiers, including executives of the First National and Los Angeles Trust and Savings Banks, for the purpose of developing the junior financing of motion picture production and to bridge the gap existing between the inception of the picture and the period when bank loans can be safely made upon it.

This organization may be successfully approached by the Independent who, with a meritorious story, cast and director, has not the financial wherewithal to go ahead. By providing capital upon a strictly fair basis, this new enterprise, headed by Mr. Ince, will eliminate the necessity of the tragic custom heretofore followed by thus handicapped producers, of signing away anywhere from thirty to sixty per cent of their pictures' profits in order to obtain a comparatively small amount of money.

A financing concern of this sort may well be expected to both assist to expression the art in our profession and discourage the murderous assaults upon it of Wall Street and Europe which, it seems reasonable to presume, are linked hand in hand in their merciless hunt for the desperately needed or much coveted shekels (as the case may be). Anything that encourages the independent producer at this time, saves the American Cinema.

“Cupid” and Publicity

R. S. Sparks, better known as “Cupid” Sparks, Los Angeles' ex-marriage license clerk, has been “very much elected” for the city council. Personally this information, facing us in our favorite morning newspaper a few days since, provided us with more to deliberate upon than to be amused about. Why, it seems reasonable to ask, was this particular individual given the particular (and let us add tremendous) support which he received at the late election? In other words, what exceptionally brilliant or even markedly intelligent act or thought of his has gone to improve, or even promises to improve, our community? True, political machines have oftentimes placed “anybody” chosen by them in office. It is, however, entirely safe to leave out that angle in the consideration of this circumstance.

Then what won Cupid’s popularity contest? The answer isn't hard to discover or rather recollect. Remember back a few months, a couple of years. Did any of you readers who were then local residents manage to miss this gentleman’s advertising campaign? It would be impossible not to recall the dozens of press stories following upon the heels of each other, in which he played the leading, or at least, a principal role. Scarcely a week passed during which time the latest romantic adventure of a man who was certainly occupying only an ordinary public job, was published in either a serious or a jocular vein. It might be suggested that all of this spoke well for someone’s persistence and ability to “get away with it,” although we don’t know just who deserves credit for these talents. The importance of such knowledge is scarcely worth the conjecture, anyway. The point remains—Cupid even out-publicized the much mentioned picture stars.

Further, he placed himself upon familiar terms with every peruser of the Los Angeles dailies, and he has ended up “city counciling” the lot of us. This is all remarked not disparagingly of the individual in question, but as another striking proof of P. T. Barnum’s favorite quotation concerning the results of advertising. If Mr. Sparks has starred himself politically with publicity—more power to him. He has at least sold an idea to a great city through a worthy medium. Pretty profitable business?

A Dream Materializing

It is always exceedingly pleasant to accomplish one's dreams. It is even gratifying to learn that the other fellow has discovered that one’s suggestions are worthy enough for him to adopt as his own and carry out. Consequently we are glad to be able to report so soon that the World’s Film Exposition, one of our oldest visions and one which caused much comment when it was set forth in this magazine in a comparatively recent issue, is to be realized next year, upon the favorable development of present plans.

If all those now interested in the proposition treat it wisely we repeat that it can be made the greatest event in the history of our industry. In any case, Camera! will be squarely behind those who are proving the feasibility of its pet idea.
ROACH WILL STAR MILDRED DAVIS

Mildred Davis has signed a long term contract with Hal E. Roach, which includes her appearance as leading lady in a few more Harold Lloyd Comedies, and following this, she will be starred in five reel dramatic productions sponsored by Hal E. Roach.

Douglas MacLean has returned to the Ince Studios after an extensive vacation in the Big Bear region, and a new MacLean Ince special will be in production at an early date.

FIRST OF NEW SERIES

"The Secret of Butte Range," the first of the new series of outdoor features which Cyrus S. Williams is producing for Pathe, written and directed by Robert North Bradbury and starring Tom Santschi, is completed and production started Friday on the second of the series, "The Home Trail," by Wm. E. Wing.

"BRONZE BELL" IN LABORATORY

"The Bronze Bell," the Ince-Louis Joseph Vance special production for Paramount release in late June, was turned over to the laboratories in completed form this week and prints will be ready within the coming few days. The romance is of British East India, featuring Doris May, with Courtenay Foote in leading support.

TO MAKE UNSALEABLE PICTURES MARKETABLE

Walter A. Futter is opening a cutting and titled bureau where independent producers can get their pictures cut and assembled from rushes to completed sample print. Mr. Futter will specialize in recutting and assembling unsaleable pictures and making their marketable productions.

NEILAN TO PRODUCE AT GOLDFYN

Marshall Neilan has rented studio space at the Goldwyn plant where he will stage the interiors for his new production, "Bits of Life."

Tom Santschi's first production of his second series for Pathe is nearing completion.

LORNA DOONE IN PRODUCTION

Maurice Tourneur is finishing the prologue of his forthcoming production, "Lorna Doone," and is starting to cast the principal players of the story.

AT GOLDFYN

Tom Moore has started work under the direction of E. Mason Hopper on "From the Ground Up," an original screen story by Rupert Hughes.

Director Frank Lloyd and company expect to be on location about six weeks at Huntington Lake, making both exterior and interior scenes for Katherine Newlin Butt's original screen story, "The Man from Lost River," for which Arthur F. Statter and Lambert Hillyer prepared the screen version.

Reginald Barker has arrived at the halfway mark in his current production, "The Poverty of Riches," in which Richard Dix and Lestrade Joy portray the leading roles.

AT UNIVERSAL

Marie Prevost has begun work on her first starring vehicle, "The Butterfly," written by Percival Wilder and directed by King Baggot.

Ted Browning is busy on "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story with Mabel Julienne Scott interpreting the name role. Hoof Gibson is on the home stretch of "The Mascotte of the Three Star," his forthcoming feature in which Jack Ford is directing him.

Eddie Fino is in the midst of another two-reeler in which he perpetuates his characterization of "Cyclone Smith," the cowboy. Jay Marchand is directing the star.

Six directors are collaborating with Frank Lawrence, film editor-in-chief, in cutting their recently finished productions. Work will begin presently on two new pictures. Harry Carey will start "Partners," a story which Lucien Hubbard wrote for him and in which he will be directed by Robert Thornby, and Edith Roberts will begin work on "Storm Tossed," a light-house story, in which she will be directed by Reaves Eason.

Eileen Sedgwick, after a protracted illness, is at work on "The Terror Trail," her latest serial production, being filmed under the direction of Edward Kull.

AT VITAGRAPH

Another week at the studio and William Duncan and his unit filming his new production, "The Super Man," will leave for a distant northern location. The final title of the production has not yet been announced.

Larry Semon will resume work at the studio this week after three weeks recovering from injuries sustained in his last picture. Several airplane stunts will feature his next special comedy.

AT METRO

Bert Lytell's new Metro starring vehicle will be "Junk," a Saturday Evening Post story by Kenneth Harris, for which June Mathis is preparing the scenario. "Junk" will be a Maxwell Karger production and the actual filming is expected to start within ten days.

"The Infamous Miss Revel," a story from the pages of "Life," has been selected as Alice Lake's new starring picture. Arthur J. Zellner prepared the screen adaptation and Dallas M. Fitzgerald will direct Miss Lake in this production. Cullen Landis will play opposite the star.

Madame Nazimova is cutting and editing her production of "Lust," which will be released in the near future.

Gareth Hughes has completed his work in "The Hunch," and will star in two more (Continued on Page 8)
"THE WILD GOOSE"

Grauman's

It is not often that a novel is improved in its scenario, but such is sometimes the case, as is the case with G Panama Morris' "The Wild Goose," which appeared several years ago in the Cosmopolitan magazine. Through his various works and personal statements the world knew Panama as an enemy of the very popular, modern divorce, and because "The Wild Goose" treats of this theme, it caused much comment upon its original publication. As we said before, the author's theory and points are rendered even more lucid when seen through the lens. There is no question but that this all star cast production is a great story. Whether its theme is in anyway practical as applicable to American ideals is an arbitrary matter. Such a consideration means little, any way. If it is a good picturized novel with big situations and a worthwhile trend that the public wants, and it is apparent that this sort of thing is desired, then here it is.

Albert Capellani has handled the almost dangerous action artistically and with great care. The photography and technical effects of the production are excellent. Further, the characters are beautifully filled.

Holmes E. Herbert gives us one of his best pieces of work in the title role. He plays Frank Manners, that rare type of twentieth century man who desires nothing but the presence and devotion of his loved one and demands nothing but their loyalty. Herbert's subtle interpretation of the wounded husband who remains true to himself throughout all the heartbreak and frenzy of losing his mate to another, typifies the wild goose whose ideals and plan of life he so closely follows. Quite fittingly this role is he outstanding one of the story.

Mary MacLaren is better placed than we have ever seen her in the part of Diana Manners, a spoiled young wife, whose hunting instincts still demand expression, after ten years of seemingly ideal matrimony. There is something in Miss MacLaren's charm particularly suited to her unsympathetic roles. This one she manages amply.

Dorothy Bernard, well remembered from other days, is seen as Mary Hastings, a "dutiful" wife who, despite her lifelong love for Frank Manners, has remained true in word and deed. Her husband expresses her devotion by expending every effort to further the happiness of Manners with another woman and that woman's child. Frequently in the spotlight role Ely is papa and friend assumed in fiction by a male character. A strong sacrifice part like this when done by a woman is interesting, partly on account of its rarity.

The fascinating "other man" in Diana's life is graceftully accomplished by Norman Kerry. Ogden Penn's best characteristic is his ability to "take in" a situation, which Kerry. Ogden Penn's best characteristic is Joseph Smiley is good as Mr. Hastings, a man who sacrifices and Ogden Penn is sufficient as little Tom Manners. Her resemblance to Miss MacLaren is striking.

This picture is offered by Cosmopolitan Productions through Paramount.

"MADE IN HEAVEN"

California

A farce that comes off in almost every way unfavourably with Tom Moore's last Goldwyn offering, "Hold Your Horses." "Made In Heaven," that star's current showing, with supporting cast play out in subtitles and much meaningless business.

VIOLET SCHRAM

"SHELTERED DAUGHTERS"

Clune's Broadway

A fairly entertaining program picture entitled "Sheltered Daughters" and containing a worthy point or so, is released locally by Renlart. The story, by George Bronson Howard, deals with an almost incredibly gullible girl whose "sheltered" life nevertheless allows her to stray pretty far from the family fireside in her perfectly natural quest for a little adventure. The facts that both the plot and theory are quite dishawt is, won't affect the average audience unfavourably, we think, and then "Sheltered Daughters" is a perfectly safe picture for the blue law agitators to let the children see Saturday afternoons. Surely that is something!

There is nothing to remark adversely about the scenario or direction, which were by Victor Schertzing, is uneven and, in several places, he allows his supporting cast to disregard its tempo. We might add that the story is a bit foolish.

The star himself is both as delightful and as technically correct as with his work...

U. S. FIGURES SHOW INDUSTRY FLOURISHING

The following statistics collected by the Exhibitors Herald show the motion picture industry to be more prosperous than ever:

"Collections from the films for April showed a huge increase over the same period of last year. For April, 1930, the collections amounted to $256,600. The total of $419,177 was reached for April, 1931. As would be expected from the season of the year a substantial decrease in admission taxes is reported for last month. Total receipts from this tax—which motion pic ture admissions are represented at the ratio of about four to one against all other amusement admissions—was $7,415,568 for April as compared with $7,583,735 for the preceding month, showing a decrease of $44,177. However, April collections were approximately $82,000 in excess of those of the same month last year, when $7,032,066 was reported.

These figures indicate very definitely that while the usual seasonal slump has ar rived the industry is still in a more flour ishing condition than a year ago. The seating tax for April amounted to $29,274 as compared with $18,895 in March and $22,104 in April of last year."

The Process of Deduction

Chapter V.

In our last chapter we found ourselves "stuck," as frequently happens to every one who starts out to build a dramatic plot.

We know what the climax in our story is going to be. It will have our young prospector, who is the hero of the story, sacrifice his chance of winning the girl, because he will not take an unfair advantage. In other words he is going to make a sacrifice for an ideal, which is his honor.

We are approaching that climax in the construction of our rough plot or "first draft," right now, and we must be very careful that we do not bungle the job. The girl is across the river, where she has been lured by the villain. The young aviator is on the other side with the prospector. The girl's father—wait a minute! We had better not bring him on the scene just yet. He might cross the river and find the girl too soon. The young aviator is exhausted, and we can leave him without fear.

Our prospector goes across the river and arrives just in time to save the girl from the brutal attacks of the villain. The two men engage in a fight, and battle all over the place. Now while this fight is going on, we can bring the father and his party to a point near the prospector's camp on the other side of the river. In order to build up some suspense, we might have him discover the wrecks of the airplane in which the girl arrived.

Suspense is a very important ingredient that must always be introduced into our plots. In the construction of suspense, I mean the jockeying of characters into positions that create situations which promise dire complications. This produces a condition of anxiety and intense interest in the minds of an audience. Did you ever stop to think how very uninteresting is a baseball or a football game—or any other kind of a contest in which one side scores so far ahead of the other that there is no question as to the ultimate outcome? That is because the element of suspense, the thread which holds a play story, or any other story together, is lacking.

Now back to our fight: The prospector is getting the worst of it. The villain has him down and is about to take his life. The girl is crying in one corner of the cabin. Just as the villain is about to kill the prospector, the girl seizes a rifle from the wall and—No! No! No!! that won't do. We can't have the villain take the girl's life. That would spoil all the wonderful sympathy which we have built up for her with the audience.

Let's try another way: There is a hunting knife sticking in the cabin wall. As the villain sends the prospector reeling across the room, the hand of our hero accidentally seizes the knife. He withdraws it from the wall and makes a rush for the villain! Hold on! That won't do either. We cannot have our prospector stain his hands with the blood of the other man. We must kill the villain, but how in the world are we going to do it? Of course, we could bring on a storm and have a streak of lightning finish him just at the proper moment, but that would not do, for the reason that it is illogical and machine-made. A forced situation is always unconvincing. There seems to be only one way to do it, and that is to introduce another character at this time.

Ah! We have it. Suppose that the villain is a swash-buck man. In other words he has a young Indian woman, who both loves and fears him. It is logical that she would be insanely jealous of his attentions to the white girl. Perhaps they have had some trouble over the matter before, and he has brutally beaten up the Indian girl. She, therefore, is awaiting an opportunity to avenge herself. Here is her chance.

When it seems to our audience that the villain will surely kill the prospector, and suspense has reached a terrific pitch, the Indian girl slips up to the side of the cabin and fires through the window. The villain falls, mortally wounded. A pretty piece of "action" right here, would then be to have the Indian girl immediately suffer from remorse over her hasty act. She could fall on her knees beside the mortally wounded villain and weep hysterically, while the prospector places his arm about the other girl and leads her from the scene.

It is frequently necessary in plot building to introduce an additional character after the first draft is well under way, as we have done here. In such cases one must then go back over the plot and "plant" the new character early in the story, so as to give him, or her, a sufficient amount of other action to justify existence in the plot. In our next chapter we will retrench our steps and see in just what way we can introduce the Indian girl earlier in the story, so that she will have a worth-while role.

Stories Wanted

Priscilla Dean is going to have some competition. I will have to admit that she is in a class all by herself—but another company thinks that it has found a rival for her and is looking for a story. Something like "Travelers," which gives the star an chance to both do some real acting and also appear in a "dressed" role.

Hey! How about that "wait" story? We haven't had one submitted that hits the bull's eye yet.

Hugh Wiley Here

Hugh Wiley, Saturday Evening Post writer, has arrived in Los Angeles to confer with Marshall Neilan on the Chinese episode in "Hopes of Life," now being produced at Culver City.

The story "Hop"—which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post—will be incorporated in the new Neilan production for First National and the chief characterization will be interpreted by Lon Chaney. Upon completion of the interiors for "Bits of Life," Mr. Wiley will accompany Mr. Neilan and his staff on a trip to San Francisco where a number of scenes in the Frisco-Chinatown will be staged.

Reinach Holding Rights on Queen of Roumania Stories

We are informed by Edward Reinach that the article recently published under the following heading, "Names of Queen of Roumania Stories Given Out," in which it was stated that Lois Weber had acquired the rights of photoplay production of "Pilgrim Souls," is incorrect. The rights of the disposal of this story are in the hands of Mr. Reinach who also holds such rights on the Roumanian Queen Elizabeth's novel, "The Prayer."

Chaney with Neilan

Lou Chaney has been engaged to play an import Chinese role in Marshall Neilan's forthcoming production, "Bits of Life."

Elizabeth Dullaby Gill has finished her part as Miss Hyett in "Hearts' Haven," a B. B. Hampton production.

The special titles written by George Ade for "The Lotus Eater," Marshall Neilan's latest production, have been received and the picture is now ready for release.

After several weeks of delay, Mary Pickford Company has completed the cast for "Little Lord Fauntleroy." One of the principal parts of this production is to be played by James A. Marcus, loaned by Mr. R. A. Walsh to Miss Pickford to play the character part of Hobbs, the grocerman.

Oil Collects Under Domes

Geology teaches that oil collects under domes—experience proves this to be actual fact. At Huntington Beach there are three great oil domes that distinctly mark the Huntington Beach anticline.

Standard drilled on Bolsa Chica, the first dome, and got a 2,000-barrel well. Next on Reservoir Hill, the second dome, Texcal No. 2 came in for 2,000 barrels.

Then all eyes turned to the third and last dome—Golden Dome. Mr. Ward, the owner of the land, received many tempting offers from various companies.

He consulted his friend, Frank O. Wakeley, with the result that the dome property now belongs to the Golden Dome Oil Company with Frank O. Wakeley as superintendent.

The derrick on Golden Dome has been completed and is ready for rigging. We are to lose not one hour in tapping the vast reservoir of liquid gold geologists are so sure lies beneath the Golden Dome. If you want to become active in oil with a company that is not only after oil, but oil profits as well, see Mr. E. G. Miller, the studio representative of the Golden Dome Oil Company, and get all the facts about our company.

AT LASKY'S

Thomas Meighan will start around August 1st on a new picture which Tom Forman will direct.

Wallace Reid is expected at the studio on the completion of "Peter Ibbetson," in which he is co-starring with Elsie Ferguson, and is scheduled to begin work on a new picture soon after his return.

Gloria Swanson, under the direction of Sam Wood, has been on location for several days doing exterior scenes representing South Africa for "The Shahamate." This is the play by J. E. Nish adapted from the novel by Alice and Claud Askew and the play by Edward Knoblock and Claud Askew. Mahlon Hamilton is the leading man and Russell Simpson is a prominent member of the cast.

Betty Compson is scheduled to begin around June 27th on her second Paramount star picture, adapted from Clyde Fitch's play "The Woman in the Case." Penrhyn Stanlaws will again direct.

MARSHALL NEILAN APPEARS BEFORE CAMERA

Marshall Neilan deserted the directorial chair recently and appeared before the camera in "Bits of Life," his new First National Production.

In this picture Mr. Neilan appears as himself in a novel handling of a story which is expected to introduce something new under the sun in picture presentation.

CASTING "TOL'BLE DAVID"

A cast is being chosen by Director Henry King to support Richard Barthelmess in his forthcoming starring picture, "Tol'ble David."

KYNE STORY IN PRODUCTION

The script of the Peter B. Kyne story, "Kindred of the Dust," is being completed by Jack O'Brien and production will start presently under the direction of R. A. Walsh.

John Emerson and Anita Loos have completed the synopsis of their new original photoplay, "Good for Nothing," for Constance Talmadge, and are working on the continuity. Victor Fleming will handle the direction.

J. E. Bowen, President and General Manager
The Foreign Invasion and “Gypsy Blood”

Many of us who have been fighting the showing of the tariffless foreign film in this country as a detriment to our own industry, have done so with a perhaps unexpressed idea in mind that there might some day be more danger attached to the presentation of such material than that much-mentioned and most vital menace of keeping unemployed our American picture producing staffs. In other words, we all saw “Passion,” and, despite its deniable technique, we recognized with something of dread, the many superior qualities which it possessed. In view of its dramatic value, for instance, we felt it reasonable to presume that a few years of unharnessed progress in the cinema line on the other side, might bring foreign production to a point where it would prove unpleasantly comparable to our own efforts, so that, even if the work of our foreign contemporaries never excelled American screen accomplishments, still it might threaten us as a rival to be reckoned with.

This attitude, however, which we had found to be held in the most unexpected places, we now recognize to be absolutely unjustified. Consequently the agitation which was and still is making itself felt concerning this particular phase of the situation is, in our best estimation, unwarranted.

A foreign film invasion we will not tolerate at even the temporary expense of our profession’s welfare, but it isn’t sensible to fear the eventual effects of these films when pitted against our own. You ask what is responsible for our suddenly acquired sense of security? Just this: We have witnessed the running of “Gypsy Blood,” First National’s second Pola Negri starring release, and having reviewed it and found it to be, from every standpoint, an inferior attempt, to be classed with all other pictures from over there which have come to our attention since the war, save, perhaps, the previously mentioned spectacle, “Passion,” we have come to the conclusion that the merit of this last was no more an accidental exception than anything else.

The same director and star who made “Passion” a success co-operated to produce “Gypsy Blood.” For some reason or other the cleverness of the former, one Ernest Lubitsch, which we joined the chorus in lauding some months back, cannot be detected in this, his adaptation of the French version of “Carmen,” while Negri, the actress with whom he works, although undoubtedly a dramaticist, gives way quite noticeably to the European tendency to overact as Carmenita in this picture. These striking contrasts prove that the picture ability of these supposedly foremost continental artists has not matured in the modern sense. It is not to be depended upon.

Moreover, the well-known theme of the play is made incomparably more morbid and blatantly sensuous than we have ever known Carmen” in this country, daringly as have the vices and indiscretions of its title role been portrayed. The list of characters is made up of exaggerated weaklings and degenerates whose unpleasant antics fail to lead up to any real point, which progression is a recognized essential of the 1921 photoplay. Nor is the depressing yarn relieved by the human interest touches which might have done so much to tone it down to normal. These unhallowed themes in the drama and literature have long been of Europe, but they are set aside from our optimistic western outlook, and they are not for us.

From every possible technical standpoint, “Gypsy Blood” is an unspeakable fizzle. The continuity jumps bewilderingly, in a fashion that would be put to shame by even the pioneering attempts at play celluloiding made twenty years ago; while the lack of anything like unto the “close-up” often confuses the identities of the players on the screen. All that can be said for the photography and lighting is that they are annoyingly poor; and the sub-titles, which we take to be straight translations from the German on account of their terming, are a bit foolish and contain much repetition.

Outside the star, whose inexpressively unnatural action may be in part responsible for our disappointment in her characterization (this last, however, must in fairness be given credit for being as colorful and picturesque in places as it is repulsive in others), and the actor who was really quite human as Jose, Carmenita’s badly used lover, we can’t hand the cast a thing. Possibly three or four laughs may be forthcoming, at that, at the ludicrous effects presented by the square-headed Spaniards who are introduced, with their Teutonic features and builds, quite confidently.

Taken in the whole this production won’t get by generally, due largely to the promising fact that having educated the public to a point where it expects the best in film art and technique, our big picture interests are going to find that they cannot insult the minds and morals of that public with such tommyrot. We might add that if the producer-distributor who has gone in for this stuff does not wish his pusle hit by immediate censorship, he will sacrifice a few coins now and shelve all of this material which he has unwisely accumulated.

But as for the justification of any fear that our screen drama is to be crowded out by such, there is none. In our best judgment there will be none. We are a nation apart, and there lives not the man who can persuade us to accept as entertainment the filthy drags that apparently amuse a continent whose ideals have little in common with ours. On the other hand, an American can always provide recreation for an American. There is no question but that he will continue to do so.

F. R.

We have at hand a copy of Ted Le Berthon’s very complete and instructive scenario magazine, “The Photodramatist,” issued once monthly.

Its new editor has a wide field ahead of him, and no one appreciates his competency to cope with that field more than the editorial department of this publication. Keep it up, Teddy!
Film Capital Production Notes

H. B. Warner to Make Stage Play

The stage has again claimed H. B. Warner and his wife, Rita Stanwood, who have been making pictures for J. D. Hampton. Both have returned to New York, and Warner is rehearsing a new play.

"The Virginian" to Be Fairbanks' Next Vehicle

It is expected that "The Three Musketeers," Douglas Fairbanks' current picture, will be completed around the middle of July, following which plans will be laid by Fairbanks for "The Virginian," most of which will be filmed in Wyoming, where the story is laid.

Ethel Clayton to Play Western Heroine

The well-known stage play, "The Girl of the Golden West," will be Ethel Clayton's next production.

Second Tearle Picture in Production

Another Conway Tearle starring picture has been completed at the Selznick studios in Fort Lee, and Mr. Tearle is already filming a production to follow it. The one finishing is temporarily entitled "Ye Shall Pay," and the one in production is "Love's Masquerade."

Child Star in Independent Productions

Jackie Coogan, who has arrived in Los Angeles from his eastern trip, is prepared to commence work July 15 in a series of five feature photoplays, at the Robert Brunton Studios, starring himself.

The West Coast Theatres, Inc., controlled by Gore Brothers, Adolph Ramish and Sol Leeser, have made an arrangement with Jack Coogan, father of the boy, to finance the entire series of Coogan special productions.

Another "Hallroom Boys" Comedy Released

"A Chili Romance" of the Federated Hallroom Boys Comedies, featuring Sid Smith, was released by the Western Board of Review and turned over to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for release to their exchanges.

Three Clever Comedies to Be Released

Webster Collison, of Clever Comedies, will leave for New York around July 1st, to make arrangements for the distribution of his series of two-reel satirical farce-comedies, adaptations of the Ellis Parker Butler "Philo Gubb" stories.

Mr. Collison will take East with him the first three pictures of this series, entitled "The Hound of the Tankervilles," "The Stolen Umbrella," and "The Disappearance of Malv Jane."

New Edward Hatton Western

A new C. Edward Hatton two-reel Western, "Tangle Trails," has been completed recently, and sent to the New York offices of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. After editing, it will be released by that company on the Star Ranch Western program of two-reel Westerns.

Sennett Two-Reel Comedy Released

Marie Prevost, John Henry, Jr. (the Sennett baby), and George O'Hara comprise the trio of players in Mack Sennett's newest two-reel feature, "Call a Cop," to be released shortly by Associated Producers.

At Goldwyn

Director Frank Lloyd and company are on location at Huntington Lake, Calif., making "The Man from Lost River.

Charles Kenyon, playwright and continuity writer, is finishing the screen version of Hall Caine's "The Christian," which will go into production soon.

The cast of "From the Ground Up," a starring vehicle for Tom Moore, has been completed and the story will shortly go into production. Helen Chadwick will again play opposite the star.

The photography on "The Poverty of Richard" of the original play by Leroy Scott, was finished last week under the direction of Reginald Barker.

At Universal

Edward Laemmle, who has been specializing on dramas of the out-of-doors, will resume work this week on "The Cowpuncher's Comeback," a short reeler in which Art Acord will be featured.

Frank Mayo is on the last sequence of "The Shark Master," his forthcoming photodrama. Fred LeRoy Granville is directing the story which has come from Mayo's experiences as a camera-explorer in the South Seas. The star is supported by May Collins.

Allan Curtis is directing "The Mystic M," a one-reel comedy.

Additional stories are being put into continuity for Eddie Polo, who will continue to characterize "Cyclone Smith," the western hero. Jay Marchant is directing.

At Realart

Locations are being sought by Director Maurice Campbell for "The Speed Girl," in which Bebe Daniels will soon commence the portrayal of a motion-picture actress.

May McAvoys has been in Arcadia for a week, where she has been making scenes for "A Virginia Courtship," under the direction of Frank O'Connor.

At Vitagraph

"Bring Him In" is the title selected for Eddie Williams' forthcoming feature, the working title of which has been "The Man from California," Mr. Williams, together with his co-director Robert Ensminger and a super-producing company is now at Lake Tahoe, making exteriors.

William Duncan and company are making exteriors at Bakersfield for his special production entitled "The Superman."

Larry Semon has resumed work on his latest comedy, "The Bell Hop."

Arthur D. Ripley has completed the cutting and editing of "Life's Darn Funny," a Dana special produced by Dallas Fitzgerald.

Theodore Wharton is still casting his forthcoming production, "The Des Etting Sin," which is his first picture for Zenith Features, Inc.

"Nobody," starring Jewel Carmen, is the title of a Roland West production soon to be released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Geo. H. Kern is going ahead with the preliminary arrangements for staging his next production, which will be based on Bulwer Lytton's "The Last Days of Pompeii," and entitled "The Scarlet Avalanche."

“Man—Woman—Marriage” — Kinema

Allen Holubar as author-director of "Man—Woman—Marriage," which he offers as his first independent production for First National, has achieved great heights, not only for himself, but we may safely say, for the profession to which he belongs. In it, he artfully handles the problem of the ages with a simply-told story of the unfulfilled maiden's romance and the development of a woman's art. Sacrifice and faith, only to background the subject matter with a spectacular pageant of Woman in History. The combination is technically and artistically more ambitious than anything Holubar has done to date. This producer cleverly insured universal feminine interest for his play. Then, because in his story preparation, he eliminated the conventional slush that usually accompanies the sentimental efforts of even our best scenarists, Holubar cinched an equal amount of maternal sympathy for his drama. Admittedly such is an attainment which certainly merits the vision it required.

"Man-Woman—Marriage" contains, moreover, a lesson which the world is even now striving to master against seemingly overwhelming odds; a lesson which, since it has never been apparently comprehended by ordinary intelligence or even our highest scientific education, has been finally left for realization to the spiritual understanding of humanity. It seems to us that it was a problem of just such proportions as the one here treated, that Mr. Griffith meant to set forth in his "Intolerance." At the time of its release unfortunately, or seemingly so, the picture-going public had not been sufficiently trained to appreciate or even digest its significance. Today conditions are different, and there is psychology in the showing of this type of photoplay.

The story is presented on the suggestive Earle art titles and much of subtle value to the scenario, than which there was rarely one more artistic or graphically this picture excels. Beautifully proportioned long shots of massive sets, filled with effectively managed mobs and lovely portraits, abound in it.

We witness the best work of Dorothy Phillips to date in the role of the girl, Victoria, an impulsive creature of romance, who becomes that which is noblest in womanhood for the love of her mate and his children. Then, because of the very power of him to hold her, she nearly loses what she has won over the rapids of his selfish cynicism. Only does she gain everything back for right when Faith takes her hand. A more emotive opportunity than this has not been provided this type of actress. Let it be said that all of its points are artistically regarded, and particularly graceful is her interpretation of Victoria as the resourceful, fair-minded child previous to her marriage. Miss Phillips always gives a striking impression, and her wholesome charm coupled with mental reality which fits her naturally into such roles as this unusually appealing one.

James W. Cahn does, carefully and well, David Courney, the man she loves, but without gaining much sympathy for the character, who is, of course, largely due to the nature of his action as the ordinary, ambitious man of this century. Neither the material given him, nor his treatment of it, is even logical.

Robert Cain makes Schuyler, the heavy, who, for a time, threatens to become quite dreadful, as ominous as possible in view of the part's near-comedy finish. Cain is typically placed. His work has always been good and it is yet improving.

Ralph Lewis and Margaret Mann give excellently characteristic portrayals. They do, respectively, Victoria's domineering father and her dully unhappy mother whom marriage demands. Nor are there present the human interest touches which have often redeemed weak screen plays.

The camera work on the play is exceptionable.

The title role of Anna Janssen is filled by Seena Owen, whose work varies throughout the piece. In other terms, she is quite as one would have her when playing Janssen, the unmoral and notorious, both in her whimsical and unpleasant moods. Somewhat, however, she doesn't satisfy to any marked degree when Janssen becomes the "pure and unsophisticated." On the other hand nothing is strikingly wrong with any of her performances. It simply fails to carry absolute conviction.

E. K. Lincoln portrays "honest Thomas McCarthy," the plain clothesman who arrests and then loves the woman whom he has sworn to "bring in." Lincoln isn't quite the romantic hero whom one would imagine in the part, but he cares for it adequately enough.

H. Cooper Cliff adds a realistic touch to the courtroom atmosphere as "the attorney for the defense."

Henry Sedley, Lilian Walker, Paul Nicholson, Templar Saxe and Joseph Smiley all fill minor roles competently.

Robert Vignola directed the picture in the East.

"Sham" — Grauman's

Paramount's screen adaptation by Douglas Doty for Ethel Clayton of Elmer Harris' and Geraldine Bonner's comedy-drama, "Sham," provides an evening of sprightly entertainment in the superior comedy line. The facetiousness and spirit of that type of New York society chatter who gets away with much on an amusingly inconsequencial income and an equal startling amount of credit. A pretty thread of real romance runs through the laughable situations, leaving one with an impression of wholesome fun which greatly increases the story's value.

Attractive sets, good photography and camera projection also prove of assistance to the general effect.

Miss Clayton is ideally cast as Katherine Van Riper, an expensive parasite with good intentions. This is one of her most enjoyable recent roles.

Clyde Fillmore also fills adequately the role of the big, genial and unquestionably western Tom Jaffery, with whom Katherine falls in love despite his lack of wealth. He makes an excellent opposite for the star.

Certainly a Lasky comedy of this sort would be incomplete without Walter Hiers and Theodore Roberts, who are seen this time as the roundabout Monte Buck (in love with Katherine), and his genuine but somewhat unrefined father, who happens to be a millionaire cattleman.

Sylvia Ashley, Helen Dunbar and Tom Ricketts perform a stately trio as Katherine's disapproving relatives. It always seems good to see any of their screened faces.

Garware is seen in the role of Bolton, a fashionable jeweler, which he fills as dignifiedly as it is his custom. Unhappily he is allotted none of the complicated action which he has proven (when so equal to manage.

Carrie Clark Ward is screamingly funny with the comedy as an experienced oven or cook, who perhaps carries her loyalty to that family past reason and even conscience.

Blanche Grey as Clem, the poor relation, is a good touch and, together with Eunice Burnham, completes the cast.

Thomas Heffron directed the production.

Stark Patterson has been cast for the juvenile lead in Tom Santschi's forthcoming picture, and is on location with the company.

Elise Janis, now appearing in Paris in a revue, will sail for the States in August, according to a cable just received in New York by Charles B. Dillingham.

Lillian Walker, the screen star who has been offering a monologue in vaudeville, recently has accepted a stock engagement during the summer. She expects to return to vaudeville in the fall.

Montagu Love will play Colonel Ibbetson, the role played by Lionel Barrymore on the stage, in the screen version of Du Maurier's "Peter Ibbetson," in which Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid are co-starring in New York.

LAEMMLE SIGNS DU PONT

Carl Laemmle announces an engagement of Miss Du Pont, which will make her a Universal Special attraction star. The lady in question is an important part in Erich Von Stroheim's forthcoming production, "Foolish Wives," about to be released.

Dear Everyone Who Reads This Paper:

Does your name appear on this page with an explanation of your latest activity? If not, you are to blame. I am no mind reader, so that if yours is not an active press agent I cannot possibly follow you in your movements, no matter how interesting they may be. I wish for our mutual good that in this case the impossible could be otherwise. Since it cannot, try writing down your story and mailing it to the Camera! Only (and please, oh please heed this poor overworked editor's plea!) make your stories short and sweet. It will be appreciated.

Yours for fairer and better publicity.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

LYNOWOOD CRYSTAL RAPP

Little four-and-a-half-year-old Lynwood Crystal Rapp is in our midst, and she has come to stay and conquer, or so it appears. Born in Memphis, Tennessee, the child early displayed historic ability and before her third birthday filled her first stage engagement in that city. After her arrival in Los Angeles some time later, Lynwood worked in several screen plays, including Mary Pickford's "Pollyanna," before leaving for New York, where she was to be a pupil of Harrison Fisher, Earl Christy, and Charles Dana Gibson.

Now little Miss Rapp has returned to Hollywood, where she will continue her short but interesting career in the studios. We are expecting to hear more of her.

JACKSON GREGORY STORY FOR CAREY

The Universal scenario department announces the purchase of the screen rights of Jackson Gregory's novel, "Man to Man," which will be a forthcoming vehicle for Harry Carey. It will probably follow his first Jewel picture, "Partners," by Lucien Hubbard, which is now in production.

Doming Miller, whose play, "Wetwood Ho," was recently presented at the annual show of the Harvard Hasty Pudding Club at the Waldorf Hotel, New York, is the nineteen-year-old son of Alice Duer Miller. GEORGE LARKIN IN WESTERN DRAMAS Universal has engaged George Larkin and Josephine Hill to appear in a series of North West Mounted Police series which are being written for them at Universal City. Larkin will take the place of Hoot Gibson on the western drama schedule, which calls for a two-reel western each week. The series will be directed by Edward Kull.

TO PRODUCE GALSWORTHY’S “JUSTICE”

Comes the announcement that Myron Selznick has bought the John Galsworthy drama, “Justice,” for picture production, and Mr. Selznick states that the part of William Falder, made famous on the stage by John Barrymore, will be interpreted by one if the stars now under contract with the Selznick organization.

“UP THE ROAD WITH SALLIE” IS RE-ISSUED

The Selznick Corporation has prepared for re-release the Constance Talmadge picture, “Up the Road with Sallie,” which has been re-edited and retitled. William D. Taylor directed the production from a scenario by Julia Crawford Ivers. Norman Kerry, Kate Tonicay, and Thomas H. Lersoe appear in support of the star.

“PEACHIE” ON LOCATION

Director Wallace Worsley, who is directing Katherine MacDonal in “Peachie,” an Ambassador Picture Corporation film for Associated First National release, has taken the star, players and technical men to Santa Barbara on location. The company will be gone a week. George Marion, Jr., who wrote “Peachie,” will also make the trip.

BARKER’S GOLDSYN CONTRACT TERMINATES

Reginald Barker’s contract with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is legally terminated, and as yet Mr. Barker has made no statement concerning his future production plans.

NEW BOLAND COMEDY

“SLIPPY M’GEE” ON LOCATION

Director Wesley Ruggles and company left recently for New Orleans, and Natchez, Miss., to make exteriors of the production, “Slippy M’Gee,” in which Wheeler Oakman and Colleen Moore will play the leads. Frank Geary, assistant director, and Miss Lanice Morrell, continuity assistant, accompanied the party.

CHILD WILL STAR IN METAPHYSICAL DRAMA

The Italian-American Film Company will feature Theodore Irey in the metaphysical drama, “Power of Faith,” written by J. Habib.

AT LASKY’S

Cecil B. DeMille will begin work on a new production around August 1st. It is expected that Percy Stannlaws will begin production on “The Woman in the Case,” by Clyde Fitch, around June 27th. The scenario for this play was written by A. S. LeVino and Betty Cornplan will be the star. Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle is scheduled to begin work upon a picture called “Via Past Freight,” concerning which no details are as yet available.

Gary Swanson, under the direction of Sam Wood, is making progress with “The Shulamite,” a story of South Africa. George Melford’s next picture will be “The Sheik,” by S. M. Hull, scenario by Monte M. Katterjohn, which will go into production presently.

ANOTHER “MOHICANS”

Adolphe N. Dufaut and Edward L. Klein, 1664 Broadway, announce the completion and early release of two productions based upon the “Leather Stocking Tales,” by J. Fenimore Cooper.

“The Deerslayer” in seven reels and “The Last of the Mohicans,” also in seven reels, constitute the first two of the series of film versions of the Cooper stories. Announcement of distribution will be forthcoming shortly.

Maurice Tourneur made a version of “The Last of the Mohicans” for Associated Producers, Inc.

CROSLAND WITH TEARLE

Alan Crosland is back at Selznick’s in Fort Lee, having finished a Constance Binney picture for Famous Players-Lasky. He will direct Conway Tearle in “Shadows of the Sea.”

FRANKLIN DIRECTING BINNEY

Chester Franklin is here from the coast directing Constance Binney in “The Case of Becky.” Montagu Love is in the cast.

FOX PRODUCTIONS AT FULL SPEED

Sammer has not slowed up the Fox program of production. In addition to the regular star programs, three specials are under way in California, with another trio being started in New York.

FOUR A YEAR

Thomas de Vassey, vice-president of Wistaria Prod., Inc., states that a contract has been signed with Associated Exhibitors, Inc., for a minimum of four productions a year from his company for release through Pathe. The first production, “Harbor Light,” with Creighton Hale, George MacQuarrie and Marguerite Clayton, will be ready for release early in July.

Pauline Frederic is about to start production on the first picture under her new contract with Robertson-Cole.

THE PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

Chapter VI

In chapter five we found that it was necessary to introduce a new character in the shape of the Indian girl. As I stated some time ago, I always follow this rule: Never introduce any extra characters excepting such as are necessary to place the hero or heroine in some situations in which they cannot place themselves, or another. The only possible exception to this is, of course, the small part, or a "bit" which is used either to supply comedy relief, additional pathos, or heart interest. For instance, I refer to such characters as an old Irish washerwoman, a gardener, a cockney English butler, an old negro mammy, a bow-legged cowpuncher, or others, which will afford comedy relief.

Usually the comedy introduced by these characters is gotten over by subtleties and a wry expression here and there. A blind or crippled child, a rascal, a very old and decrepit man or woman, an abused and neglected person, or some individual or dumb brute whose unfortunate circumstances arouse pity in the hearts of the audience, are the characters to which we refer as being introduced for pathos.

We brought in the Indian girl in the last chapter for the double purpose of saving the life of our hero, and eliminating the villain—because we did not want either our hero or heroine to do the job. There is another reason which was necessary. We are going to have to carry our prospector back across the river, where he will meet both the girl's father and the villain, and be subjected to the test which will determine whether or not he divulges the whereabouts of the girl.

There are a few things that are paramount at this time. It would not do for the girl to accompany the prospector back across the river, for that would spoil the nice climaxes we are working for; nor is it possible for the prospector to leave the girl in the hands of the villain. With the latter disposed of, however, it is an easy matter for the prospector to leave the girl, for the time being, in the company of the Indian maid, while he goes back across the river.

As suggested in chapter five, we will go back over our plot and introduce the Indian girl and heavy at the same time. This solves a detail which we temporarily overlooked. We had not provided a convincing reason for the fight between the friend of the prospector and the villain, which resulted in the death of the former—when he was three times superior. Before the thought of introducing the Indian girl, it was my intention to bring about a dispute over the ownership of one of the mining claims. While this was more logical, however, than to make the Indian girl herself, the object of the conflict? Suppose that the friend is observed in what the villain concludes a compromise in the eyes of the audience throughout the story. In other words, we have given her a sufficiently worth-while part to justify her introduction into the plot.

Let's see if there are not some other places where we can work in the Indian girl. Ah! A thought comes to me. During the fight between the prospector and the villain, which takes place on the cliff, let us assume that as they struggle backward and forward, that they alternately clinch and then break away. We can give our audience quite a thrill by having the Indian girl observe the fight from across the chasm.

MARGARET CULLINGTON

Every time the two men break away, she draws a bead on the prospector. Just when we think she is going to kill him, the two men clinch again, and her opportunity is lost.

We can use the Indian girl again as she spies on the villain when he first meets and talks with the white girl. We can establish the fact that she is exceedingly jealous. Additional suspense may be introduced by having her take a dagger from her bosom and register a resolve to kill the white girl.

Wait, just a minute! We have just established the fact that the Indian girl is jealous and hates the white girl. Then why would she shoot the villain to save the lover of the white girl later on? There is only one answer. We must give the white girl an opportunity to win the love of the Indian maiden, and we must intensify the feeling of the Indian girl against the villain. Here is how we can do that: Just before the prospector arrives at the villain's cabin, we can have the villain knock the Indian down and repulse her, expressing at the same time his preference for the white girl. This will give our heroine an opportunity to launch into a tirade against the villain, the defense of the Indian girl, in which she can call his attention to his duty toward the dusky maiden, who has given up everything in the world for him.

Now, without actually writing the continuity, we have developed a means of keeping the Indian girl pretty well before the camera and in the eyes of the audience throughout the story. In other words, we have given her a sufficiently worth-while part to justify her introduction into the plot.

In the next chapter, we are going to work right up to the big climax.

Beginning with this week's issue, Camera! The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry, will be published and owned exclusively by Raymond Cannon, a prominent local actor, whose vision assisted in the origination of this, the profession's one representative paper, several years ago, and whose general guidance of it has proven indispensable through the industry's intervening good days and bad.

The position of Managing Editor will continue to be filled by Fanchon Royer, who has devoted her efforts for many months to the country's various film circles, and particularly the Hollywood Colony, through the medium of this sheet, the popularity of which we cannot but recognize to have been enjoyed rather individually by itself.

Practically the same staff will be retained, and it will continue to serve you as of old besides extending its efforts to include even larger scopes than heretofore treated, an advance which the new organization will undoubtedly facilitate.

Camera! is proud to admit that the loyal endorsement of its readers has alone made possible its many progressions.

"SNOWBLIND"
California
Katherine Newlin Burr's singular story, "Snowblind," is released by Goldwyn at this time. It contains much highly entertaining screen material, which has been utilized to excellent advantage by J. G. Hawks in the scenario. Several surprising twists and odd situations hold the interest straight through the really simple romance. Laid in the far north, the tale has to do with a fugitive criminal who, although a brutal monster, has in his nature enough of the child to endear himself to the three lonely souls who share his seclusion. His lies and unfair advantage-taking of these people bring about his almost simultaneous downfall and redemption. The direction keeps the action clear always, while the subtitles are refreshingly uncomplicated and to the point. Artistic camera work on rare, snow-clad stretches adds an effective note.

Hugh Garth, the blustering but cowardly murderer, whose solitary home provides the picture's background, is characterized as we have come to believe, only Russell Simpson can or does characterize this kind of role. Through all Garth's bestiality we find in his helpless pretense of romance a pathetic something that it takes keen understanding of both dramatic proportion, and the lights and shades of human nature, to translate to the celluloid. Simpson's work is quite wonderful.

Pauline Starke appeals, as she has the habit of doing, with her sincere portrayal of Sylvia, the little vaudeville soubrette, who falls into Garth's hands after a wandering day which has lost her and left her snowblind in the glaring northern spaces. Miss Starke progresses easily through her emotional scenes, which we appreciate are rendered very difficult to accomplish, due to her inability to employ the eyes. Here is a clever feminine performer whom it is impossible to classify. She should be congratulated on this last, which certainly proclaims her as versatile.

Cullen Landis is altogether the boy in his interpretation of Pete Garth, with youth's inevitable tenderness and impressionability combined appealingly with the loyalty and resourceful hardness taught by his rugged home. He is Hugh's younger brother, whom the former uses badly to his own selfish ends, even though a real affection exists between the two.

Mary Alden, as Pete's stoical old nurse, who has remained far from civilization to be near the lad whom she mothers passionately and his brother whose cruelty cannot kill her almost unreasonable love for him, maintains her customary high standard of production.

"SNOWBLIND" is a Reginacl Barker production.

"CHEATED LOVE"
Superba
A simply pleasing Universal program picture is "Cheated Love," a Hubbard-Schroeeder story for Carmel Myers. It tells happily or plaintively, as the case may be, of life in New York's ghetto, and of a faithful little sweetheart who sings in a theatre. The picture is blessed by the absence in it of the blatant peculiarities of the cheap picture to which class it belongs. To explain, it contains no morbidity, stinted or badly misapplied high-brow subtleties. True, there is little which may be pointed as new in its plot; again, it doesn't bore with time-worn remarks and twists. The climax is a little thin, but taken all in all, it will prove entertaining to those who see it.

Technically it is average for its type. Miss Myers has a much more enjoyable part as Sonya, the little Jewess, who loves for a time the wrong man, than she had as the Greenwich Village girl in her last. In it she is more natural and deliberate by far, which results in an added appeal for the role.

George B. Williams does probably the most interesting and certainly the most amusing work in "Cheated Love." He plays Abraham, Sonya's financially conscientious yet kind-hearted old father, whose sun rises and sets in his "cheating." His characterization never drops for an instant.

Allan Forrest's leading male part is an important one for the sympathy it gathers for the "happy ever after" finish.

John Davidson, in the selfish but not-too-villainous heavy, is well placed, although we dislike to see real talent such as is his, spent fruitlessly on nothing.

Mme. Rose Dione majestically accomplishes the part of the experimental prima donna, while Laura Pollard, "Snick" Edwards, and "Smoke" Turner provide some effective local color comedy.

Ed Brady, Virginia Harris and Inez Gomez complete the cast.

King Baggot directed the film.

ALLER IN NEW PLANT

The Rothacker-Aller Laboratory on Melrose avenue has been completed, and is in full swing. It is said to be the most complete and up-to-the-minute institution of its kind.

Joe Aller formerly of the D. W. Griffith organization and later heading his own establishment will personally supervise all developing and other activities.

MUMMERS ENTERTAIN AGAIN

The next Mummers' Workshop offering will commence on Monday evening, June 27, and continue for a week. A satire and a burlesque directed by Clarence Thomas, comprise a unique bill.

"Plots and Playwrights," by Edward Massey, is the satire, in two parts and a prologue. This play was first produced by Professor George P. Baker of Workshop 47 and was one of the Washington Square Players' successes when they produced it in New York.

Milton Monroe has charge of the settings and the players include Charles Meredith, Peggy Nelli, Paul Vickers, George Meredith, Fred Bauersfeld, Melba Melsen, Miriam Meredith, Helen Yoder, Harrie Wilbur, Philo McCullough, Earl Grant, Kenneth Miller, George Gramlich, K. Arath, and Wyn Ritchie.

"The Wonder Hat" is the burlesque in one act for which Ed Benneche is designing the set and costumes. The characters will be interpreted by Ann May, Lillian Leighton, Charles Meredith, Michael Dark, and Kenneth Miller.

FOX SIGNS DUSTIN FARNUM

Announcement comes that Sol M. Wurtzel, Fox general superintendent, has obtained the signature of Dustin Farnum for a long-term contract. Mr. Farnum will appear in a series of special productions.

ITALIAN AMERICAN SIGNS MADGE CUMMINGS

Miss Madge Cummings, formerly of Metro, has been signed by the Italian American Co. to play leads in its forthcoming productions.

DAVIDSON WITH BROWNING

John Davidson, who recently finished a role for Cecil B. de Mille, is playing an important part in the newest Tod Browning picture.

SHIPMAN HAS CONTRACT WITH ITALIAN PRODUCING ORGANIZATION
Ernest Shipman has returned to New York after a two months' trip abroad. While there he secured a five years contract with the Ultra Film Co. for American film production in Rome, Italy. This organization controls the output of the Nova, Berlino, Italia and other producing units.

Directors, continuity writers, authors, technical staffs, cameramen and artists will be chosen through Mr. Shipman's Los Angeles representative for production in Italy. The first company will leave early in August, and the second will follow early in September. A number of film men in New York city are identified with Mr. Shipman in this enterprise.

NOVO SIGNS GLADYS BROCKWELL
The Novo Film Syndicate, which is headed by R. A. Grace and Martin L. Anderson, both of St. Louis, will start production on or about the first of July, and have signed Gladys Brockwell as their star.

They will produce five real society dramas. Three stories have been purchased through the Photoplaywrights League. Adele Buffington is the author of the first and the second is a mystery melodrama, by Wycliffe A. Hill. Jack Atkins, vaudeville actor, is the author of the third story.

Phil Rosen will direct for Novo, and it is understood that the new company will rent space at Universal City.

CENTURY COMEDY CUTTING
Director Wm. H. Watson has finished cutting the comedy entitled "Where is My Husband?" It features Charles Dorety, supported by Viola Dolan, Inez MacDonald and Bert Roach.

Bert Longnecker has been added to the cast of "The Wolver," starring Tom Santtsch.

J. F. Rice and Al Clark are cast in the forthcoming Tom Santtsch picture entitled "The Wolver."

Jay Morely will have a part in "The Wolver," the third Tom Santtsch picture which Bob Bradbury is directing.

F. B. in Camera said:

Perhaps the most exquisite touches of the piece are accomplished by William Robert Daley, who interprets Joe Pelot. His is the ability to command a tear from any audience at will, and he does so again and again with this performance. His subtleness has created a masterpiece.

The Director and His Organization

Throughout our review of "Dream Street," an evening or so ago, we were repeatedly struck with the fact that, good picture though it is, speaking by and large, it misses sadly when put forth as a Griffith production.

Without being able to lay the blame for its inferiority as compared with the famous producer's foregoing offerings (several of which, by the way, have been the industry's greatest triumphs) entirely to any particular phase of the picture, such as the cast, continuity or general technique, we were constantly aware of errors in each and every department, so to speak, of the production. For instance, we continually sensed the absence of the Walthall, Harron and Gish interpretations of other days, not to mention a total lack of the exquisite sub-titles flawless photography and smoothly running scenario, which the name Griffith has heretofore insured.

Casting about for an explanation of the change, we found ourselves repeatedly returning to our starting point, the idea which had presented itself before the first reel had unwound before us. The master director is in his picture as before, but the incomparable minds with which his art has formerly been supported, the at-one-time well nigh infallible Griffith organization, was not present to smooth off the rough edges and tone down the noticeable exaggerations in this production.

There doesn't exist in our profession the man who is sufficient to meet all of the requirements of the perfect drama, any more than there exists such a one in any other line of endeavor. However, the co-operation of a staff like the one which for so long expended its best efforts under the Griffith banner, is capable of anything it attempts.

It is an admitted fact that we rarely appreciate the superior until its absence is made known. In a hundred little ways we recognize this difference in "Dream Street." It is to be greatly regretted.

F. R.

A Different Exchange

We understand that a two million dollar organization has been incorporated in New York for the distribution of films to those schools and churches who utilize the cinema as a part of their working programs. This opens a new field, and a consequent train of thought for our industry. Naturally those companies and individuals who turn out educational and religious subjects will welcome as a personal benefit the arrival of any concern that will facilitate the disposal of their products, and increase the returns on those products by distributing them through a channel which is in a position to reach, in all probability, a larger and certainly a more appropriate audience than can be found in the ordinary theatre.

So far, so good! But there is another angle of the affair also deserving of consideration. Will not many of our foremost producers of big, non-sectarian but spiritual dramas perceive possibilities for their own work if handled through a releasing organization of this kind? When one computes the number of religious and educational institutions today employing the bona fide photo-play in their progressions, it is discovered that, strange as it may seem, there is an opportunity open for someone or many to make legitimate fortunes attending to the wants and needs of these circles in the picture line.

Even the general statistics which we have collected on the subject are staggering, and we have scarcely scratched the crust. It gives us, as a rapidly developing industry, something to think about, anyway.

Youth and Us

Lule Warrenton, whom we understand to have been the first woman director of motion pictures, blew into the office a few days ago as peppily as ever with the gay announcement that her 58th birthday was in the process of celebration. Frankly, we could scarcely believe her figures, in view of the almost proverbial energy and capability which have marked her with unwitlable youth.

We were still meditating upon the marvels of our profession and the Golden State atmosphere when we bumped into California Truman on the boulevard. As everyone, at least every picture one knows, Miss Truman is another wonder of the ages. The first white girl child ever born in California more than seventy years ago, she displays in both her daily and screen life vitality that would be a credit to a high school girl. Verily, the members of our industry have in their art discovered the fount of youth eternal.
Film Capital Production Notes

NEW SINGLE REELERS

Comes the announcement by the Hollywood Motion Picture Corporation of this city, of its intention to produce series of single-reelers. These productions, the company states, will be produced in a way that will make them censor-proof. The company is now assembling its staff for the making of these productions. When completed, its personnel will be announced.

SECOND RUN STEWART PICTURE

The Quality Film Corporation is starting on its second production, with Roy Stewart as the star, assisted by Louise Lovely. Harry Reiver is the director and the story is a Northwestern, as yet unnamed.

R-D PRODUCTION ACTIVITIES

The R-D Film Corporation has secured the services of Alvin J. Neitz as director, who with his company is at Big Bear Lake shooting scenes for the forthcoming picture, which is in its second week of production. The R-D is the first of a series of six stories in which Jack Drum will play the lead, supported by Josie Sedgwick, J. B. Warner and Lew Meehan.

BARKER PICTURES SHORTLY

It is expected that within the next five weeks the Reginald Barker Productions will be launched in Hollywood. Distributing facilities will be announced shortly.

LATEST CHAPLIN COMEDY TITLED

"The Idle Class" has been chosen as the title for Charlie Chaplin's newest comedy, which is in its twentieth week of production.

EDWARD PEIL

Who plays Sway Wan in "Dream Street"

EDWARD KULL

Edward Kull is on location filming episodes for "The Terror Trail," the serial in which he is to appear starting next month. He will also have a role in the "Flying Fleet," the new series produced by the Vitagraph Corporation.

AT UNIVERSAL

Harry Carey has started work on "Partners," with Robert Thornby directing and Betty Ross Clark playing opposite the star. Gladys Walton has finished "Christine of the Young Heart" and will soon begin work on "The Girl Who Knew All About Men." The releasing agency has approved "I'm a Butler," the feature which serves Marie Prevost as her first starring vehicle. King Baggot is directing "From A. P. Youtz's" screen adaptation of the story by Percival Wilder. Edna Ferber's "Fanny Herself" is nearing completion and will be released.

AT VITAGRAPH

Earle Williams and company are still at the Lake Tahoe, where the timber section and wide views are affording material required for "Bring Him In," the production upon which Williams is working.

AT GOLDwyn

Tom Moore and his director, E. Mason Hopper, are using Will Rogers' riding ring at his Beverly Hills estate, to get equestrian scenes for "From the Ground Up," by Rupert Hughes.

AT REALART

The Wanda Hawley company, under the direction of Thomas N. Hodges, will go to Victorville for several days this week to make some of the concluding scenes for "Her Face Valued," directed by Percy Heath, based on the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Girls Who Paid Dividends," by Earl Derr Biggers.

Current Reviews

“BLACK ROSES”

California

“Black Roses,” in which John Copley’s latest Susse Hayakawa starring release, is easily the most absorbing crook mystery drama that we have reviewed for some time. In the first place, the story contains happily proportioned and pertinently introduced, all of the elements required to produce the interest, sympathy, opposition, motives, etc., which alone justify a complicated plot and exaggerated action. Our foremost scenarists have long known that when these fundamentals are combined with cleverly tuned suspense and a half dozen unexpected plot turns, as is the case in this production, the resulting photoplay can scarcely escape proving fascinating to any audience, and we need only ask the thriving producer to learn that the cinema capable of fascinating to-day’s sophistication is invariably proclaimed a success through that most significant of channels, the box office.

Treating an honest Jay gardener who is “framed” with the murder of his employer and railroaded to prison after his bride has been stolen to safeguard the real criminals, the picture’s action progresses through the gardener’s escape, and his resultant battle of wits to regain his wife and bring his torturers to justice.

Colin Clive’s direction is excellent, as is the cutting, while we believe that E. Richard Schayer deserves credit for the already commended story and the highly intelligible scenario. The direction is rather noticeably, however. Several soft focus effects employed by the cinematographer are admirable works of art, while at other times the camera work is only ordinary.

In his customary fine form Hayakawa interprets Yoda, the gentle-hearted servant whom circumstances mold into a keen manipulator of fate and an outwitted daring plotter. Well as we know the rural American, we cannot lay claim to having ever before witnessed the portrayal of an Oriental “boob,” but he is accomplished beautifully in the first reels of this story by this very popular Japanese actor. Besides being a thief, this part of the starred character provides the original heart interest, which starts the story off and keeps it going. Hayakawa is equally good through out and is one of the spirits of his role only enhances its appeal.

Tauri Aoki could not have improved her work as is evidenced, demure little bride. The love scenes of these two are the utmost in refinement.

Myrtle Stedman offers us one of her always vivid and intelligent heavies in Blanche de Vore, a ruthless.adventuress, whose “conscience finally gives her up.” It is always a joy to watch Miss Stedman get about a part, which reminds us that some of the profession’s newer acquisitions would do well to pattern the older screen generations for grace andGeo.

De Vore’s partner in crime, “Monocle” Harry, is convincingly done by Henry Herbert, whose work in this line has been attracting much attention of late. Herbert’s tempo is beautifully even and his transitions are excellent.

Toyo Fujita is also exceptionally good as the third conspirator, Wong Pu, which part he handles with obvious understanding.

Andrew Robson, Harold Holland, Carrie Clark Wood and Carrie McHugh complete the cast, save for the actor who makes the striking but minor role of Friday Fred, a convict friend of Yoda. The name of this latter is unimportant.

To one of the cleverest little dramatic acts upon the screen today, a girl whose excellent supporting work has left her in a class by herself, the Realart company says, “be another of our ingenues, Miss McAvoy, for we admire your prospects,” and forthwith that organization hands her for her starring introduction a sleeky, program story containing an antiquated theme that does its level best to diminish the interest which the fan world has come to feel in the art of May McAvoy, best known for her flawless interpretation of Grizel in “Sentimental Tommy.” It is unthinkable that real individuality should be provided with nothing better in the story line than the same old “punk,” endured by all of the others apparently for the sake of a few blankly pretty and asininely skittish, little bleached babies who are capable of nothing more. The public, from constant watching, has almost begun to look upon these last as representative of the best in American girlhood. Enough! To proceed:

The picture in question, “A Private Scandal,” by Hector Turnbull, is just about the average in its line. Outside of a somehow hackneyed plot, decorated with the usual number of conventional remarks, etc., there is little about it to be objected to. We have in mind several young actresses whom it would suit to a tee, but its star deserved better material.

Taken altogether, the cast is the best thing about it. Technically the production is standard.

Jeanne Millette, a little war orphan, who takes the blame of her foster mother’s wrong doing to save the latter’s home, is the role assigned to Miss McAvoy. She takes every possible advantage of her action and succeeds in making her character live in spite of the odds.

Bruce Gordon does very little with Jerry Hayes, the stable boy with whom Jeanne falls in love. He loses someway the sympathy which he should have had.

Ralph Lewis and Kathryn Williams accomplish some clever team work as Mr. and Mrs. Philip Lawton, always self-satisfied, negligent husband, which he here enacts, Lewis has it over most of his contemporaries, and Miss Williams is excellent as the erring wife.

Lloyd Whitlock is quite interesting in the role of Crosby, the “friend” who carries on a liaison with Mrs. Hayakawa. Chester Franklin directed “A Private Scandal.”

“DREAM STREET”

Mission

D. W. Griffith’s latest production, “Dream Street,” had its Los Angeles premiere on Wednesday, when it opened at the Mission for an indefinite run. The drama was suggested by two of Thomas Burke’s “Limehouse Nights” stories, which have been poetically combined, with considerable original material, into a thriller of the slums. As we have mentioned elsewhere in this issue, “Dream Street,” although somewhat more than favorably with the average picture of the day, is not up to the Griffith standard either artistically or technically. Its characterizations, save for that of Swan Wan, the Chinese heavy, and Billie McPadden, a sympathetic weakling, are oftentimes exaggerated and incongruent. Billy Buzier’s photography backslides noticeably, and the cutting is incomprehensibly jumpy. At that, however, the play is at all times absorbing, largely due to its producers’ well handled suspense, and, in all probability, it will be unreservedly accepted by the ordinary audience, due to its high entertainment value.

Carroll Dempster heads the cast in the role of Gypsy Fair, a child of the slums, who supports her father by dancing in a third rate show. To him, and to his dreams, dreams of fair and flowing streets, Miss Dempster has combined the famous mannerisms of Lillian and Dorothy Gish in this part with an incongruous effect, so that a supposed street urchin should jump about, toe in, startle like a wild animal at the most unexpected moments, and playfully cawt otherwise. It is scarcer than the proverbial be-wildering gestures, which would hardly be excusable in a wild thing, are really detrimental to the nerves of those "out front.”

Ralph Graves, as the bartender, who comes forth with mad abandon, of which, by-the-way, we never judged him capable from his past work, which has been, we believe, without exception, of a dignified nature. “Spike” is primarily an earthy soul, radiating with conceit and striving to cover his appealing youth with a ridiculously “hard boiled” attitude, which Graves exaggerates to the limit. Only when the lad sees the true light and discards his more violent mannerisms does his action become natural. The part might have proven the opportunity of a lifetime had its interpreter held himself a little more in hand, but even so he proves his versatility by it. We can’t help marveling that the direction did not tone down this particular piece of work.

If Edward Peil were a Chinaman, he would have been the perfect beau-tifully complete role in Sway Wan, the diabolic heavy, whose dreams have become evil in the sordid street; but Mr. Peil is not Oriental, and his characterization all the more remarkable.

Another exceptionally well cast and played part is accomplished by Charles Mack, who enacts Billy’s “cowardly but devoted brother. The plot hinges up this character’s development. If, as we have (Continued on Page 18).

BULLETIN ACTORS EQUITY ASSOCIATION

The offices has collected $855.00 for Equity members since April 1st, 1921.

The Executive Committee, as well as the members of the Actors' Equity Association present at the meeting June 1st, are on record as being opposed to a motion picture production starring or featuring Clara Smith Hamon.

On June 1st it was announced at the meeting that until further notice, no commission for the pictures would be charged on daily salary under $20.00 or on weekly salary under $100.00. On all other engagements, Equity charges 5%—in no case for a period over five weeks.

The State Executive Committee of the American Legion, on Saturday, June 11th, passed a resolution which will go a long way toward getting the National Committee to endorse similar resolutions that will cover the entire country. Meanwhile the Actors' Equity Association is handling a bill in Congress advocating a 60% ad valorem duty at port of entry on American cost of production, which will be placed imported films on a fair competitive basis with our American production.

The "Building of an Empire" will be staged for the Burbank Memorial Association Sunday, July 3rd. An arena with seats for 25,000 has been erected. A whole town is being built to house this spectacle. All Equity members, particularly men, are requested to help, as Equity will participate in the proceeds of this day. Phone Mr. Jack Connelly or Mr. Frank Newberg at this office.

All former members of the Actors' Association who have not as yet signed A. E. A. application blanks, should do so before July 1st, in order to take advantage of the $5.00 initiation that has already been paid for them by the Actors' Association.

We, this month, are able to announce the first one of the stores to come into the 10% fold. In New York, Sterns Bros. and others have for a long time allowed Equity members a 10% discount on all goods bought at their store. Now for Los Angeles. The Peggy Rose Shop at 6647 Hollywood Boulevard, will allow all Equity members in good standing, a discount of 10%; simply show your Equity card or receipt.

Two performances of the Equity Show in New York, played to $49,000.

Do you know that the total membership of Equity is close to 20,000? Do you know that Equity maintains a legal department for its members? If you haven't received your copy of Equity, you can get one at the office.

INGRAM IN NEW YORK

Rex Ingram, having completed the filming of "The Conquering Power," his newest Metro production, has departed for New York, where he expects to remain for several weeks.

George H. Kern expects to have his "Unfoldment" cut, titled and ready for its Los Angeles preview July 4th.

Katherine MacDonald, starring in "Peachie," and her company have returned from Santa Barbara and Montecito, where exteriors have been filmed for her new production.

The BORDER FEATURE FILM CORPORATION of Bisbee, Arizona, has just completed a sunlight stage which will accommodate four companies.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is progressing on his forthcoming comedy, "The Sky In The Limit."

Harry "Snub" Pollard is at work on his nineteenth, entitled "Fifteen Minutes," which Charles Parrott is directing. Marie Mosquini plays opposite the star.

AT LASKY'S

Jack Holt, recently elevated to stardom, is to begin work approximately the middle of July on his first stellar vehicle, which it is understood will be "Tall Timber," by James A. D. Scher.

Agnes Ayres will shortly return to Hollywood and it is planned to start her first star picture about the first of August.

Thomas Meighan will arrive in July and will probably start in August some time on "A Prince There Was," George Cohan's dramatic success.

Wallace Reid is completing his work as co-star with Elsie Ferguson in "Peter Ibbetson," a George Fitzmaurice production, in New York.

Penhryn Stanlaw starts presently on Betty Compson's second star picture, "The Woman in the Case," by Clyde Fitch. Will Carleton has been signed as leading man.

Ethel Clayton is completing "Her Own Money," under the direction of Joseph Hen- any, and when this is finished, she will be- gin work upon Clare Beranger's original picture "Exit the Vamp."

Nellie Peck Saunders is cast in Oliver Morose's "Slippy McGee."

Les Bates is playing the father in "By Right of Birth" at Trinity Auditorium.

Lawrence Underwood has been engaged by the Sunflower Pictures Corp. to direct their first production.

A. Bodo and Tom Regan have finished directing their second comedy for the Italian-American Film Corporation, and will start presently on their third production.

Chas. Force, who has been locationing at Natchez, Miss., with the "Slippy McGee" company, under the direction of Mr. War- ton, expects to return to Los Angeles in a few days.

PAULINE FREDERICK GIVES BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

Pauline Frederick will give a benefit performance for a local orthopedic hospital for crippled children. Will Rogers and other screen star will participate.

Clark Comstock has been re-engaged to play another character heavy with Tom Santschi.

Bessie Love and her mother are on a vacation trip to Miss Love's father's ranch near Bakersfield.

Charles Ray and Norma Talmadge were the winners of a beauty contest just held by a Duluth, Minn., newspaper.

PROCESS OF DEDUCTION

Chapter VI

We have now come to the point in the construction of our skeleton plot, where it is necessary to establish the manner in which we are going to handle the climax. The girl's father has arrived on the scene with a rescue party. Just as the prospector returns from across the river we discover that the old man has already lo-eated the young aviator, and has again threatened his life if the girl is not found. Naturally the young aviator, not being the hero of our story, will show a cowardly nature and cringe at the threats of the old man. Just now the prospector comes on the scene.

Wait just a minute! How are we going to keep the white girl and the Indian maiden from the cabin window across the river? There is one way in which we can accomplish this, and that is to assume that there is only one canoe, and that the prospector uses that in crossing.

Now we are going to have to do some thinking to prevent our story from losing speed here, and to avoid a weak climax. Let us assume that the old man is persuaded by the prospector to give the boy twelve hours in which to search for the girl. As a matter of fact, it might be that he wishes to have this length of time in which to battle his own selfish inclination and to bring himself to the point of making the sacrifice.

We must have something happen during the twelve hours which will afford some interesting and exciting action. We must also bring about a situation of some kind in which we can give both the prospector and the aviator a chance to demonstrate their comparative merits and to give the girl a chance to decide in favor of the prospector, if we are going to have him sacrifice the girl and then win her back. There are two ways of ending this story. One of them is to have the prospector sacrifice the girl and to have the aviator carry her in communion with nature. This is the way we would finish it if we were writing it for Mitchell Llewellyn, or Sayay Hayakawa, in which case, of course, we would play our prospector as an East Indian or a halfbreed. The other way is to have him make the sacrifice and then to have the girl capitate to him. It would, of course, be fatal to have him win the girl in any other way. The reason for this is that it would weaken his character, and make a villain of him.

We have decided to have him sacrifice the girl and then win her back by fair means, and not by a further crossing of the river.

How are we going to do this?

Let us assume that as night comes on, a storm blows up. We must bear in mind that our whole party is camping in a very narrow canyon, and that a cloud-burst might well the already rapid current of the river to the point where there is danger of drowning some of the girls. This storm will give us a chance for some good photographic effects. We can assume that the entire party of men are camped in the prospector's cabin, and as the wind blows, and lightning flashes are followed by a terrific downpour of water, we can get some good shots from the cabin window across the river.

We can also heighten the dramatic interest here, by having our prospector register his concern for the safety of the girl across the river, and resolve to immediately restore her to her father. By this crripled that an attempt on his part to save the girl, would result in sure death. The aviator proves to be a craven coward. The prospector dives in and saves the girl, at the great risk of his life.

After having been delivered into the arms of his father and returning with the party to the prospector's cabin, we can have a pretty scene in which the girl shows her gratitude to the brave prospector, for the risk of his life in saving her.

We can have a few more scenes which presumably occur the next morning in which the girl plainly shows her preference for the brave young prospector, and it is decided that he shall accompany the party back to civilization.

In the next chapter, we are going to pick up one or two angles of the plot which we have constructed here, and see if we cannot knit it together a little more closely and build it up somewhat.

STORIES WANTED

We have a very urgent call for a half-dozen of Western Mounted Police stories, for Irving Cummings, as well as one or two five-reeler of the same description. Another out of town company is in the market for several one-reelers in the North Woods. These last do not need to be of the Mounted Police.

The Novo Syndicate, which has just bought all its stories for the League for Glady's Brockwell, and which is going to start work shortly at the Louis Mayer Studios, will be in the market for three more stock dramas.

The Moranti Productions, producing at the Balboa Studios, at Long Beach, will shortly be in the market for another five reel western, featuring George Cheshire.

We are looking for a strong plot in five reels for the Priscilla Dean type. This story should be for Miss Dean, however.

Willis and Ingalls have called on us for a big society drama, containing an all-star cast, with a terrific punch and one which will make a six or seven reel special feature. Please mention this department of Camera when submitting this material.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Henry J. Hebert

The well-known screen heavy, Henry J. Hebert, has not spent his entire dramatic career upon the silver sheet. Before he became a screen favorite he spent several years on the legitimate stage supporting Robert Hilliard, Cyril Scott, Jane Cowl, and David Belasco. With the latter he spent three consecutive seasons. His last engagement was with Edwin Breeze in "The Master Mind."

Staring his film career with the Reliance in New York City, Hebert later came West with William Farnum to establish the Fox studio spot for Miss Dean. He has since played all of Mr. Farnum's heavies for two years. Later he returned East for six pictures with Paramount, but the beautiful Miss Dean was so compelling, that he returned for another year with Fox, appearing with Farnum once more in "Bad Men." He was employed as "Monocle" Harry in "Black Roses" at the California, a somewhat different heavy.

This very active artist is at present playing in "Imagination," supporting Robert Bosworth.

INTRODUCING BOB EVANS

In early days Bob served his time along juvenile lines in stock. He left the stage for a while then, and bought a ranch up north, where he played at ranching for over five years.

The call of the lights has brought him back, only to find all things have changed; so Bob gets busy, and after a year's study and preparation in advanced dramatic and screen acting technique under one of our best up-to-date actors and instructors in this line, Mr. Howard Gaye, who by the way was one of D. W. Griffith's right hand men in stock for more than four years, as well as having ten years of stage experience to back him, he is with us again.

Bob has a pretty complete training along all lines, and has brushed up considerably in the last year, having acquired a $20,000 outfit, anything from a walking stick to autos or tractors, which he will be glad to use in his work if called on. He not only can act, but is a good mechanic, driver, tractor operator, and in aeronautics his best sport is airplane stunting of all kinds. The rougher they make it the more he enjoys it. If there is anything Bob has missed in his past experiences and training he has not heard of it yet.

He has had camera experience, working on the quiet in small bits as an extra, while completing his studies. Bob shows to good advantage along sympathetic juvenile lines, but his past experience and training have put him in a position where he shows up well whatever part he is given to do, no matter how small.

So for anyone who happens to take a hold of Bob in the near future and handles him properly, there are great possibilities ahead.

Here is hoping for his success in the near future. Let everybody boost With such training and hard effort to get ahead and make good, we cannot afford to knock or ignore.

Anyone wishing to get in touch with him can reach him at the Y. M. C. A., Box No. 276.

heard, Billy is his first screen role, Mack is indeed an unusual find. Plays Chico, and

We would have enjoyed Tyrone Power as the preacher of the streets to a greater extent had he been allowed any real action. Porter Strong does a comedy "oom" to everyone’s extreme mirth; while W. J. Fergusson, Charles Slattery, George Neville and Morgan Wallace complete the cast.

"WHITE AND UNMARRIED"

 brutally

When one has said of "White and Unmarried," Thomas Meighan’s latest comedy drama for Paramount, that it is entertaining, the tale is told in its entirety. Outside of some sprightly comedy action, snappy subtitles and a generally happy outlook, there is no particular theme, plot or sympathetic character developed by it, and its introductory title to the contrary, there is certainly no “moral pointed.” However, it is something to have accomplished an attractive cinema play even if it be a bit aimless, and we can recommend no current release that will beguile an hour so pleasantly or pass it with such rapidity as this John Swan story.

A capital cast, surrounded by the customary Lasky-special luxury in sets, costumes, etc., make the most of the opportunities provided in the Will Ritchey scenario, which last depends upon swift and constant action for its success.

The story, which makes up in novelty what it lacks in consistency, deals with a burglar who deserts his profession, not because he reforms but on account of the fact that his uncle’s demise leaves him a les- surely millionaire, and he scorns to labor for his bread when it is no longer necessary.

All of which is at least logical.

The photography and technical effects are good throughout.

Meighan, a retired second-story worker, uses all of the well-remembered boisterous charm, which has lately been lost sight of somewhat in his heavier vehicles. His personality wins sympathy for the part rather than the action given him. As the romantic wanderer, this star is truly fitted to deliver the goods.

The feminine lead, a comparatively unimportant role, is satisfactorily handled by Jacqueline Logan, whose jazz dancing as Andree, the Parisian cabaretier, is mayhap a little more “the real thing” than her French mannerism. However, she is a pretty, happy child, and the part requires just such.

Grace Darmond is in her element when called upon to glide languidly through the boredom of overfed, underdone and over-come aristocracy. She plays Dorthea Welter, a daughter of wealth, whose appearance in the story exceeds, perhaps, her importance to the plot. Personally we were delighted that such was the case, for we find her always interesting in this type of thing.

Walter Long and Lloyd Whitlock combine forces to provide some almost appalling opposition. The former plays Chico, an exaggerated Apache, in that rare way of his, while Whitlock is seen in the part of Count Marechel, an unscrupulous impostor.

Frederick Vroom and Marion Skinner are very good as Dorthea’s parents and together with George Stone and Jack Herbert, end the list of players.

Tom Forman’s guidance of the Imagina- tive and almost facetious subject was very wise. The fact that he “kidded” It a little prepared it for easy digestion.

If relief is what one craves, “White and Unmarried” is it.

George Nichols will be seen in HarryCarey’s forthcoming picture, “Partners,” which Robert Thorby is directing.

“OVER THE WIRE”

Tally’s

Metro releases an Alice Lake production locally this week. It is entitled “Over the Wire,” and is the story of a woman whose love is divided between her dead brother and her husband whom she believes, for a time, to have been the indirect cause of the former’s suicide. The whole is quite entertaining, although dreary places put in their appearance now and again. Photographically the picture is only fair. Miss Lake has considerable appeal in the featured role. She plays the daughter of an aristocratic but no longer wealthy family, whose one interest in life is her younger brother. The effect of his suicide upon her and her determination to make his supposed persecutor pay, form fairly solid business upon which to lay a plot. Considering that she is no particular type, Miss Lake gets along remarkably.

Albert Roscoe is seen in the masculine lead. He plays the stern, just, competent millionaire who marries the sister of the impulsive lad for whom he had planned salvation rather than death. Roscoe is always well cast in straight parts such as this.

George Stewart surprised us with his unusual character delineation as the lovable but spoiled weakling who causes all of the trouble. He really accomplishes much sympathy for an inadmirable part, and we thoroughly enjoyed all of his work.

The heavy in this piece is the work of Alan Hale who, we took it, was merely present to provide more story complications. He does Twofold, a Wall Street spectator. Hale is an excellent type.

Wesley Ruggles directed this drama.

The Ampico Spreads Itself

The greatest advertising genius of the world has proclaimed the motion picture to be the most effectively known medium by which to sell the public an idea, whether it be commercial or sentimental, and this statement is proven daily, probably a thousand times over, wherever the film is shown; which brings us down to a consideration of advertising in the theatre, its uses and abuses. Personally, we believe that if it is handled subtly, screen publicizing can accomplish great good for both those who employ it to extend their scope and to the exhibitors who encourage it in their houses, without offending the average audience, or giving it the idea that its entertainment is being "sold at both ends."

However, to accomplish anything like satisfaction in this line, extreme care, or rather the rare art of delicate suggestion, must be utilized alone. When material of this kind becomes obvious, takes on, for instance, bill board proportions, nothing but disaster ensues. Quite naturally, the advertiser is blamed by the public for infringing upon its recreation ground, but the harm done him is as nothing compared to the avalanche of resentment and disgust which descends upon the head of the unwise showman who has permitted the occurrence. Such a mistake needs only to be recognized once to ruin his rating and the popularity of his house.

And the people are right! Having paid their admissions (the legitimate earnings of the theatre owner), why should they be forced to sit through thirty minutes or more of foolishness such as Mr. T. L. Tally presented last week for the financial improvement of the Knabe-Ampico Player-Piano Company and himself? Why should a miserably put together storyette, ridiculously played and with each subtitle smacking of a newspaper advertisement, be thrown down the throats of a company whose money has been handed out that it might obtain an hour's bana fecal amusement?

We are willing to wager that, had an interesting little split reel containing, in a scene or two, an unheralded Ampico with the trade mark in view, been tacked into the program, real good would have been derived by the manufacturers of the instrument; and the thought that Tally's Theatre was betraying its confidence would never have presented itself to the audience. Truly it isn't always so much the principle of a thing that counts as it is that principle's application. Mr. Tally was not long ago Los Angeles' foremost exhibitor. We repeat, it doesn't pay to annoy one's patrons even for thirty minutes.—F. R.

Retaliation?

We read the following in England's "The Kinetograph Weekly," which we credit with being able to veil its threats quite subtly. Our own views on this subject do not require another rehearsal at this time, but it is interesting to note that since, according to Robert Bron- ton, the foreign market only brings on an average of from ten to twelve per cent of a picture's profits anyway, it would decidedly pay us to risk all of the European taxation that can be handed us while protecting our own product and its creators.

"America—or certain sections of the Trade in that country—is very actively concerned with difficulties arising from the import of European films, and a clamour for Protection is going up which finds some support in Congress. The probability of this move was foreshadowed in the Kine, more than six months ago; it is now taking very definite shape and will have to be reckoned with by European producers who hope to get into the American market regularly.

"Marshall Neilan, Marion Fairfax and Al Christie are among those actively engaged in the propaganda for a high duty, which they declare is not intended to exclude the European product but to protect the American maker against price-cutting. They base their case chiefly on the difference in the cost of production in America and Europe, stating that a film can be made in certain countries for one-tenth of what it costs in the States.

"In this attitude they have the weighty support of Herbert Hoover, now the American Secretary of Commerce, who bases his approval of the suggested taxation on the state of the exchange, and who, apparently, would not support any tax beyond that which will automatically reduce the importer's advantage on this head. But this, in itself, is a sufficiently important matter, the relative cheapness of the European film being its biggest asset in America under present conditions.

"Samuel Goldwyn has come out with a protest against the proposed taxation, and although, as a large importer, nowadays, of European films, he is not impartial, his influence is probably considerable—as is that of Famous-Lasky, which is also, in view of its German affiliations, interested in the maintenance of an open market. But the tendency of America towards high duties and the present political complexion of Congress are ominous.

"One fact which the European producer will not easily forget, in view of the fact that the Americans are basing their campaign on comparative costs of production, is that (Continued on page 17)
Film Capital Production Notes

NEILAN TO PRODUCE FIRST ANTI-CENSORSHIP PICTURE

Marshall Neilan, upon completion of his present First National picture, "Bits of Life," will write and produce a picture for the Public Rights League of America, presenting a screen reply to the reformers and censorship agitators. An all-star cast will portray the different characters and the negative will be turned over to the League free of all charges, it is asserted.

WILLIS AND INGLIS, PRODUCERS

Enlarging the scope of their work in the motion picture industry, the firm of Willis and Inglis announce that, beginning July 1st, they will discontinue their agency and booking department, to confine their activities to production, the management, the financing of companies, and to film exploitation.

They will continue, however, to act in an advisory capacity between producers and distributors, and intend to retain and enlarge their present book-and-play department.

SECOND STAHN PICTURE MAKING

John M. Stahl this week began the filming of his second independent unit offering at the Louis B. Mayer studios. Like its predecessor, "Retribution," it will be presented by Mr. Mayer through Associated First National.

NORMA TALMADGE IN NEW PICTURE

Norma Talmadge, who has been vacationing at Bayside, L. I., will begin Aug. 1st, starring opposite John Barrymore in "Smilin' Through," written by Manning Martin, sometime this month.

In this picture, which Herbert Brenon will direct, Miss Talmadge will be seen in the part which Jane Cowl interpreted recently on the speaking stage.

"GOOD FOR NOTHING" IN PRODUCTION

Constance Talmadge has started work on her newest First National picture, "Good for Nothing," an original John Emerson-Anita Loos story.

Kenneth Harlan will be Miss Talmadge's leading man, and John Emerson will personally direct this picture.

EPISODE THREE RELEASED

"The Strange Disappearance" is the title of episode three of the Pathe serial, "The Yellow Arm," produced by E. Mason Hopper, and starring Edna Goodspeed and Walter O'Gorman.

TOM MOORE BUSY

Tom Moore, Goldwyn comedian, will finish this week "From the Ground Up," an original screen story by Rupert Hughes, under the direction of E. Mason Hopper, and will immediately start production on "The Man With Two Mothers," an original story by Alice Duer Miller, which Paul Bern will direct.

GOLDWYN TO PICTURIZE "GRAND LARCENY"

Goldwyn announces the purchase of "Grand Larceny," a magazine story by Albert Payson Terhune, for motion picture production.

AT UNIVERSAL

Frank Mayo is appearing as a two-fisted circuit rider in his newest starring picture, "The Reverend Meddler," a story of the Southern mountains which William Worthington is directing.

Lee Moran is progressing in his forthcoming "Laughograph," a short reel comedy called "A Mile a Minute," in which he is being directed by Billy Watson from the story of Scott Darling.

"Miss" DePompeo has started work on her first feature picture, "The White Peacock Feather," in which she will be directed by Jack Conway. Will someone kindly inform us concerning this lady's front name? Jack Parrin has been engaged as the leading masculine character.

Production has started on Gladys Walton's forthcoming feature, "The Ark Angel," with Major David Kirkland directing. The unit is now at San Pedro. Jack Mower is playing opposite the ingenue.

VITAGRAPH

Earle Williams and his co-director, Robert Ensminster, have returned to the studio from Lake Tahoe after an absence of several weeks devoted to shooting exteriors for "Bring Him In," the current Williams feature.

Henry B. Walthall is to head an all-star cast in David Smith's next special production from one of James Oliver Curwood's novels. The scenario has been written by Bradley J. Emmerson.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is nearing the completion of his thirteenth two-reeler, at present titled "The Sky Is the Limit." The script was written by Hal Roach and Sam Taylor, with Fred Newmeyer directing.

The Ruth Roland company leaves next week for Balboa where shots will be taken for a sequence of "White Eagle," Miss Roland's serial now under production.

MACDONALD TO PRODUCE AT WARNER'S

The Foremost Pictures Corporation, a comparatively new organization, has leased space at Warner Bros. Studios, and will start work July 5th upon its first production, "A Western Princess," starring Jeanette Macdonald, who will vacate a time from acting to fill this engagement.

Bert Cannon, who has spent the last four years at the Thos. H. Ince Studios, will photograph the picture for the new company.

MESTAYER FEATURED

After completing his present western tour on the legitimate stage in various Ibsen dramas, Harry Mestayer will proceed to New York to be featured there in pictures and a new play.

"THE FOOLISH MATRONS"

Symphony

The current Wallie Reid-Paramount comedy just about accomplishes in entertainment value, the regular Reed standard for good interpretations, a fast moving scenario, pleasing photography and amusing subtitles.

"TOO MUCH SPEED"

Grauman's

The current "Roaring Road" and "Double-Speed," this Byron Morgan story from the Saturday Evening Post entitled "Too Much Speed" may suffer from a sameness when compared with the old releases first mentioned, but everything considered any sort of speed will pass muster in 1921, which inevitability is taken advantage of in this production.

Mr. Reid once again makes a picturesque and romantic demon of the road in this race track story. He enacts Dusty Rhodes, a driver who almost gives up his career for a wife and—trucks. We take it that Wallie will please the ladies as usual.

Opposite the star appears Agnes Ayres, as have appeared nearly everyone of the newer Paramount feminine stars at one time or another. She does prettily, and with spirit, Virginia MacMurran, daughter of a motor truck magnate who objects to racing sons-in-law.

Daddy MacMurran, as might be easily guessed, is played by no other than Theodore Roberts, whose present role almost duplicates one which he filled with Reid in a former automobile story. However, Roberts in any sort of business never ceases to delight Grace MacMurran.

Jack Richardson and Guy Oliver provide all the trouble in the roles of Hells, MacMurran's business rival and Zecker, a crooked racer; they are both dependable. Lucien Littlefield does well the minor role of Jimmy Rodman, a crippled "has been" of the track. This actor has shown considerable versatility of late. His work is reminiscent of the material handled for Lasky by Raymond Hatton in the old days.

Frank Urson used admirable judgment in his handling of this picture.

"PARDON MY FRENCH"

California

Taken all in all, perhaps the poorest excuse for an entertaining screen play that we have reviewed in six months is "Pardon My French." MacKenna and Seymour are latest offering through Goldwyn. A miserably constructed story by Edward Childs Carpenter which contains, annoyingly combined, drama, burlesque and straight slapstick in apparently an attempt at farce, starts the picture off toward the rocks to which it is hardly supported by exceedingly poor technique and terrible performances.

The theme of the story, if there be one worthy of the name, is a continual insult to the theatrical profession. Ridiculous "take-offs" on the road show and motion picture outfit cannot escape proving detrimental in some quarters to the esteem in which we are held, no matter how obviously overdrawn they have been made for comedy. They are always mistakes and should be disavowed.

The direction by Sidney Olcott is far from satisfactory, and the subtitles, which are credited to Irvin Cobb, rarely prove a laugh, although several are quite obviously for such. Subtitle writing is an art in itself, requiring more than a humorous outlook and literary cleverness to master.

Vivian Martin is featured or starred or something in this playplot. She plays Polly, a stranded road show performer who becomes a maid by day and quite needlessly falls in love with the billboard name of an actor whom she has never seen. Possibly Miss Martin's failure to impress favorably in this role is largely due to her action; but she certainly is no success as a slapstick artist and the release of this picture is to injure both her popularity with the public and her professional standing.

There doesn't seem to be a leading man in the story. The casting of the "little name" of Millicuddy, with Polly is infatuated, materializes in the last reel in time to marry the heroine for no reason at all except that the production has to end someway. Wallace Ray is cast in this mere bit, which any extra man might have done with equal grace and ingenuity.

Nothing about their work is true either to life or to farce.

Grace Studiford and Walter McEwen as the heavies, Count Carstairs and Marquis de Void, might be said to be so "rotten, they are good." This last is more expressive than elegant, but the Countess and the Marquis are far from elegant themselves.

George Spink and Thomas Meeghan complete the cast in inconsistent roles.

If the Christie Comedy plant couldn't turn out better pictures than this so-called "feature," and display players with more ability than we see in it, the Christie Films could exist no longer on a paying basis. Here's hoping for no more! Ken Mr. Kendall!

FRITZIE BRUNETT

Perhaps to some of us who distinctly recollect "The Roaring Road" and "Double-Speed," this Byron Morgan story from the Saturday Evening Post entitled "Too Much Speed" may suffer from a sameness as compared with the old releases first mentioned, but everything considered any sort of speed will pass muster in 21, which inevitability is taken advantage of in this production.

Mr. Reid once again makes a picturesque and romantic demon of the road in this race track story. He enacts Dusty Rhodes, a driver who almost gives up his career for a wife and—trucks. We take it that Wallie will please the ladies as usual.

ANOTHER MUMMER PERFORMANCE

Another delightful week of performances has just closed at the Mummers' Workshop on Morgan Place, where very clever plays and playlets are offered now and again for the organization and its friends by the drama department.

HOLLYCRAFT SIGNS FOUR YEAR OLD

Lynwood Crystal Rapp, the four-year-old child, who played the juvenile lead in Mary Pickford's "Pollyanna," will be featured by the Hollycraft Motion Picture Corporation in a series of single-reel tabloids to be released weekly.

The operating staff of the company as at present composed, consists of Bryant S. Young, managing and supervising director; Philip H. Kochler, business manager, and A. J. Bushfield, distributing manager.

SYLVIA BREAMER OPPOSITE TOM MOORE

Sylvia Breamer will play opposite Tom Moore in his newest screen offering, "The Man with Two Mothers." This will make Miss Breamer's third consecutive Goldwyn picture, she having but recently finished "A Poor Relation" with Will Rogers, also "Double for Romeo," another Will Rogers picture.

AUGUST BAKER SIGNS LORRAINE

Harry Lorraine has been engaged to play an important part in the Baker production to follow "Garments of Truth," now in production, and at present, is negotiating with Guy Bates Post for a role in Mr. Post's forthcoming picture, "Omar, the Tentmaker.

ELMER RICE ON REALART STAFF

Elmer Rice has been engaged by Elmer Harris, supervising director, for staff work at the Realart Studio. Mr. Rice is the author of "On Trial" and other stage successes, and has recently completed writing continuity for an Ethel Clayton Paramount picture, "Her Own Money."

GRAND OPERA STAR IN PICTURE PLAY

Marietta Alrich, former Chicago and Manhattan Grand Opera star, has been chosen to interpret one of the leading roles in the forthcoming production of "The Rubaiyat.

DORIS DAVIDSON IN "THE ROSARY"

Dore Davidson, remembered as the father in "Humoresque," has been chosen for an important part in the forthcoming Selig production of "The Rosary.

NEW CASTING DIRECTOR FOR METRO

William Carruthers, formerly casting director for Robertson-Cole, has resigned from that organization to undertake a similar position for Metro.

RUSHTON ON BARKER STAFF

Reginald Barker's first step in his plans for individual picture production is the engagement of Roland Rushton as assistant for at least two productions.

STAHIL SIGNS LEADS

John M. Stahl has selected Nanine Wright and Gaston Glass to play two of the leading roles in his new all-star offering.

Thomas Carr will have a part in "Good for Nothing," the latest Constance Talmadge picture, now in production at the Talmadec Studios, New York.

ARTHUR CAREWE IN CLASSIC

Arthur Carewe has been selected to enact one of the principal roles in "The Rubaiyat," being directed by Ferdinand Earle.

SENNETT STAR LOANED TO FOX

George O'Hara, who has the leading juvenile role in Mack Sennett's "Heartburn," has been borrowed from the Sennett organization and will appear with Shirley Mason in her forthcoming starring vehicle, "Queenie." O'Hara is under contract with Mack Sennett.

IN REGGIE MORRIS COMEDIES

Nelly Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, Jack Duffy and Margaret Cullington are appearing in the comedies being made by Reggie Morris at the Berwick Studios.

BOBBY VERNON RE-ENGAGED

Bobby Vernon is back in the Christie fold and is already finishing his second picture, made since his return. It is as yet untitled, but will be released in two reels.

THREE NEW PLAYERS FOR "BITS OF LIFE"

Marshall Neilan recently signed three more players for the final episode in his "Bits of Life." The latest acquisitions are Harry Hammond, Noah Beery and John Bowers.

Eddie Sutherland will play the masculine lead opposite Juianna Hansen in "A Western Princess."

Lillian Rich has the leading feminine role in "The Reverend Meddler," the current Frank Mayo production.

Hedwiga Relcher has one of the stellar roles in Ferdinand Earle's production of "The Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam.

Glenn Lambert, formerly director of Sunbeam Comedies, has been added to the scenario staff of the C. L. Chester Studio.

Edward Jobson has been selected for a part in Bert Lytell's new Metro picture, "Junk," a Maxwell Karger production.

Joe Mitchell, actor and author, has been placed in charge of the scenario department at the Buster Keaton studios.

Ernest Palmer will be in charge of the camera work of Stahl's second independent offering, to start production at the Louis B. Mayer studio.

George Fawcett has been chosen for an important role in the next Constance Talmadge production, "Good for Nothing," an original story by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

Bert Offord has closed with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers," and has been added to the cast of "Gas, Oil and Water," Charles Ray's latest starring vehicle.

Frank Norcross has signed with Ernest Shipman's Italian Company, and will leave for Italy at once. Mr. Norcross has just finished an important part with Geo. Baker in "Garments of Truth."

It is understood that Charlotte Pierce will play the most important feminine role in Charles Ray's next and tenth production for First National release, the title of which has not yet been decided upon.

Frederick Warde has just celebrated his golden wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Warde, after nearly half a century of "trouping" from town to town and from state to state with leading theatrical productions, have settled down to make their home in Los Angeles.

Mr. Warde will divide his time between The Mission Play and pictures. He is now playing Omar in Ferdinand Earle's screen production of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

Four children and seven grandchildren are monuments to the Warde's extended term of domestic felicity, and scores of telegrams and letters of congratulations have poured in from all parts of the world.

IRENE RICH HOUSES ORPHANS

The farm, which Irene Rich purchased in the San Fernando Valley near Burbank some years ago, will serve hereafter as a home, agricultural school and health resort for four Los Angeles orphans. A rambling building has been erected, and an athletic field and plunge will constitute part of the equipment. Miss Rich will add to the population of her "farm" gradually, as its development permits.

NEILAN FILM AT BIG CUSTER ANNIVERSARY

Marshall Neilan's "Bob Hampton of Places," in which Custer's last stand serves as the climax, will be shown at the anniversary of the Custer battle, to be held soon at Hardin, Montana.

The showing of a specially dedicated print of the Neilan film will be one of the features of the evening's entertainment, to be staged outdoors.

HELEN JEROME EDDY ON VACATION

Helen Jerome Eddy is planning a trip to New York in the near future.

Her last picture, "The Pen-Dollar Raise," a Peter B. Kyne story picturized by Frothingham for Associated Producers, was completed a short time ago.

"THE LOST ROMANCE" SOON AT RIALTO

"The Lost Romance," a Paramount production by William De Mille, with Conrad Nagel, Jack Holt and Lois Wilson, will open soon at Grauman's Rialto.

KEENAN TO TOUR IN "RIP VAN WINKLE"

Frank Keenan, who is starring in the famous stage play "Rip Van Winkle" at the Mason, will take the play on tour on the completion of his current engagement.

ANITA STEWART PICTURE COMPLETED

The final scenes of Louis B. Mayer's latest Anita Stewart production, "A Question of Honor," have been filmed under the direction of Edwin Carewe, and an early release is expected.

NEW VON STROHEIM PICTURE

Erich Von Stroheim is reading a new story preparatory to starring another production.

Who has signed a three-year contract with the Hollycroft Motion Picture Corporation to be featured in each picture.

MARION WARDE BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

On the evening of July 8th, at the Gamut Theatre, Marion Warde will present Jane Miskimmon, supported by the Marion Warde Players in a revival of the old drama, "Little Lord Fauntleroy." The performance will be given as a benefit for the Overseas Club of Los Angeles.

Those in the cast are little Miss Miskimmon, Dorothy Keeler, J. Newton Thompson, Mr. Hugh Griffith, Marion Garvin, John Aldson, Wlma Whitney, Bebe Griffin, Christine Turrell, Leonard Zellers, Murray Ellwood, and William Maloney.

A woman's orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Kate Speck, will furnish the music.

HAROLD LLOYD "ACT" AT ELKS' BENEFIT

Harold Lloyd has received an invitation to put on an "act" at the Elks' benefit, which will be given at the Ambassador Hotel on July 2d.

MAY McAVOY AT CATALINA

May McAvoy, having completed "A Virginia Courtship," under the direction of Frank V. O'Connor, has gone to Catalina Island for a vacation.

BESSIE LOVE—STUDENT

A summer course at a Los Angeles university is claiming Bessie Love's attention. She will study drama, English literature and psychology.

GREEK PLAYS IN PRIVATE AMPHITHEATRE

A series of Greek plays, enacted by prominent film luminaries, is to be sponsored by Noah Beery in the outdoor amphitheatre of his Hollywood home. Mr. Beery will both act and direct.

CHANGES NAME

Ruth Mae Miller has decided that henceforth her screen name will be Patsy Ruth Miller. Miss Miller makes the change because there is another Ruth Miller in the films. She will next will be seen in the Rockett Company's latest picture, "Handle with Care."

"HEART'S HAVEN" COMPLETED

"Heart's Haven," the latest Benjamin B. Hampton production, has just been completed under the co-direction of Eliot Howe and Jean Hersholt. The photoplay is an adaptation of the novel by Clara Louise Burnham.

RITA WEIMAN GOES TO NEW YORK

Rita Weiman, author of "The Grim Comedian," which was recently filmed at the Goldwyn studios under the direction of Frank Lloyd, left this week for New York, having completed her work on the production.

HARRY BEAUMONT TO DIRECT VIOLA DANA

Harry Beaumont has signed a contract to head a Metro unit that will film special productions in which Miss Dana will be starred. "The Fourteenth Lover," a story by Alice Duer Miller, will be the first of Miss Dana's productions under the new arrangement.

Miss Edith Kennedy, previously with Lasky's scenario department, will furnish scripts for the Beaumont unit, and is now at work on the first of the new series. Actual filming of the picture will be started immediately on Miss Dana's return to the studio.

KERN ACTIVITIES

"The Unfoldment" is now completely edited and titled. It will be released as a George H. Kern special production in seven reels, after a forthcoming preview.

Two continuities are being made of "The Last Days of Pompeii," Kern's next picture. Harry Ellis Dean is drafting one with Phil De Esco collaborating, while Kern is working on the other with Henry Knollmiller assisting. The most effective version will be shot, after a selection has been made by a vote of the entire organization.

Phil De Esco, technical expert, has recently returned from Catalina with a supply of photographs showing locations which he has selected for the new picture which has been retitled "The Scarlet Avalanche," owing to the protest of the Italian Film Corporation of Rome, Italy, which has just started a European production on "The Last Days of Pompeii," and that there would be no contention when negotiating with exhibitors.

NEW HALLROOM BOYS COMEDY

The newest of the Federated Hallroom Boys Comedies which has just been released at the offices of the Hallroom Boys Photo-plays, Inc., for release through Federated Film Exchange of America, Inc., is titled "We Should Worry." Sid Smith, as Perey, is featured in these two-reel gloom dispellers.

MARIAN WIGHTMAN—HONOR GUEST

Marian Wightman is to be the honor guest at a Majestic Theatre party given her by her co-workers at the Ince Studios during the coming premier presentation of her comedy, "Peter," which is to follow the present Thomas Wilkes offering, Mary Newcomb and Robert Edeson, in the title role, will star in Miss Wightman's comedy, which Thomas Wilkes announces he will take to New York following its engagement here. Miss Wightman is a member of the Ince scenario staff.

Edwin Stevens will have an important part in "The Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam, now in production at the Hollywood Studios.

Tom Royan has just finished directing his third comedy for the American Film Co., featuring Walter Wills, the New York musical comedy star.

NEW NEILAN PICTURE

"Bits of Life," the current Neilan production, is finishing, and production on the next Neilan picture will start immediately. This will necessitate a trip for the staff to New York. There will also be a number of scenes shot in Canada.

BARBARA TENNANT

Who is filling an engagement with Fox.

BOSWORTH FEATURE FINISHING

Hobart Bosworth, with Madge Bellamy and an all-star supporting cast, is working on the closing scenes of his second independent production, temporally titled "Remonciation," on the Bosworth private yacht, "Comfort," off San Pedro. The screen adaptation of the original story is by Emily Johnson.

"BIG BOY BRONSON" MAKING

The Charles R. Seeling Productions, Inc., have just started on another five-reel western feature entitled "Big Boy Bronson." The story was written by Elizabeth Gordon Silver, continuity by the company staff.

VALENTINO LASKY STAR

One of the interesting announcements of the week has been made by Jesse L. Lasky, of the engagement of Rudolph Valentino to play the title role in "The Sheik," George Melford's next Paramount production, which starts July 11th.

Edward S. Curtis, the noted Indian photographer, whose work is considered one of the art classics, is creating an entirely new type of still photo in connection with "The Rubaiyat," which Ferdinand Earle is filming at the Hollywood Studios.

AT LASKY'S

When Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle starts his new picture, under the direction of James Cruze, temporarily called "Via Fast Freight," he will go immediately to Chicago for big scenes in the metropolis. On securing these the company will return to the studio to make the interior scenes. Betty Compson has begun work on her second star picture under the direction of Penrhyn Stanlaws. This is Clyde Fitch's play, "The Woman in the Case," adapted to the screen by A. S. LeVine.

Tom Forman will direct Thomas Meighan in his new picture, "A Prince There Was," which is scheduled to start production around August lst.

William deMille has completed the shooting of "After the Show," adapted by Hazel Macomiel and Vianna Knowland from Bita Weiman's story, "The Stage Door." The picture is now in the cutting room and in the meantime the producer is preparing for his next picture, as yet unnamed.

Immediately on the return of Wallace Reid from New York and the completion by Gloria Swanson of her second star picture, "Under the Lash," the two stars, together with Elliott Dexter, will begin work on a special feature entitled, "Rainbow's End," written by L. Lorna Moon, which Sam Wood will direct.

FLATHEAD PRODUCTIONS

Art Staton, well known western player, has been signed by Flathead Productions to star in a five-reeler which will be filmed in and around the Flathead and Blackfoot Indian reservations of Montana. P. Dempsey Tabler will direct and Hazel Hart has been selected by T. E. Linden, production manager, to play opposite the star, according to C. O. D. Blanchfield, who will supervise the distribution, the first vehicle being a tale of the Northwest timber lands.

Leonard Wheeler has been engaged by the Italian-American Film Co. as film editor.

Gilbert Warrenton has been transferred by Famous-Players to the West Coast and is photographing Betty Compson at the Lasky studios.

Frank Granson is approaching the half way mark on his latest production, "Lotus Blossom," which is in work at the Boyle Heights studio.

Steve Roberts, formerly associated with the William S. Hart Productions, is now associated with Lambert Hillier, in the direction of Ince productions.

Matt Silverstein, Proprietor
secuted him in the past. Here we have the situation of a love affair between enemies. This strengthens the prospector's motive in concealing the whereabouts of the girl, from her father, some time later. He is not only in love with the girl, but here is a chance for him to secure revenge against the father.

Chapter VIII

We practically finished the construction of the first rough draft of our plot in our last installment. As promised, we are now going to take up one or two angles and follow them out with the idea of establishing some possible new developments, which will strengthen our plot, and knit it more closely together.

We have said very little about the past history of any of our principals in this story. For instance, the suggestion comes that they may have borne some relation to one another at some time in the past. Without having to refer to any printed list, our knowledge of the basic dramatic situations tells us that there is one entitled "The Co-Prospectors." This is one of the thirty-seven basic situations, on which all drama and fiction is founded. It is any situation in which a person finds himself to be in love with another who is, through some circumstance, an enemy, or who is the kinsman of an enemy. The more dramatic situations we get into the plot, the more interesting it will be.

The above line of reasoning suggests that it might be a good idea to establish the fact that our young prospector and the white girl are traditional enemies, or that she is the kinsman of his enemy. This being the case, we would naturally think of her father as an enemy of the prospector. In what way?

Suppose that her father had formerly been a sheriff, and that the prospector had been accused of a crime of which he was not guilty—railroaded to the penitentiary, and then escaped. This would give him a very good reason to seek the isolation of the mountains, as he would then be a fugitive from justice. The next question is: What was the crime with which he was charged? Of course it would have to be a serious one, so as to get sentenced to prison. Let us assume that the son of the old man, and the brother of the girl, was murdered and that the prospector was falsely accused of the deed. In our present little plot might be the fellow who really committed the murder, before fleeing to the mountains for the same reason as our prospector. We could establish the fact that he was told by some cattle men of the location of the other two prospectsors, so as to avoid mixing this part of our story too coincident.

The question here is: How are we going to prevent both the old man and his daughter from recognizing him as the escaped convict, as soon as they see him? We could prevent the girl from recognizing him by simply establishing the fact that she had never met him. The old man would not recognize him, if he were to pass him, as the prospector recognized the old man, at which time, however, he keeps his counsel. Through a conversation with the girl, and her suspicion of the prospector's artlessness, the prospector may have learned that she is the daughter of the man who has per-whom we accused of being at the Superba last week. We were all wrong. It is this week and "Wolves of the North" is the picture.

Another one of the basic dramatic situations is: "To learn of the dishonor of a loved one." The dramatist, or a photo-dramatist, who knows his business, does not have to refer to a text book to know this. We can introduce this basic situation into our story by having the girl discover, or think she discovers, that the prospector is the man who murdered her brother. She might find a pistol in his cabin, which bears peculiar markings, and which she recognizes as being one which was formerly owned by her brother. This would give her a very good motive for running away from his cabin and going across the river to the cabin of the villain, which you will remember, we had her do a short time before the fight, in which the Indian girl shots the villain.

Right away, if you are following closely, you will ask: "What was the prospector doing with the brother's gun?" That's easy. You remember we had a big fight between the prospector and the villain. After the villain had thrown the prospector's friend over the cliff, early in the story. Our prospector could have taken the gun away from the heavy at that time.

It does not require much exercise of the imagination to find a way of clearing the prospector in the eyes of the girl. This could be solved by a confession of the villain, after he had been shot by the Indian girl, and the prospector has returned to the other side of the river. Now there is only one thing left to be explained. That is: How was the girl's brother murdered and why was suspicion thrown upon our prospector? This we will leave to work out in our next installment.

In the next issue of Camera!, it being a special scenario edition, we will also devote some extra space to a study of Suspense, Heart Interest, Pathos, and Climax, using the various component parts of the plot with which we have just created to illustrate the same.

STORIES WANTED

We want a good big outdoor story for Frank Glendon. Neither a typical western cowpuncher, nor a mining camp story is wanted. We would say that a strong plot in which Mr. Glendon can play the part of a civil or construction engineer, a forest ranger, a secret service man, or a business or professional man, who is sojourning in the wilds. Mr. Glendon does not merely want a story in which the leading man overcomes a number of obstacles in order to win the girl, but he wants a story with a big idea, or a big thought behind it.

We are still looking for a few more two reel North West Mounted Police stories, for Irving Cummings. We suppose everybody in the game knows that a big story is wanted for Priscilla Dean. Might add, however, that friend Lucien Hubbard is rather hard to please.

C. O. D. Blanchfield asked me to see if I could dig up a few North West woods stories, which could be produced in the state of Washington—mostly exteriors, and which would not cost too much to film. This does not mean mounted police stories, however.

We are looking for a five reel comedy drama featuring a girl of the type of Mary Anderson.

Harry Burns has completed two more Joe Martin comedies for Universal.

Another five-reel western entitled "Big Boy" Williams, is in production at the Selbing Studios.

Edward Laemmle has just returned from a trip to Chicago and expects to start on Feature Productions as soon as he finishes his present series of Universal two-reelers.

Dick Rush, co-directing with Howe and Hersholt for B. B. Hampton, leaves at the end of the week for a motor trip through Yosemite prior to starting work on "The Gray Dawn."

Charlie Stallings, senior assistant director at the Goldwyn studios and right hand man to Reginald Barker, has left after a two and one-half years' engagement with that organization.

At the last bi-monthly meeting of the A. D. A., held in their Hollywood Club room, Frederick Palmer, of the Fox Film Corp., was the feature speaker; his subject being the "History of the Photoplay."

Gordon Hollingshead, assistant to Howard Mitchell, at Fox studio, announces that the company with Shirley Mason has just returned from Catalina, where they have been shooting "Chig Chine," her latest production, and will immediately start production of "Queenie."

A word should be said for the unusual work of Marie Bollman, Paul Vickers and William Towne, who competently fill the positions of stage manager, scenic constructor and electrician at the Workshop. Their work progress with refreshing smoothness and their effects are quite wonderful.

We congratulate this industrious company, which has done so much for the unadulterated art of the stage here in Hollywood.

"SOMEONE IN THE HOUSE"

Tally's

Metro's adaptation by Lois Zeliner of "Someone in the House," the stage play by Larry Evans, George S. Kaufman and Walter Perceval, makes a very absorbing mystery drama of crooks and intrigues. It deals with a society thief known as the "Dancer," whose crimes are committed largely in the name of the luring god of Adventure and Luck. His final reckoning comes, however, before Love, who only after several reeds of clever dodging, double crossing and situation mixing that keep the audience on the edge of its seat with attention glued screenward. The camara work is good.

Edmund Lowe is ideally placed and interprets with fascination the "Dancer," alias Jim Burke, whose rapid manipulation of society's famed jewels forms the basis for a highly entertaining plot. Lowe is coming into prominence with his superior characterizations.

The feminine lead is played by Vola Vale, who is well suited to the simple little role of Molly Brent. It is Molly's diamond necklace which causes all of the trouble. Thomas McGuire is the typical plain clothesman as Halloran, whose attempts to capture the "Dancer" are consistently thwarted.

Acting as a sort of assistant in the opposition to the likable young crook, is Walter Haygrave, diligently done by Laurence Grant.

Edward Connelly is responsible for a few excellent scenes in which he plays a small but unscrupulous pawnbroker, in league with the theiving hero.

Howard Crampton, William J. Irving and Edward Johnson are good types to play "English," a crook, Percy Glendenning, a glibible society playwright, and Malone, the village police chief. All of them are well done for comedy.

John E. Ince's direction of "Someone in the House" was very capable.

"THE MAN TAMER"

Superba

Gladys Walton's latest Universal starring release, "The Man Tamer," although quite a feeble little comedy drama by John Barton Oxford, will doubtless interest the fans who follow its star, and that is naturally as much as could be absolutely demanded in a program picture. The story deals with a little lion tamer and her struggles to "tame" the man of her choice. A. P. Younger's scenario is lucid throughout, while the picture's photography is just about standard.

Miss Walton is seen as Kitty Horrigan alias Celeste d'Auvergune, a circus girl whose business is lions. This little actress is getting right along, and has collected a large following. Some day, we hope to see her given real material to work with. We believe that she will soon have earned the right to it.

Roscov Karns gains an unusual amount of sympathy for the leading masculine part, Bradley P. Caldwell, Jr., considering that the young hero is almost always drunk. Probably a great portion of the audience will be more envious of Bradley, Jr., than

NEW ACQUISITIONS FOR CHESTER COMEDIES

Three educated horses have been added to the Chester Comedies stock company, and hereafter with other animals, will work actively in support of Patsy, Snooky, the "Humaneze."

Harley Chambers is cast in the new Harry Carey picture, "Partners."

Vola Vale has been offered a special feature engagement, it is stated.

Virginia Valli is finishing her third picture as leading woman with Bert Lytell.

Willard Lee Hall is playing the heavy in the newest Charles Ray picture, now in production.

Included in the "Molly O" cast and playing the role of a snobbish society woman is Gloria Davenport.

Harvey O'Higgins will leave July 2d for New York to attend rehearsals of his dramatization of "Main Street," the novel by Sinclair Lewis.

Theresa Maxwell Conover and Nita Naldi have been added to the cast of the new Constance Talmadge-Emerson-Loose picture, "Good for Nothing."

Ruth Renick has been vacationing since completing a stellar role in "The Golden Square," a David Hartford production for First National.

Frank Lauer will enact a principal role in the forthcoming Eastern-made Constance Talmadge picture, entitled "Good for Nothing."

Winthrop Kelly, former associate director with Maurice Tourneur, is production manager for Ferdinand Earle's "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

Louise Lovely and Roy Stewart are filming a series of Canadian Northwest Mounted Police stories in San Francisco, sponsored by Harry Revier.

John M. Stahl has chosen Grace Darmon to interpret one of the leading roles in his second all-star production for Associated First National.

Otto F. Hoffman, remembered for his various character parts with Charles Ray, is playing Hen Jones in Ray's newest production, "Two Minutes to Go."

"Fal," Harry Lucey's intellectual bull dog, who has appeared in many recent pictures, will again be seen in "Queenie," Shirley Mason's forthcoming production.

Chester Comedy No. 2 of the new series to be distributed by Federated Film Exchange of America, will introduce the three equines in support of Snooky.

"Tessa Revel," the first of a series of Thomas H. Ince-Louis Joseph Vance picture productions, will be presented at the Garrott Theatre during the week of Monday, July 4th, in conjunction with the appearance of the world famous Columbia Park Boys Band.

Jean Havez, recently added to Harold Lloyd's scenario staff, wrote the book and some of the music and lyrics for "Sun-Kist," which is having a long run in New York. The production first showed in Sacramento and San Francisco.

ROBT. ANDERSON IN "THE RUBAIYAT"

Robert Anderson, who will be remembered for his "Monsieur Cuckoo" and "Hearts of the World" and for his characterization in "The Heart of Humanity," is cast for an important part in Ferdinand Earle's production of "The Rubaiyat."

NATIONAL PUBLICITY

Here is a letter to CAMERAl from a publicity man who has been serving in all branches of the exploitation game for the last five years. We value his opinion because his long and varied experience puts him in a position to judge accurately; incidentally, he has just completed the publicity campaigns of Benjamin B. Hampton's anti-censorship fight.

Dear Editor:

Congratulations on your new move to widen the scope of Camera! to the national field. We have regarded Camera! as our own exclusive organ, with no little pride and affection. But our correspondence with motion picture editors shows me that they will welcome your move, and that they and through them articles will secure not only local, but national publication.

This means much to producers, but it means more to motion picture editors and.addresses, though dependent upon publicity for success against the great competition they face, and realizing this fact more or less strongly, are nevertheless surprisingly ignorant of the power of national publicity. They think that only local publicity is of value in getting them positions and winning them lasting fame.

Just a glance at the facts will dispel this illusion. Producers take the services of national editors who send them marked clippings on every article that bears the name of their companies, their pictures, or the actors and actresses they employ. This is necessary for three reasons: First, to check the activities of their press departments; second, to follow the bookings of their pictures; third, and most important, to check the public taste to see what players, what authors, what directors and what picture titles are the best box office attrac-

Suppose an actress has a publicity man who sends out items about her to the national field. The item mentions a producer of whom her admirers have her name on their clipping bureaus. The result is that the item, appearing in New York, in Boston, in Detroit, in Chicago—in dozens of large cities—returns to a dozen producers, clipped and marked. It is posted in scrapbook files for reference, and noted from time to time. A producer sees that this actress is becoming popular in these towns, both with the public and with the motion picture editors. Popularity with a dramatic color the entire review of the picture in which she appeared!

Consequently, he jots down her name for his next cast.

Following your plan for Camera! will do in addition to its undoubted local value, if the players realize how greatly Camera!'s new method will benefit them, and you will have their unqualified endorsement, as you have mine.

Sincerely,

JAY BRIEN CHAPMAN.

disapproving, at that. In any event, Karns certainly makes him appear to be enjoying himself, which is admittedly a desirable state these days. Of course, the "wild man" must be and is "tamed," even at the expense of a circus lady's heart.
William Walsh is an excellent type to play Hayden Delmar, the super-heavy, owner of Delmar's great shows, whose preference is quite noticeably for Kitty.
C. Norman Hammond is a good touch as Caldwell, Sr., and Rex de Rosselli plays Jim Harrigan, Kitty's father.
C. B. Murphy and Parker J. McConnell end the list of players in this Harry B. Harris directed production.

the American film has always been, in Europe, a much more cheaply produced article than that made at home. If it is legitimate for America to protect herself against the accidenta advantage which the Europeans get from the state of the exchange, it is equally legitimate for Europe to protect herself from American films which can be "dumped" here because the cost of production has already been recovered at home.
"Our own attitude in this matter is that International Free Trade in films is the ideal, and in any consideration of the problem it should not be forgotten that the first interest to be considered is not that of the producer but of the public. It is even more important that British theatres should have a full selection of the best films made everywhere than that we should have a thriving native production, for British production in itself depends in the last resort on a satisfied and increasing public for pictures—a public which cannot be obtained without variety. But the terms of international competition should be equal; if America weights the scales in favor of her own producers she must expect retaliation—and we hope she gets it."

The Scenarists Again!

Somewhat over a year ago, as our more veteran readers will recall, Camera! opened a discussion editorially upon the relative importance to a picture's success of the author, director and star; and for some weeks thereafter the various branches of the industry took up their sides and presented their arguments in space which this paper donated for that purpose.

We were delighted at that time to discover from the articles presented that the scenarist was at last awakening to the magnitude of his scope and the proportions of his own accomplishments, an appreciation which had not been allowed him in the old days of self important directors and stars. More or less secretly we had been on his side all along, and nothing could have pleased us as did such a declaration of the esteem in which he held his position in our industry, for it marked his progression out of that false stage of modesty in which he had considered it unethical to publicize his own achievements and the value, financial and artistic, which they placed upon him.

In the comparatively short space since the occurrence of the incident just mentioned, things have plunged ahead with almost upsetting rapidity for the average screen writer of several years' standing. First he witnessed the sensational advent of the novelist and short story expert in his heretofore undisputed territory, and while still plodding on, he came to recognize the fact that the offerings of these, his threatening rivals, met with only mediocre success in the picture theatre. Finally, one by one, he saw his more scintillating contemporaries pack up and return to other fields in which their experience was greater and brought more satisfaction. Then he reclaimed his personally constructed art and kept quietly on.

Today, the men and women who headed the studio scenario departments and free lancers of several years back, once more face a broad, unimpeded highway up the hill to picture fortune. This time, however, their traveling will be made easier by the expressed admiration of their fellow workers and their public.

The fascination surrounding outside celebrities has not stood the marring of time as has the worth of these workers who have always exerted their first efforts for their profession. It is remarkable how quickly self-confidence brings the other fellow's respect. For the playwright it has gained quickly a general esteem which could not be stood against by usurpers of his line. A new day for the scenarist has arrived, and with it a new promise for the motion picture industry.—F. R.

America's Song Unsung

BY TED LE BERTHON
Editor of The Photodramatist

According to statistics recently compiled by an individual who was given access to the files of the scenario departments at leading studios, it was found that slightly over ten thousand persons have submitted scenarios to these particular studios in the past three years. As these studios include almost all the larger producing organizations, and many of the smaller ones, it is doubtful if over twelve thousand individuals have submitted photographic during this period. In other words, about one person in every eight thousand has attempted to write for the screen, outside of those actually employed at the studios.

Of course, one organization received thirteen thousand scenarios during the year 1920, but these consisted of many stories which had been sent to several studios; and all the way from two to two dozen screen stories, in many instances, were submitted during the year by some one person.

A recent national scenario contest, conducted by a leading film producer through a newspaper syndicate which serves four hundred representative newspapers in as many cities in the United States, brought forth about ten thousand photodramas, many from people who had never before essayed screen writing.

When these facts are digested and then pondered over, a great light will dawn on any thinking individual. There are not nearly as many people submitting scenarios to the studios as there are submitting short stories, novellettes, essays, poems and other forms of literature to the magazines! And, judging from the scenarios received, those believing they could write for the screen must have ranked intellectually far below those who were attempting to break into the magazines.

To get down to approximate facts, there are probably over one hundred thousand people in the United States signing their names to variegated literary matter in newspapers, magazines and books.

Is it any wonder that the film magnates have turned to published books, magazine stories, and plays for their screen story material? They have had a far bigger field to select from.

Now, are the motion picture producers thoroughly satisfied with the artistic or financial results of the past several years? No, decidedly not. But the great public maw had to be fed three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, and stories suitable for screening had to be secured from some source.

GOLDWYN ACQUIRES NEW STORIES

The following stories have been recently acquired by the Goldwyn studios for early production: “Syndafoden” (Sin Flood), the Swedish play by Henning Berger; “The Wall Flower,” an original story by Rupert Hughes; “Laura’s Daydream” (formerly called “The Woman Who Hated Politics”), by Alice Duer Miller; “Nobody’s Man,” a novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim; “Wild Apples,” a novel by Cynthia Stockley; and “His Back to the Wall,” a published story by John Frederick.

RELEASE TITLES GIVEN

Release titles which will supplant working titles on Universal productions scheduled for early showing, are as follows:

“The Mascotte of the Three Stars,” featuring Hoot Gibson, will be called “Action.”

“Christine of the Young Heart,” Gladys Walton’s picture, will be exhibited as “High Heels.”

“The Harbor Road” will go to the screen as “Danger Ahead,” and “A Daughter of the Law” is the title finally decided upon for “The Black Cap,” a forthcoming Carmel Myers production.

FOR LOCATION SCENES IN WEST VIRGINIA

Richard Barthelmess, who is working in New York on the photodramatization of Joseph Hergesheimer’s story, “Tol’ble David,” for Associated First National release, plans a trip in the West Virginia mountains to the approximate location where the scenes of Mr. Hergesheimer’s story are laid.

Mr. Barthelmess will be accompanied by his wife, Mary Hay, his director, Henry King, and supporting company.

SCHERTZINGER TO DIRECT JACKIE COOGAN

Arrangements have been consummated between Jack Coogan and Victor Schertzinger, whereby Mr. Schertzinger will direct the future Jackie Coogan productions.

Mr. Schertzinger is now busyly engaged with Mr. Coogan in compiling the script for Jackie’s initial story, and early production is predicted.

SOUTH SEA STORY FOR KATHERINE MACDONALD

Upon the completion of the cutting and editing of “Peachie,” which she recently finished at the Ambassador Pictures Studio, Katherine MacDonald will begin production of “The Infidel,” a story of the South Sea Islands, by Charles Loge, which has been selected for her by General Manager B. P. Franklin.

FOURTH SANTSCHI PICTURE

Bob Bradbury has just finished writing the fourth Santschi picture in the series which he is directing for Cyrus J. Williams. It is titled “Lorraine of the Cumberlands,” and Ruth Stonehouse will play the leading feminine role.

“THE WHITE RIDER” SHIPPED EAST

Denver Dixon has shipped his five-reeler western drama, “The White Rider,” to New York. It has an all-star cast and was written and directed by Mr. Dixon, and photographed by Gordon MacLean.

POLLARD COMEDY IN PRODUCTION

Harry “Snub” Pollard and his leading lady, Marie Mosquini, have started on a new comedy for Pathe release.

POLLARD COMEDY IN PRODUCTION

Grover Jones Productions

Grover Jones, magazine author and comedy director, will launch a new producing organization soon to be known as the Grover Jones Productions. The first picture which he will direct will be a five-part original story entitled “Silent Jim,” with an all-artist cast headed by Ora Carew.

AT UNIVERSAL

Marie Prevost has finished her first starring vehicle for Universal. The story is called “The Butterfly” and was directed by King Baggot from the story by Percival Wilder.

Priscilla Dean and eighteen members of her producing unit are en route to British Columbia, where the concluding scenes for “The Secret Agent,” her forthcoming production, will be filmed under the direction of Stuart Paton. The unit will be camped in the Bull River district for several weeks.

Eddie Polo is working on the opening episodes of his forthcoming serial. The chaptered story is “The Secret Four,” a narrative. The company, which was seen here recently, has utilized a number of the star’s recent serial successes. Albert Russell is directing.

Erich von Stroheim is doing the editorial work on “Painless Wives.” It is estimated that ten weeks will be devoted to the cutting of the picture.

AT REALART

Wanda Hawley will start this week on “The Love Charm,” an original story by Harvey O’Higgins, heretofore adapted to the screen by Percy Heath.

May McAlroy starts within a few days on “The Happy Ending,” an original story by Hector Turnbull. The direction will be handled by Frank O’Connor.

Constance Binney, whose productions have been made in New York, will shortly arrive to join the colony of happy “filmers” in California. No announcement has yet been made of Miss Binney’s first story.

GOLDWYN TO ANNOUNCE PLANS

Samuel Goldwyn, President of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, arrived from New York recently.

While in California Mr. Goldwyn will announce the sales and distribution plans for the fifth Goldwyn year. He will make public a new selling arrangement by which a limited number of franchises will be granted to exhibitors for the entire output of the company.

This will be Mr. Goldwyn’s first visit to the local film colony since his return from abroad, where he made a thorough study of production in England, Italy, and Germany. The company has announced for fall release two Italian spectacles, but it is stated positively that Goldwyn does not intend to import any more German productions.

“THE SKY RANGER” IN EPISODE TWELVE

“The Whirling Menace” is the title of episode twelve of the new Pathe serial, “The Sky Ranger,” in which June Caprice co-stars with George B. Seitz. The episode has been scheduled for release by Pathe July 17th.

HAROLD LLOYD RE-ISSUES

An announcement recently made by Pathe Exchange, Inc., is to the effect that the pictures of Harold Lloyd one-reelers comedies are to be instituted.

“Bliss,” the first of the Lloyd one-reelers, has been scheduled for release July 17th. Bebe Daniels plays opposite the spectacular comedian, and “Snub” Pollard, featured in Hal Roach comedies, is also in his support.

CURRENT REVIEWS

"BEAU REVEL"

Grauman's

This week we have another example of the kind of picture that goes wrong upon the screen. It is Louis Joseph Vance's "Beau Revel," which Thomas Ince presents on the Paramount program. The story has been given an elaborate feature production and an all artist cast which it is unable to justify, since it has only mediocre picture value, and the material it contains could be easily set forth in three reels. Our authors are prone to forget that the pages which they devote to description and personal philosophizing are necessarily lost to the scenario in so far as space-filling is concerned, for they are instantaneously revealed to the audience when the character or set in question comes into view. We are fast learning that the adaptation is not, as we had thought, the thing.

Tactfully, this picture cannot be adversely criticised. Its direction by John Griffith Wray, and the photographic effects, are both high artistic. Luxurious sets form a pleasing background for the cast which is in every instance excellent. Lewis Stone has not lately been more perfectly established than he is in the main role of this production. There is something both sympathetic and picturesque about this more than middle-aged dandy who "wouldn't marry or grow old." His ideal sequence in which he faces grim reality at last and then a sensational death by his own hand is by far the most vivid and fascinating work in the piece. Rarely are we privileged to witness so touchingly handled a death scene as is experienced by the disillusioned "Beau," who, even in tragedy retains the mannerisms of his old self. Stone balances his characterization beautifully.

Betty Lee, the leading feminine part, is filled by Florence Vidor, whose interpretation of the modern woman are always interesting. We have seen her quite lately in stronger positions, however, than that which she occupies as the little dancer who is loved by both a boy and his father. It might also be commented that Miss Vidor is a bit mature in her role, but that is a minor point. As always, her work carries conviction.

"Beau's" honest young son, Dick Revel, is unusually well done by Lloyd Hughes, who accomplishes some unadulterated acting to good advantage. By changing their youth contrasts effectively with Stone's part.

Kathleen Kirkham in the semi-unsympathetic portrayal of Mrs. Latham, the neglected wife, who capitates to "Beau's" studied charms, brings forward her well learned technique and graces her sets with ease.

Norris Kirkham is truly individualized in a class by herself.

Again and again we are surprised by the angles William Conkin gets into his drama. As Lathon he is at once a worthless drunkard and a pitiful, misunderstanding little lad. In a very few scenes he offers some invaluable pathetic touches.

Lynne Breen, the wayward aunt, with Richard Ryan, William Musgrave and Harlan Tucker, completes the cast.

For once and for all, "Beau Revel" will prove but an average box office attraction.

"THE SKY PILOT"

Kinsema

It certainly is wonderful what an all sufficient, well balanced cast and a good scenario, competently handled by the direction, can do to a story on the order of Ralph O'Connor's "The Sky Pilot," in the way of making it live, seemingly, for the first time. We must admit to being happily surprised at the understanding manner in which King Vidor has handled such a subject, and delighted by certain vivid little touches which he has added to the original. To us, this story is much improved on the screen.

PAULINE CURLEY

Beautiful snow-blanketed landscapes, effectively photographed, add their bit of perfection to the work of an ideal cast, making "The Sky Pilot" altogether one of the most worthwhile pieces of its type to have been recently filmed. Heading the cast in the title role is seen John Bowers, whose last two years ofjuvenilizing for Goldwyn have not been overlooked. This, however, is his role, and we might say his first role, in so far as its perfect suitability to himself is concerned. The sympathetic, dauntless preacher who cowboys that he may win the admiration and attention of his flock, is an excellent opportunity for Bowers' appealing type. His sincere interpretation lacks nothing to convince and his transitions are remarkable thanks to both the actor's art and the foot-note allowed him to put them over.

Bill Hendricks, the well-loved "cowpunchin'" friend of the Pilot, is excellently filled by David Butler, who never for one moment misses in comparison with the other roles. The two characterizations are unusually equal in their ability to hold sympathy and in their technical rendition Butler has never before been placed or fitted easier into a part.

Colleen Moore must be lauded for the consistent characterizing which she accomplishes on her own account in the role of Gwen, the rebellious little fire-eater, who is injured that she may be saved, and cured that she may herself save another. This little actress has won her spurs by hard and faithful work. She deserves all of the big chances that she may ever receive. It might be added that the closeups of Miss Moore in this picture are the most pleasing that we have seen of her. They are a credit to the cinematographer who made them.

A clever part is added to the cast by Harry Todd, who does Gwen's father, The Old Timer. Todd always has something of value to offer.

Donald MacDonald plays in his habitual good role. The Duke, as the cattle thief, while James Corrigan and Kathleen Kirkham in unimportant roles complete the cast.

"COLD STEEL"

California

Again we implore someone to get busy and conscientiously fill up the atrocious gaps which the past year's underproduction has rent in the fabric of our picture entertainment, for the patches with which the powers that be have attempted to mend them are of such a miserable texture and coloring that they take most of the pleasure from the whole.

Robertson-Cole's current local release is "Cold Steel," an S. J. Meyberg presentation starring J. P. McGowan. Although we never heard of the original, this picture is Monte Katterjohn's version of a story by George Shedd. Its classification is simple to accomplish, for it belongs body and soul to that type of impossible, hysterical melodrama which has been written to entertain so many twelve-year-old males with its breath-taking suspense. As might be expected, the dirty gag of grimacing murderers, the stalwart, cool-eyed hero, the contradictory ingenue, automobile chases and burning powder can fuses mixed well with western scenery, and a few wise gun run the show as of old. The situations are strangely reminiscent of the serial, of which we are not overfond personally, but every man to his taste. "Cold Steel" is psychologically clever offering for some Main Street houses, but it should have been kept far below Eighth Street.

The direction by Sherwood McDonald is exceptionally poor and savoros jerkily of days long gone by. The camera work is one good item in the picture, as indeed it should be with three A. S. C. boys on the job.

McGowan is really an unusual type for dauntless roles and were his work better timed it would mean considerable. He rushes about a bit too wildly to please the modern picture-goer, however, as "Cold Steel" is a daring contractor in this photograph.

Some clever work is done by Kathleen Clifford in the feminine lead opposite him, though the rendering of her little ingenue is far from natural.

Nigel de Brulier must be credited with some noticeably good work as Martinze.

For the cast further there is little to say. The ridiculous heavy work is divided between Stanhope Wheatcroft, Arthur Millette, Charles Ingle, Milt Brown and George Clair. It is difficult to differentiate between the actors and director as to where the blame for their almost funny exaggerations should be placed. Certainly the business allotted them is fearful.

Elinor Fair in a sob sister part, J. D. Ormand, and Andy Waldron end the sad tale. Beautiful Haydens lead us hereafter far from such reviews. They are hard on the nerves.

"THE LYING TRUTH"

Preview

Marion Fairfax's independently written and produced photoplay, "The Lying Truth," is a small-town drama with quite an entailed plot illustrating a rather simple theme concerning the fallibility of circumstantial evidence.
ADDITION TO HAMILTON-WHITE STAFF

WILLIAMS SIGNS NEW DIRECTOR

Cyrus J. Williams has signed Val Paul to direct and George Meredith to photograph, the balance of "The Adventures of Bill and Bob" series of boy-trapper stories being produced for Pathe. Mr. Paul has recently finished the eleventh picture of the series, "The Weasel," and is now preparing to "shoot" the twelfth, which deals with the Canadian lynx.

Frank Coleman is playing comedy heavies with the Hamilton-White Company.

Little Philippe de Lacy has been cast in "The Rubaiyat," filming at the Hollywood Studios.

Monti Collins and Fred W. Huntley will complete the cast for the new Tom Moore picture which is being made at the Goldwyn Studios.

Hallam Cooley will play an important role in "The Man with Two Mothers," featuring Tom Moore.

Marie Torpie is Lee Moran's feminine support in "Mile a Minute," his newest Universal comedy.

Frances Hatton will enact a role in the next Gladys Walton picture, which Major David Kirkland is directing.

Hal Wilson has been added to the cast of Eddie Polo's new serial, "The Secret Four," which Albert Russell is directing.

Ruth Renick will be seen as Celia in "The Golden Snare," from the story by James Oliver Curwood.

Noah Young, Vera White and Sam Brooks will have principal supporting roles in the new "Snub" Pollard comedy, which Charles Parrott will direct at the Roach Studios.

The juvenile roles of Tom Santachi's outdoors pictures will hereafter be filled by Earl Hughes, brother of Lloyd Hughes, playing in Thomas Ince pictures.

Georgie Stone will be seen as Dannie boy in "Desperate Trails," featuring Harry Carey, which will open at the Superba Sunday, July 19th.

KIDDIES' MATINEES START IN L. A.

That Los Angeles will have facilities to provide entertainment for boys and girls during the summer vacation months is now definitely decided. Alice S. Hellman, social worker of Los Angeles, has interested Sol Lesser, vice-president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., to the extent that he will donate the AhBram theatre for a series of special children's Saturday morning matinees.

The initial performance of this kind will commence Saturday, July 9th, at 2:30 p.m. All children and parents are urged to attend this first show and obtain a vision of the nature of entertainment offered.

Mrs. Hellman has selected a committee to preview and pass on all film subjects prior to their being shown at the special performance. This committee, headed by Mrs. Hellman, includes Mrs. Susan Dorsev, head of the Los Angeles Board of Education, Mrs. Charles Toll of the Ebell Club, Mrs. Noble of the Parent and Teacher's Association, and others. The recognized name of this new organization will be known as The Children's Security Film Association.

The first of the program will include Maelstonk's "The Blue Bird," a special children's film entitled "Little De-Feep and Her Friends," colored cartoon slides, an organ recital of kiddy songs, and Miss Louise Sullivan, soprano, in a song recital. A professional storyteller will be another feature of the entertainment. Admission prices are 25c for adults and 15c for children. Mr. Lesser has arranged for the proceeds of the shows to be given to Mrs. Hellman for children's charity purposes exclusively.

NEW PUBLICITY SERVICE

Kirk Watkins and George Warner have formed a partnership for the purpose of conducting a general advertising agency and publicity office with headquarters in Los Angeles and agency affiliations in London, Paris, New York and Chicago.

Mr. Watkins is a practical newspaper and magazine man of over thirty years' experience. He was at one time connected with the Chicago Herald and later with the C. H. Fuller Advertising Agency of Chicago. He has been identified with magazine and publicity work in Los Angeles lately and during the war was one of the civilian employees of the United States government contractors at Camp Kearney.

George Warner recently arrived in Los Angeles from New York, where he was identified with the advertising business, and some years ago was associated with Mr. Watkins in the business in the East.

The third Blue Ribbon Comedy, “The Noodle Agent,” has just been finished by Director Hagenah, at the Chester Studios, from the story by Frederick Bennet. It is probable that the company will hereafter make two-reelers.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

REGGIE MORRIS

Reggie Morris, of The Reggie Morris Productions, Inc., was born in Newark, N. J., and early became interested in all things theatrical. He appeared upon the boards with George M. Cohen in “Forty-five Minutes from Broadway,” and then he entered the films, where he spent three years with D. W. Griffith, and later four years with Mack Sennett, during which time he produced comedies and made some of comedy’s foremost comedians. There followed a series of comicclassics directed by him for Special Pictures Corporation, including “Up in Betty’s Bedroom” and “Look Pleasant.”

Now Morris heads this new company bearing his name, which has been organized upon a co-operative plan. The product, two-reel comedies which feature Neely Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, Jack Duffy, Margaret Cullington, and Joe Moore, will be released through the Arrow Film Corporation.

Morris is now producing at the old Special Pictures Studio, where he is associated with Frank Marshall, who is general manager of the company.

PATENTS GRANTED ON INVENTION

At last a combination motion picture camera and projection machine, capable of utilizing standard film, has been accomplished. It is called the Standard Combination Camera and Projection Machine and patents have been granted on it to A. Edward Rosenberg, formerly of Universal, Lester Reider and N S. O’Brien.

The new invention weighs only six and a half pounds. It will be sold for about $150.00.

REHEARSALS OF “KINDRED OF THE DUST”

“Kindred of the Dust,” the Peter B. Kyne story, has been put into continuity form by R. A. Walsh and Jack O’Brien. The Walsh company has been assembled on Catalina Island for rehearsals.

NEW BESSIE LOVE COMPANY

A company is being organized to take Bessie Love to the South Sea Islands to make one production. Under the terms offered, Miss Love will be away from this country six months.

Melbourne MacDowell has returned from San Francisco where he has been vacationing.

Hope Hampton is busy at present finishing “Star Dust,” at Fort Lee, N. J., for future Associated First National release.

“We’ll Get You Yet,” is the title that has been given the seventh of the Federated Halfton Boys Comedies, featuring Sid Smith, which Harry Cohn, the producer, has just forwarded to the New Italy Boys Comedies, Inc., for final editing and titling. This comedy will follow “We Should Worry,” on the release schedule.

The story is fully worth the picturization and its value may be said to have been greatly increased by the several better than ordinary performances by the players who interpret it. Undoubtedly a little different arrangement or cutting of the later scenes might improve the somewhat weak and dragged-out descendant action after the culmination of the plot, and several unnecessary subtilties also should and probably will be eliminated before the picture's final release. These with a rearrangement of the murder mystery should bring satisfaction.

The photography, although varying, presents in places some super-artistic scenic shots.

The direction by Miss Fairfax is very commendable considering that this is her first production. Quite naturally, there are inferior places to perfect, but let it be stated here that she has set a higher standard of consistently handled entertainment for our women producers than they have been maintaining of late.

Pat O'Malley's work improves steadily. He makes both a loveable and admirable juvenile of young O'Hara, a semi-orphian, who has been raised by Claibourne, a publisher, and willed his foster-father's worldly goods and responsibilities only to be set with evidence implicating him in the murder of his patron's son. His extraction from the horrible net which circumstance weaves about him provides some real opportunities which O'Malley manages to good advantage.

Marjorie Daw plays the daughter of the "most important man in town," or one Miss de Mulée, a little uncertainly from the audience's viewpoint. Nevertheless, she is almost satisfactory in the uncomplicated part, which is only included to aid the romantic interest.

Charles Hill Mailes and Claire McDowell present representative high grade work in their respective roles of Claibourne, the previously mentioned publisher of the village Gazette, and his wife. Some of Miss McDowell's anguish and mother sequences are particularly effective.

The part of their own son, Claibourne, Jr., is stillly done by George Drumgold, who misses in it a rare chance for characterization, as the worthless, dissipated lad who commits suicide. It is a pity that such a suitable type for this character role should not have been able to carry conviction.

Tully Marshall is very clever as the Gazette's editor and the Claibourne's standby. He gives us some necessary comedy and not a little sympathy.

Noah Beery pompously struts about, as is his habit, in the part of the shoddy superior de Mulée, while Wade Boteler accomplishes one of the most artistic pieces of work in the picture. He is O'Hara, Sr., both as a young father and as the parent of a grown son whose education he has made possible by a twenty-years' absence. Boteler's versatility is being recognized as his unusual interpretations follow each other.

Frank Stockdale and Robert Badger each do minor parts remarkably well.

"The Lying Truth" is an Eagle production.

On recovering from a recent appendicitis attack, Julian Eltinge will start his vaudeville tour.

Leo Willis is playing a sea captain in the Ruth Roland serial "White Eagle," now under production at the Hal E. Roach Studios.

When he returns from school and his very unusual attitude is generally noticed, both clans are set to talking about him. We might show that even members of his own clan ridicule him in secret and discuss the proposition of his lack of the grit that should have been inherited from his "old man."

We spoke of a new school house a while ago. In order to further show the magnificent and broad-minded nature of our prospective, why not let him be the one who furnished the money to build the new school house? It might also be at his suggestion that the dance is staged. It would be a very unusual thing, and something that would start much speculation, if he invited his enemies to the dance.

I believe we decided to have the sheriff's son killed at this dance, and the suspicion of the murder thrown upon our prospective. This is a very simple matter. We can have the sheriff's son raise a rouch house, just outside. Our prospective, being the host of the occasion, goes out to put a stop to the racket. A shot is fired in the dark, and the sheriff's son dies with his "boots on." Immediately the prospective is arrested for the murder.

But wait a minute: Who was the real murderer of the sheriff's son? He must be some villain who had it "in" for his victim. A little thought brings to our mind the fact that the business of making moonshine liquor is a very prevalent one in the Kentucky mountains. Suppose that the sheriff's son was a young revenue officer, who had been making it hot for a certain gang of moonshiners, and that the fellow who shot him is one of these moonshiners, the man who later appears with the Indian girl and plays the villain right on until the end of our story.

Now there is one criticism that is going to be made of our plot after we have constructed it, with this last development. It Today the motion picture industry faces a critical situation.

Production costs must be cut, and none are more anxious than the film mamzettes themselves to avoid in the future the paying of unreasonable, exorbitant sums for the screen rights to books, magazine stories, and plays. The most vital question of the day in the world of the cinema is: Where are our future stories coming from?

For, with few exceptions, the so-called eminent authors employed at the various studios have failed dismally in their attempts to produce artistically great or financially successful motion pictures! There is one great exception to this statement; Basil King adapted his story "Earthbound"—a very mediocre piece of literature—to the screen. The photoplay was anything but an artistic triumph, but did succeed financially, on the strength of the wide current interest in spiritualism.

The eminent authors' names have not proven box-office magnets, which the "suitable" film mamzettes did not realize in advance of hiring them. Strange, that so hard-headed, calculating picture producer (I've often wondered why they're called "producers") ever took the trouble to find out that only five per cent of the population read the individual works of the most popular authors and that hardly one per cent read any of the less popular books published!

Furthermore, the eminent authors had expressed themselves through the medium of the novel or play or short story—their real loves—for so long that it was difficult, considering their average age, for them to adapt themselves to an entirely different technique. None of them ever created a screen story equal to any of the dozens turned out by Jeanie MacPherson, C. Gardner Sullivan, H. H. Van Loan, Clara Beranger, Julia Prinzhorn, Anita Loos, Sada Cowan, Carol Kajper, J. G. Hawks, Lois Zeliner, and others whose first and only love has been the photoplay.

What is the answer? The star system failed, because a star was undone by as few as two successive poor vehicles! The directors failed under the same circumstances. The story is evidently "the thing," but the "eminent" storyists have failed.

Who will write the future screen stories?

With production costs still high, the screen rights to books and plays still commanding large sums, and attendance slowly diminishing in almost every section of America, there is apt to be an economic earthquake unless better motion pictures are produced. Today is the psychological time for the advent of a whole army of trained screen writers, who, like Crusaders, will swoop down upon the studios and change the present order of things. But the few trained screen writers of today are not equal to this revolutionary task. Their numbers must be added to. The nation needs more men and women who are solely photodramatists, not ex-novelistists, and playwrights.

The novelist or short story writer is temperamentally unfit for screen writing, because he has been accustomed to seeing his pure, unadulterated creation in print—and has harvested exclusively the fame accruing from his writing. In writing for the screen, the only interpretation of his work reaches the public, and he must divide honors with the director, cinematographer, and players. The photodramatists' ranks will be filled more so by those whose previous leanings were toward play writing, and yet, it is hardly likely that the persons who have already succeeded as playwrights—having necessarily become absorbed in the techniques of the stage play and saturated with the traditions of the theatre—will succeed as photodramatists.

Successful photodramatists must of necessity possess larger viewpoints and noble instincts. For the screen writer can never have the pleasure of sitting down and reading his "great" scenario—under his signature—in some magazine of wide circulation. He cannot write to please himself. Like an architect or a composer of music, his works are mysteries for the builder or instrumentalists to interpret and reveal to the multitude.

Our producers are turning to hundred year old literary classics for screen material, while Modern America's song goes unsung. They have even resorted to Salome and Cleopatra and The Queen of Sheba, for lack of a Walt Whitman of the screen.

The great problem is the training of a sufficient number of writers for the screen. Only the comparatively few people living in Los Angeles or New York are close enough to the producing centers themselves to obtain any gleams of intelligence regarding the limitations and advantages of the screen and the art-science of screen writing; but even in those places the ordinary person lives in a world apart from the cinema studios—and the studio executives are not favorable to breaking in and training beginners, which is another obstacle to be individually overcome.

It is evident that the great difficulty at present is to interest about ten times as many people in screen writing—and at the same time to endeavor to interest those who are interesting in photodramatia: those whose mental and emotional forces are at least normally developed. There is more money in writing for the screen than there is in writing for the magazines, eventually wider fame; but the American intelligentsia have yet to become interested. In exact is this: We are going to be accused of having introduced one or two situations which are too “co-incidental.” In other words, the situations “just happen,” appar-etly for the convenience of our plot. For instance: How does it happen that our whole bunch of principals, prospector, sheriff, daughter and villain, all move to California? And again, how does it happen that after the prospector has hied into the High Sierra mountains, that the same villian, who committed the crime which has been laid at his door, arrives at the same canyon where the prospector and his friend are at work? Also, why does the girl in her aeroplane select the very spot in the air over the prospector’s camp, to do a tail spin and to fall almost at his feet? After we can satisfactorily make these things logical, I would say that we have a pretty fair plot.

We can answer the first question by elim-ing the idea that the story has its beginning in Kentucky. There could just as well be a feud and moonshiners in the mountains of California as in Kentucky. They are making “hootch” everywhere these days.
That makes it more logical then, that both the hero and the villain of our story might arrive at the same canyon. As a matter of fact they are both fugitives from justice and it is not illogical that both of them might have heard the whispered information that a heavy deposit of gold was supposed to exist in a very remote canyon, in the High Sierra mountains. That would answer the question of how they both came to arrive at the same place. The information concerning the supposed location of the gold deposit may have filtered out of the woods, through the agency of an old Indian.

The most difficult question of logic that we have to solve is the matter of the girl selecting the particular spot where the prospector is camped, to fall with her plane.
Here is a solution to that. We will not have her fall right there. Let us assume that the prospector is on a hunting trip at some distance from his camp—and that he hears the plane flying overhead and sees it begin to fall. Then going in the direction of where the plane has fallen, for a couple of miles, he finds the unconscious form of the girl. This partly removes the objection to the “coincidental” situations described.
Of course, it is not a forced situation to bring the aviator and the girl’s father, as they are both in search of the girl.

As a matter of fact there are “co-incidental” situations in the majority of plots which appear on the screen. The author should endeavor, however, to eliminate them as far as possible. A picture plot is a composite thing. Most of them are such as could happen in real life, but which never have and never will. What I mean by this is that dramatic situations as they occur in real life, are not usually so beautifully correlated, one with the other, or perfectly synchronized. All of the situations present in a plot might occur to one individual, but not in a “bunch,” as they do in a picture plot, where they are shaped to dovetail closely into one another.

That is why the majority of amateur writers submit narratives instead of dramatic plots. They simply write a description of a series of dramatic events which have actually taken place in their own lives, or in the lives of others, and which dramatic situations usually have little bearing with one upon the other. This constitutes narrative. Real skill is required to construct a perfect dramatic plot.

This is the end of this series of articles on the “Process of Deduction,” one of the two processes of plot construction that is used by successful authors.

$5,000 Won By Trained Photoplaywrights

IN COMPETITION with nearly 10,000 contestants residing in nearly every state in the union, the first, second and third prizes in the recent nationwide J. Parker Read $5000 Scenario Contest were won by students of former students in the Department of Education of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

THE WINNERS

First Prize—$2500.00
Won by Frances White Elijah, Santa Barbara, Cal.

Second Prize—$1500.00
Won by A. Earl Kauffman, York, Pa.

Third Prize—$1000.00
Won by Anna B. Mezquida, San Francisco, Cal.

It is significant that every cash prize was won by writers who received their training in scenario writing by correspondence through the Palmer Course and Service; that not one penny of the $5000 awarded was received by an untrained writer.

The Palmer Course and Service is available only to men and women who possess creative imagination, dramatic perception and unquestioned earnestness of purpose. A questionnaire embodying tests designed to enable the applicant to predetermine his or her natural abilities for creative work will be mailed free upon request.

What Kind of Scenarios Are Selling?
READ "HINTS FROM THE STUDIOS"

Questions Answered in each number concerning scenario technique

Articles by Jeanie MacPherson, Harvey O'Higgins and others—and "ELINOR GLYN'S GREAT MOMENT" Another Black Eye?

Probably mishandled instruction has brought more of detriment to the subjects treated and those who are taught than all of the combined ignorance of mankind. However, since it is, in great part, only the seekers who progress, we are compelled to overlook imperfections in that knowledge which they naturally desire to pass along; consequently it is only left to us to criticise those who intentionally or through carelessness misrepresent in their teachings.

For this week's prologue, the Kinema Theatre management happened upon the very clever idea of depicting a studio set and the shooting of an average dramatic scene for the public's edification. So far, so good! Certainly a more interesting type of thing could scarcely have been prepared for the ordinary audience. Through indelicate treatment, however, in an attempt at humor, this seemingly simple sketch is harming the motion picture industry at every performance. Portrayals of ridiculous temperamentalism upon the part of the actors used, and the ineffective irritability of a rather poor director, resulting in much tossed-about insolence over the work in hand certainly lets the picture making staff down hard—unfairly so. The audience's impression of the whole, whether conscious or not, is bound to be tinged with disrespect, possibly disgust.

That this film coloring is resenting this glaring error is shown plainly in the following communication from one of our well-known scenarists. We commend his sentiments and the many professionals whose own are represented by them. If we are not loyal to our own, what is there left for us?

F. R.

"Editor Camera!"

"Purporting to be an intimate glimpse of the actual work in a motion picture studio' one of our leading theatres presents another slur on our profession."

"The scene is rehearsed and taken for a 'Western.' It has a corner-set; and four twin sidelong, a camera man and a couple of stage hands form the technical setting. A supposed director and two actors go through a travesty on the work of taking the rather lengthy action."

"The director attempts to explain the business to a clever actor who plays the male role and to a good actress who is supposed to do the ingenue. Both appear to be bored to death throughout the explanation, pay not the slightest attention to the director and show a most deplorable lack of discipline. The absolute purpose of the travesty seems to be to show an alleged 'don't give-a-damnness' of our work."

"The whole thing is belittling the profession unjustly for I do not know of a modern director who would tolerate such lack of discipline. The impression given the public is false and unfair, yes, utterly uncalled for."

"The subject in hand offers a splendid opportunity to show what infinite pains are taken, and the great difficulty attached to making any scene, and in the long run the entire affair would have been made far more interesting and certainly more believable if it had been reproduced with fidelity and tact.

"Is there any other business on earth which is parading its most miserable samples for public inspection? The persons responsible for this act could have done a service instead of rendering an insult. And a leading theatre lent itself as the medium!"

"Yours truly,"

"FREDERICK BENNETT."

For Our Scenarist Readers

We have with us this issue, as we will continue to have for some time, William E. Wing, one of our industry's most successful free lance scenarists, who will provide us with something new from the progressive screen writer's viewpoint. Mr. Wing's list of produced plays is remarkable in length and it includes many really great sellers. It is unnecessary to suggest that his weekly talks in Camera! will prove equally invaluable to those readers of this paper who are either fully versed in the story phase of picture production or merely training that they may in time achieve the scenario.

Present Crisis a Big Opportunity

By Marshall Neilan

The cry of panic is evident on all sides here in the producing center of the industry. The cutting of salaries and the elimination of big job holders that heretofore have been considered indispensable have struck fear into the heart of every individual in the business on the West Coast. Yet, when we consider the facts, we venture to say that the present situation is the best thing that could have happened to the industry. The whole structure upon which this business was founded was so frail that at the first severe strain it was bound to crack.

Now, if we are good builders we will take this opportunity of insuring the correction of evils that were bound to bring about the present condition. In the period of reorganization now already under way, there is much to be done in order to prevent another crisis such as that through which we are now passing. The feeling of get what you can for yourself and let the devil take the hindmost has permeated throughout this business from its inception. In the present crisis this feeling has been overcome, for it has taught even the greatest individual powers in this business that they must get together with each other and with those of lesser strength. It is no longer an uncommon thing to see the heads of different organi-

ALLENE RAY SEMI-WESTERN COMING

Bert Lubin, president of the Western Pictures Corporation, is returning to New York this week, with a print of the first of a series of six five-reel dramatic features in which Allene Ray will be starred. All star casts headlined by Miss Ray will be featured in each release, the first of which will be directed by Rolin H. Townley and released about July 20th.

Miss Ray was featured in the two previous Lubin offerings, "Honeymoon Ranch" and "West of the Rio Grande," which were disposed of on the state rights market. This series will contain the first Ray offerings under the new contract with the Western Pictures Corporation.

"LORNA DOONE" IN PRODUCTION

The filming of "Lorna Doone" will commence in Yosemite National Park next week. The story, which has not as yet been released, will be directed by Clarence Brown, associate director. Charles J. Van Enger will be in charge of the camera.

MONTANA COMPANY SHOOTING

Art Staton is working on his first starring production entitled "Dark Bark la Noir," for Flathead Producers Corporation at Columbia Falls, Montana. This French-Canadian story is the first of a series of multiple length productions which the company will make at its newly established studio.

NEW HARTER-WALL COMEDY

The Harter-Wall Productions have completed another two-reel comedy, entitled "The Right Man," featuring Vera Glynn and "Jim" Baker. The company will leave presently for Yosemite to take exterior for its next story, with L. S. Wall directing.

GOULDING DIRECTING SWEET

The latest addition to the Century Comedies is Alf Goulding, late of Sunshine Comedies, and recently directing Harold Lloyd comedies. Goulding has been chosen to direct Harry Sweet Century Comedies, alternating with Tom Buckingham.

ADAMS COMEDY STARTS

Avid B. Gillstrom, who was chosen by Mr. E. W. Hammons, president of the Educational Film Company, to assume production responsibilities of the Adams Comedies, has started production on his next Jimmie Adams two-reeler at the Astra studios in Glendale.

"THE IDLE CLASS" FINISHING

Charles Chaplin is finishing "The Idle Class," upon which he has been working for two weeks. This comedy will be released through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

STAGE SUCCESSES FOR SCREEN

Associated First National announces that Richard Walls, fully, author and producer, is preparing the continuities of "The Masquerader," "The Bird of Paradise," "Keep Her Smiling," and "The Flame," as well as a number of original scenarios and European plays which Mr. Tully acquired during his sojourn abroad.

FIVE-REEL WESTERN RELEASED

"The Mysterious White Rider" is the title of the five-reel Western recently completed by the D. & M. Productions, under the direction of Fred Caldwell. It will be released through Goodman & White.

AT UNIVERSAL

Art Acord is at work on the last two-reel western photodrama which he will make before leaving for Europe this fall. The short reel drama is called "The Mayor of Gopher Hole," and is being directed by Edward Lachman. His full-length serial will be known as "Winners of the West," in which he will also be directed by Lachman.

Lee Moran is working on the concluding scenes for "A Mile a Minute," his latest comedy, which William Watson is directing. Miss Dupont is making progress on "The We Peacocks," with her first starring vehicle, in which she is being directed by Jack Conway.

Hoot Gibson is finishing "The Sheriff of Cimmar," the Peter B. Kyne story upon which he has been at work under the direction of Reaves Eason.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd starts work next week on his fourteenth two-reeler, with Fred Newmeyer directing. The script has been furnished by Jean Havez. Mildred Davis will play opposite the star. Mr. Lloyd's latest comedy, the working title of which was "The Sky Is the Limit," is now being cut and assembled by T. J. Critzer, while H. M. Walker is busy fitting it. The new comedy will bear for a releasing title "Look Before You Leap."

Ruth Roland and company have been doing location work at Santa Monica, where sea shots were taken for "White Eagle," under production.

Harry "Snub" Pollard's comedy, "You're Next," has just been released by Pathé.

AT LASKY'S

"Rainbow's End," the all-star feature in which Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter will play the leading roles, under the direction of Sam Wood, will start on the 18th or thereabout. Lorna Moon is author of the photoplay; A. S. LeVine is making the screen adaptation.

Thomas Meighan will start presently on George Cohan's romantic play, "Prince There Was," Tom Forman directing. The continuity for this was written by Waldemar Young.

Clara Beranger's original picture, "Exit the Vamp," in which Ethel Clayton will star, is under way, under the direction of Frank Urson.

James Cruse, Roscoe Arbuckle and company, making "Handle With Care," are on their way to Chicago for important exterior scenes. Walter Woods wrote the scenario for this story, which is by Curtis Berdon.

George Melford is on the desert for exterior scenes of "The Sheik," Rudolph Valentino has the leading role, with Agnes Ayres featured opposite him. This is an adaptation by Monte Katterjohn of E. M. Hull's popular novel.

William DeMille is engaged in arranging the details for a forthcoming production, the title and character of which are as yet unknown.

CHRISTIE COMEDIES

Josephine Hill will be retained by Christie for further pictures now being made for each Educational Company. Miss Hill is at present playing a lead with Bobby Vernon in a comedy in preparation by William Beaudine.

Fred Burns and Viora Daniel are scheduled to carry the leading roles of a new comedy which will be started soon by Frederick Sullivan from a story by Sam Taylor, entitled "Twins."

“Sacred and Profane Love”

Tally's

Arnold Bennett's strong, almost daring dramatic story, “Sacred and Profane Love,” which was scenarized by Julia Crawford Ivers for Paramount's presentation of John Ferguson, has been more accentuated, attention-holding qualities than the majority of the week's releases. The theme of the story, which treats of a sheltered girl and her growth in the knowledge of life, departs from the conventional to an interesting degree, and as an honest, human story work from, which is better covered than one might expect, considering the present general dread of the misunderstanding censor.

William D. Taylor has shown admirable conception of his material in the direction of the scene, and there is nothing blatantly wrong with the picture's general technique. A few of the philosophical sub-titles deserve special mention. However, it might be said that the good photography is not always supplemented by equally satisfactory lighting, a minor point in this instance, but plainly perceptible and undesirable.

Miss Ferguson offers us a delicately handled, well proportioned portrayal in Carlotta Peal, who is played with great subtlety, both as an imaginative girl seeking an answer to the muddler which she feels with clarified knowledge, and later as the woman who, from the fullness of her experience, accomplishes an art and finally a living soul. Moreover, her screen translation is as natural as it is artistic.

Conrad Nagle characterizes Emile Diaz, a great pianist, who is apparently no mean student of feminine psychology, with quisite poise, which he carries consistently through his breakdown and the drunkard's life which follows. Perhaps the greatest fascination surrounding Nagle is his mastery of transition.

The semi-un sympathetic role of Frank Ispenlove, the publisher who leaves his wife to follow the now mature Carlotta to Europe, is done by Thomas Holding, who may be said to satisfy in his part. A contradictory character of this type is always difficult to handle.

An unusually realistic touch is added to young Carlotta's atmospheric background by Helen Dunbar, who enacts the girl's serene old aunt, whose raising of the child has been along the sweetly idealistic lines with which convention has always strive to thwart nature.

Excellent types fill the remainder of the roles, which are, in each instance, minor. They include Winifred Greenwood, Clarissa Selwyn, Howard Gaye and Jane Keckley. If there are inferior moments in the scenario or action of “Sacred and Profane Love,” they fade from view when compared to the miserable cinema entertainment which we have been forced to accept of late weeks if we would have any. Surely the old pendulum will soon start back.

“The March Hare”

Clune's

Bebe Daniels accompanies Realart to our screens again this week in Elmer Harris’ farce, “The March Hare.” From several standpoints this story is superior to many of Miss Daniels' offerings, even in the face of the fact that it contains exaggerations that are a bit too scorchcd even for near burlesque. Nevertheless, it is altogether likely that the star's followers will find very little to adversely criticise in the picture, which last must be recognized as the important point in hand, and the laughs which it contains balance the inferior spots. Technically the production is about up to its company's average, although misplaced spotslights throwing unnatural shadows here and there might have been eliminated advantageously.

Lisbeth Ann Palmer is the same type of riotous flapper which Miss Daniels is accustomed to filling. The young lady's valiant attempt to exist for a week upon seventy-five cents among strangers in New York City forms the nucleus for the mix-ups, out of which she rides buoyantly on the crest of a somewhat expanded wave of circumstance. The role is very Bessie-lish.

It is not Harry Myers' fault that the highly amusing and consistent characterization which he creates for Tod, a startlingly undereducated millionaire cowboy, is entirely disconnected as placed in the story with a senatorial father and an exceedingly refined mother. That isn't overly important, anyway, for many of the necessary comedy situations are controlled by this same rough rider, and Myers is always equal to them.

Helen Jerome Eddy, in a “cracked” adventure part, is howlingly funny. With her "mut" character she cares for both the opposition and much effective humor to everyone's complete satisfaction.

Mayne Kelso, as Mrs. Curtiss Palmer, Lisbeth Ann's much-imposed-upon aunt, together with Melbourne MacDowell and Frances Raymond as Tod's parents, form a well-chosen, conservative background for the action, which is given increased entertainment value thereby.

Grace Morse individualizes the small part of Clara Belle Palmer as she may always be depended upon to do. We always enjoy her work immensely.

Maurice Campbell directed “The March Hare.”

“Proxies”

California

Some months ago Cosmopolitan Magazine carried a surprise finish short story by Frances Elmer Adams, which wasn't bad. Since then, Famous Players-Lasky has given that story a screen publication. The latter is scarcely acceptable. Indeed, one could almost believe that creditable producers might hesitate in their mad search for picture possibilities this side of the former story. Or is it reasonable after all to expect such to contain filler for long reel subjects? Some way, we don't think so. In any event, “Proxies” is a poor excuse for an enlivening photoplay, that to several mistakes in direction and much unmeaning action by the cast, as well as its rather inadequate story underpinnings. It deals with an aristocratic family whose antics are a bit plebeian, and their ex-crook servants who scurry in and out of stretched situations only to end it all happily and with notable ease, or rather with complete lack of responsibility, after the manner of the old time mystery novel. Photographically the production is more or less uneven.

According to the introductory titles, Norm Kerry and Zeena Keefe are co-starred in this picture. One might be tempted to ask why the combination, since, if the story includes a role of sufficient sympathetic value to even feature an ex-convict butler, played by Kerry, Miss Keefe's position, or Clare, a ladies' maid, is only one of rather minor support. Neither of these performers are here.

Kerry, minus his famous mustache and squeezed into the conservative servant's bodice manages to lose both of the original fascination which shades so much of his work pleasantly. Poor Peter means little at best, and at worst he is truly a mistake. Miss Keefe in the other part is afforded really no chance to do more than count among those present, although we found ourselves once or twice fearing her conspicuous arrival at the grimacing point.

At that, the rather terrible performance of the piece belongs to Raye Dean, who is about the last word in gushing, simpering, self-consciousness as Carlotta Darley, a society bud whose carriage is about as "dis" graceful as can be easily imagined. Very nearly she knocks over the furniture, and her posture continually presents an angle of about forty-five degrees from the waist up. Anyway, that must pass. We announce ourselves inadequate for once to express ourselves upon an ingénue.

Wm. H. Tucker, a real actor, is seen as Carlotta's father; and John Stover, the unmentionably indecently heavy, is played a bit strenuously by Paul Evertson.

Jack Crosby, in a superficial juvenile, completes the cast.

George Baker produced "Proxies" in the cast.

“One A Minute"

Grauman's

"One a Minute," a Fred Jackson attempt of rather doubtful content, is the Thos. H. Ince-MacLean-MacLean Item may be seen here this week. It is scarcely up to MacLean's standard for entertainment value. Perhaps it is that the material contained in the story, which is altogether too greatly overdrawn to even be burlesqued effectively. Its slimy action directions about a small town gives it a faked but successful Panacea for All Pains causes a riot along the countryside. Ridicule

ALL LIFE A SCHOOL

Any successful attorney, scientist or member of other profession of parts, will tell you that they have been students throughout the long, profitable years. They will tell you that they still are students. Keeping up with the procession when the line of march lifts from marchers to equestrians, and from horseback to swiftly-moving, modern conveyances, is a task which leaves far behind the fellow who is satisfied with the methods his forerunners pursued. What an enormous burden would be lifted from studios if the uninitiated in the peculiar knack of photoplay writing, paused to secure the necessary training also; for how can these hopes to succeed when the successful writers necessarily must continue going to class, as it were? The "army of the untrained!" It is the bane of many industries; it is the world-problem in many respects.

HIRE A GUIDE

The confusing synopsis is about as welcome as a nickel tip in a million-dollar café. Many writers attach a cast and then depend upon the memory of the reader to carry the long list of names and their relationships, while perusing a story entirely strange. It can’t be done. If you want a fair reading open your story with: "Mary, daughter of Pete Jones, engaged to Burton; Burton, son of the village street-sweeper, engaged to Mary; Mike, Burton’s rival, feared by Mary’s father, etc. It would do no harm to reiterate at least once such things as "lovers," "rivals," and the like, thereby bringing happy relief to the struggling behind the goggles. It is a startling fact that a majority of stories submitted do not do this.

A LOW, RAKISH MOAN

Continuing the same line of melancholy thought, listen to the tormented soul of the fellow who has to read them: "I frankly admit that the unnecessarily long synopsis doesn’t have the same chance with me—or with any other eye-strained, brain-fagged reader—as the down-to-tacks show. There is a mighty good reason. If you were too long to reach deep water, a fellow is too tired to enjoy the swim. Get me? To tell you some dis- gusting stories about those ducks who describe and illustrate, and who have their characters pull off a lot of "thinks," would paste the good, old rule on the wall. "Every scene should advance the plot," they might take a tumble; for they could well apply the rule to the synopsis by making it a long "word." If this doesn’t bring them down to earth, they ought to be out on the Chautauqua circuit speech-making. The pump-handle who puts out sixteen mortal pages to let us know that the Duke of Oklahoma is out to win the goal away from Harold, the chiro- polist, and thereby win Old Man Bindle’s good will, should be seen a specialist.

SHINGLES OFF THE ROOF

Panning the editor never sold story. "If a screen shows worse ones than mine, may be the truth, but it doesn’t help much."

A really good story will sell if it circulates wisely and persistently. Perhaps your story doesn’t live up to the corking title, giving a dog a "good" name never proves the old rule. Get news! All of our actual manufacture has slowed up a bit, the demand for stories still is on deck. Yes, the price of comedy stories remains low, but why not? "Anyone can write that kind of stuff." Don’t pick on the old, familiar plot because it has "gone over," previously. Columbus sacrificed a perfectly good egg to discover a dry country, but the fellow who would try it now would be an awful fool. Don’t think if you happen to write a Canadian woods story without your impervious hero in uniform. Nothing will your heart’s interest story receive a swift kick merely for the lack of a midnight shoot accompanied by the usual feminine shriek. Many of our so-called comedies remind us of Willie’s effort to make baby smile with the glove stretcher.

"Then why does he wear a knife between his teeth and a shotgun behind his ear?"

"This is because he is a studio editor, my dear."

"Is he going to assassinate some one?"

"No, but he is going to try homicide upon those stories in front of him."

"Why is the man going to carve up the poor stories and then shoot them in cold blood?"

"Because they carry such deadly titles as, "Loved and Lost," "Her Sacrifice," "The Attraction of a Guarded Gem," "Yesterday’s Vampire Changed at the Altar," my tender offspring."

"O, I see; he is one of the Corsican Brotherhood?"

"No, my angel of light, he is the new/business." "Why don’t you start on the fellers that write the fool titles, Mama?"

AT VITAGRAPH

Earle Williams has finished the filming of "Bring Him In." The picture is from a Canadian-northwest story by H. H. Van Loan. Robert Ensminger co-directed with Mr. Williams in the production.

Jimmy Aubrey has finished his second two-reel comedy under his new contract. The working title of this latest laugh maker is "The Storm." "The Superman," William Duncan's newest picture, is completed and will be one of the Vitagraph September-October releases. Edith Johnson co-stars with Mr. Duncan.

The David Smith production, "Flower of the North," is well under way. This is the James Oliver Curwood story in which Henry B. Walthall and Pauline Starke head an all-star cast.

AT REALART

Bebe Daniels has finished the last scenes of "The Speed Girl," under the direction of Maurice Campbell.

May McAvoy has started "The Happy Ending," under the direction of Frank O'Connor.

FAY TINCHER

In Christie Comedies.

IRVING LESSEER DISTRIBUTING NEW PRODUCT

Irving Lesser has recently returned from the east and announces that a new series of feature productions will be made independently, to be distributed under his banner. These will be the Lester Cuneo productions, a series of eight five-reel Western pictures featuring Mr. Cuneo and produced by the Doubleday Production Company in Los Angeles.

The deal was consummated by Mr. Lesser, representing the Western Pictures Exploitation Company, and Chas. E. Mack, representing the Doubleday Production Company.

The first picture of the series, "Blue Blazes," has been completed and will shortly be released. It was produced by Mr. Mack and directed by Robert Kelley.

AT THE HAMILTON-WHITE STUDIOS

The concluding scenes for Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton's newest Mermaid comedy, "The Vagrant," have been shot and production will start at once on the star's next picture, the title and details of which will be announced shortly. Irene Dalton and Tom Wilson support the comedian.

The La Brea oil field has been used for the past two weeks by Jack White for scenes in his latest comedy, which is nearing completion.

SALISBURY PICTURE

After a long term of inactivity, Monroe Salisbury will star in a new picture to be produced by his own company. The play will have a Spanish setting and Salisbury's representative is now in Mexico gathering data.

PAUL BERN STARTS

Director Paul Bern started work recently on "The Man with Two Mothers," an original story by Alice Duer Miller. Percy Helburn, former cameraman for Reginald Barker, is photographing the production.

KEATON COMEDY

Buster Keaton has completed his initial two-reeler for release under his new distributing contract with Associated First National. The comedy, as yet unnamed, is being cut and titled.

SENNETT STAR

Billy Bevan is to be featured in his own company at the Mack Sennett studio. His first starring vehicle has lately been completed under the direction of Roy Del Ruth. Upon the reopening of the studio, production will start upon the second Bevan comedy.

In the meantime, Mr. and Mrs. Bevan are enjoying a vacation.

BRANCH OFFICE

The Cinema Sales Co., of Los Angeles, world distributors for the Creco Arc Lamps, have opened a branch office and salesroom in Hollywood. H. Sylvester, E. E., who has been in the electrical end of motion pictures for the past twelve years, is the manager.

ANN FORREST NO LONGER WITH LASKY

Ann Forrest's contract with Lasky has expired and she is joining another producing firm. Her last picture is "The Great Impersonation," with James Kirkwood.

Going East for Stories
B. P. Fineman has left Los Angeles for New York in order to secure new stories and eastern artists for Katherine MacDonald productions. Mr. Fineman will confer with the editors of several magazines regarding the use of their stories for Miss MacDonald.

Nelson McDowell has been on location for two weeks at Bishop, Cal.

Little Freddie Drogmund is playing the child lead with the Campbell Comedy Company.

Fontaine La Rue has signed with Lasky to play the heavy in Ethel Clayton's new production, "Exit the Vamp."

The Ranger Bill Miller Production Co. is making its second picture at the Bronx Studio in Edendale. This company is featuring "Ranger Bill" Miller, Walter Bell, former cameraman with several Los Angeles producing companies, is directing.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry" Page Fifteen

The spirit of competition, which is the life of trade, is all very well, but it can be carried to such a degree that it becomes, as it has in the present crisis, almost the death of the industry. The old-time fear of competition has been played in a most vivid manner the fact that in striving for our own welfare we must also consider the welfare of the fellow producer bound to suffer from the reaction. Nothing short of the situation in which the producers of Los Angeles find themselves today would have won our wonderment for the tenacity for the rebuilding, along sane lines, of our particular structure. The situation which has absolutely forced a get-together spirit on the part of all branches of the industry and particularly the producers, should teach those who are now spending much of their time consulting with each other that this idea must be carried on in the future when the industry will again see its peak of success.

In building our new foundations for production there are many things that should be considered and agreed upon by producers. The Producers Organization here at Los Angeles has its committee power of modeling the future of this branch of the industry in such a way that great good can come from our present condition. An outlay of future proceedings to cover all business dealings of the producers should be laid out and agreed to by every producer here. The very thought of ethics in the motion picture industry is a hope that has lived in the past. Yet this is just what we need, particularly in the producing world. Ethics indeed, and with a club attached to them so that every producer will recognize them will suffer the penalty.

In rating the wrongs that occur in the fountain of the industry—the production fields—every other branch of the industry should help. If a contract jumper goes over to another company because that organization is willing to pay twice as much as he is getting now, that producer does not earn the organization that takes him away should be compelled to suffer for it. A heavy monstrosity of prices, as is charged, and does not have the desired effect an arrangement should be effected whereby that organization's product should be taboo at the theatres until such time as it meets its ways.

The large organizations particularly have it in their power to do the greatest good for the industry at this time that has ever been accomplished. For instance, the elimination of the individual releasing offices which, especially in small towns, often eat up a tremendous overhead, would be a great saving.

There are a hundred things that handicap the individual producer that result from the lack of understanding and cooperation of his fellow producers which could be eliminated by definite agreement that would carry a penalty severe enough to discourage their further occurrence. For instance, each other for anything and everything pertaining to the production of a picture and trying to get what the other fellow has, should be handled with the utmost understanding. The engagement of persons, who are not fitted to handle such positions, at salaries that should go to the creative minds, is another matter. For the achievements of the pictures, is another serious menace that must be overcome. Relatives and old friends should be placed in responsible positions only when their individual merits warrant such procedure, and not otherwise. The question of ability should alone be the consideration in the engagement of any party. One thing this condition we find today is bringing about is the elimination of the dead-wood. The persons actively engaged in business are narrowing down to those who are the survivors of the fittest. Only those who have proved their worth are being held in their jobs. When we are again prosperous, the result is bound to assert itself in no insignificant manner.

Agreements and understandings between producers and buyers are beginning to realize that there is something in that old phrase "united we stand, divided we fall". A thing's single biggest factor in this business today who can afford to believe that he is all-powerful and need not look to the others for co-operation. In every respect we all can meet on a common ground.

The present condition had to come. Now that it is here it should be considered in the nature of the silver lining to the dark cloud that hovers over our business. Let us make the most of it.

Current Reviews

lous sums of money are promiscuously dragged in conversational as the Panacea's buying. Buying and taking it altogether is inevitable that the audience's interest soon stumps in a manner to make the general outcome really immaculate. Furthermore, it is improved by the impression of an over-rushed and therefore somewhat careless production staff, which makes it appear to the players start. The subtleties, some of which are really clever, are unable to do more than fill their place sufficiently, which leaves the picture somewhat.

MacLean himself seems to lack the interest which has done so much for his work heretofore, in the part of Jimmy Knight, a concomitant lawyer and pharmacist. He also falls back a little too much upon his stock mannerisms for laugh, but there are few actors among us who could have done anything as well with the pitifully uncomplicated Jimmy.

Marion De Beck, apparently a stranger in our midst, is present as the necessary girl who happens to be the daughter of Jimmy's little, not-too-dangerous rival for the drug affections of Centerville, Iowa. From this work it is impossible to even appraise the screen value of Miss Harford's performance.

Andrew Robson plays Silas Rogers, the "shrewd" business man, with, very little struggle, has earned a million dollars for the controlling interest in Centerville's most popular medicine.

Victor Portel, Frances Raymond and Graham Williams are all well placed as Jimmy, Pitts, the village editor, Aunty Knight and Martin Duffey.

Jack Nelson directed "One a Minute."

"THE GOLDEN SNARE"

Kinema

The James Oliver Curwood screen offering of his original Arctic story, "The Golden Snare," compares more than favorably with both that novel and an earlier film of the same story. A short choice of the month's releases. There are, as the readers of the book will testify, many amazingly imaginative incidents and keepers for the plot formation, but they are probably not marked enough to detract much from the entertainment value of the production which might, by the way, have been greatly increased had the suspense been managed with more conviction.

Really gorgeous "shots" of Northwest scenery throw a glowing about the story which does much for it, and let us add that whoever handled the dogs is indeed due congratulation upon his work.

David Harford's direction is unobtrusively remarkable for the picturization gracefulness of his characters and scenes.

The cast is unusually fine. Lewis Stone in one of his well-remembered mounted police roles is featured. He plays Sergeant Philip Raine, who has a mission which leads him into the white wastes and finds for him a tender love. His work is very good. Surely the mounted police uniform was designed for this actor's own particular type of character.

Perhaps the picture's really striking moments are provided by Wallace Beery, who gives us his most consistent, in fact his best, characterization in Bram Johnson, an outlaw resident of the Arctic regions, whose brutality cannot rob him of a beautiful sympathy which his carefully handled loss of memory and futile, boylike passion for revenge, get for him. Bram might have proven a mess in less competent hands. The delivery with which Mr. Beery interprets this role is unusual, even for him.

Ruth Renick must also be credited with some exceptionally fine work as Celia, a mystery child and Bram's lonely companion. Her almost uncivilized simplicity is wonderfully effective.

A preferably happy baby, little Esther Scott, as the tiny wail whom Raine takes on as a pal, catches heart-interest of her from both the masculine and feminine fans.

Melbourne MacDowell, Francis MacDonald and Wellington Playtor are excellent types for "Doug" Johnson, Pierre Thibou and Black Dawson.

"The Golden Snare" should prove very attractive from the office standpoint. It is First National release.

CHESTER ACTIVITIES

"Work," second of the Chester Comedies for distribution by Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., featuring Snooky, the "Humanize," and directed by Harry Wilkins and Mort Peckels, was recently finished.

C. L. Chester is making sure that his offices are sufficiently attractive for more travel pictures.

SINGLE REEL COMEDIES

Keeping up with weekly releases of single-reel Vanity and Gayety comedies, the Christie company has recently completed three, and another is in progress.

"Wild and Witty," a very wittily clever comedy featuring Henry Murdock and Josephine Hill, and was directed by Scott Sidney, "Oh, Brother," is another new Gayety comedy by Keene Thompson, which was made by Fred Sullivan, featuring Helen Darling and Henry Murdock.

"Eat and Be Happy" is a new Vanity comedy recently completed by Scott Sidney featuring Irene Dalton and Francis Feeney.

Scott Sidney is now making "Afraid of His Wife," featuring Vera Steadman and Earl Rodney.

Leo White has been chosen for an important part in Miss Dupont's initial play, entitled "The White Peacock Feather."

Violet Redcliffe has a part in Mary Pickford's current production "Little Lord Fauntleroy."
Where to Find People You Know

DARRELL FOSS IN REALART PLAY

Darrell Foss will play opposite May MacAvoy in her newest production for Realart, entitled "The Happy Ending."

IRENE RICH OPPOSITE ROGERS

Irene Rich supports Will Rogers in his first independent production, upon which camera work has begun at the Brunton Studio.

Eva Southern will be seen in the initial starring vehicle of Dupont, entitled "The White Peacock Feather."

Edith Chapman has been selected by Bayard Veiller for a prominent role in "Lady Fingers," starring Bert Lytell.

Ramsey Wallace and Freeman Wood will have parts in the new Dupont picture being produced at Universal City under the direction of Jack Conway.

Frederic KöVert, female impersonator, will play an important role in support of Miss Dupont in her initial feature for Universal, which Jack Conway is directing.

Fontaine La Rue, Theodore Roberts and William Boyd have been added to the cast of Ethel Clayton's latest Paramount offering, "Exit the Vamp," in production at the Lasky Studios.

Robert Frager, J. W. Johnstone, Mildred Wright and Margaret Davis appear in the of the first Allene Ray six-reeler, about to be released by Western Pictures Corporation.

ELKS ENTERTAINED

Lodge No. 174, Tacoma Elks, were recent visitors at the Hamilton-White studios in Hollywood and were guided through the studios by W. W. Rarity, general manager of the company.

Chow Young will have a part in "Lotus Blossom."

Edward Le Veque has been engaged by the Harter-Wall productions as assistant and casting director.

Louis Dumar is playing a part with William Russell in his latest Fox feature, "The Girl from Long Acre."

Josephine Crowell and Helen Dunbar will enact important parts in the new Realart-May MacAvoy picture now filming.

The Milburn Moranti company has returned from a three weeks' location trip in northern California, where scenes were taken for the third of the series of Moranti pictures starring George Chesebro.

In the supporting cast of "The Love Charm," starring Wanda Hawley, are Warner Baxter, Mae Busch, Sylvia Ashton, Jack Rosson, Fritz Ridgeway, Carrie Clark Ward and Henry Johnson.

Arthur R. Thompson has been commissioned as assistant field production manager by Harry Schenck, production manager at Universal City. Mr. Thompson's work will be on the sets with the various producing units.

James Rennie, Noel Taree, Vivian Ogden and Mary Foy play the principal roles in "Star Dust," the Hobart Henley production in which Hope Hampton is featured and which will be released early this fall by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

GOLDWYN STORIES

E. Phillips Oppenheim's story, "Nobody's Man," has been purchased by Goldwyn and will be put into production as soon as a cast is selected.

Alice Duer Miller is busy writing a new story entitled "Say It With Flowers."

Vic Potel is playing Willie McNeill in "Bob Hampton of Placer."

Isabel Wilford is at present playing opposite Art Acord at Universal.

Carrie Clark Ward is playing the housekeeper in "Bob Hampton of Placer."

George Webb will enact an important role in Willard's production, "Fifty Candles."

Lillian Biron has a part in a Christie two-reel comedy now being directed by Frederic Sullivan.

Florence Wix is cast in the forthcoming Gladys Brockwell picture, in production at the Mayer Studio.

Frank Brownlee has signed with King Vidor to play an important part in that producer's current picture.

Little Dorree Turner has been signed by Chester Comedies to portray the feminine lead in its latest comedies.

Charles West, who has recently recovered from an attack of appendicitis, is playing Major Brant in "Bob Hampton of Placer."

Supporting Jimmie Adams in his next picture for Educational release, are Cliff Bowes, Kalla Fasha, Phyllis Allen and Tom Wood.

The Hamilton-White studio, represented in the Elks' parade at Redondo recently by seven of its bathing girls, was awarded first prize by the beach city H. P. O. E. The prize, consisting of $100, was divided equally among the girls.

Imported Talent

Last week, you may have observed in the news columns of this magazine and others, that the head of one of Los Angeles' producing companies was on route to New York in search of players and story material for his star's forthcoming production. Not much in itself, was it? Merely a notice which made equally as good reading as publicity. In other words, the type of stuff which we must always welcome as news, the one justification of every trade paper.

But as we read and edited that short paragraph, we experienced an annoyance at its content which we anticipated sharing with the many who were soon to run across it in their weekly wanderings for production information. Because the article was tinged with the insidious and ironical, our expectations were realized and we have at hand many expressions of resentment against those few lines.

There is no use covering over the fact that the motion picture industry has just bridged its most trying stretch, that it has miraculously enough survived the floods of near-panic which threatened to wash away the foundations of its structure so short a time ago. It would be equally futile to deny that the profession is yet suffering, while laboriously overcoming the dire effects of this ominous lack of studio activity which we have known. Its direct result may be seen in the hundreds of the screen's foremost actors and playwrights who have been walking Hollywood Boulevard with their cars in soak to balance their grocery bills. Such a condition is deplorable, but not exactly unbearable, until the studios commence to drag in outside material to fill the few strait engagements now open.

It is an undisputed fact that the film capital contains the greatest number of picture artists ever assembled in one city; while our score of famous scenarists have never been excelled. Could there then exist a logical reason for the passing up of such capabilities in favor of certainly no superior, and in many instances unknown, quantities of eastern importation? It wouldn't seem even worthy of consideration, would it?

Until the Los Angeles production departments can handle the art already at their disposal, they are in pretty poor business to be inviting in more competition, that mere living may be made harder for all, including their own benighted selves. For even the publicity attached to such enterprise falls far short of making up for the increased expense which they feel thereby. Far be it from us to be narrow in our loyalty, but in these strenuous times our recommendation to the Los Angeles producer is to combine good sense with far-sightedness and keep our own at work.—F. R.

“The Old Nest”

Repetition is valuable only when it improves upon former efforts. Reginald Barker and Rupert Hughes have done in “The Old Nest” what Fox failed to accomplish in “Over the Hill.” The two productions are attempts in the same direction, but while the latter mentioned is a draggy, ridiculously overdrawn story containing only one excellent performance, and possibly two more that are passable, “The Old Nest” is well told, dramatically narrated, and the personal life interpreted by an all-star cast that disappoints in no single instance. Further, “Over the Hill” is a technical mess; Mr. Hughes’ film play has been effectively scenarized and splendidly photographed, while Hughes’ subtitling is as, as the case may be, genuinely touching or cleverly shaded with irony, as against the most inferior ones in the other piece. It is remarkable, indeed, what just “knowing how” means to the creation of anything. Again we say in its line “The Old Nest” excels. Its homely pathos and comedy are equably real, and the people it includes represent that class of well meaning human beings who go to make up the greater portion of this world’s populace.

A novelty in the way of introducing the rather numerous characters in the play, and some unexpected but well placed suspense add the finishing touches to “The Old Nest”s success. It will have a great general appeal.

Each of the plays which we have been comparing centers about the mother of a large family. We had nothing but admiration for Mary Carr’s portrayal of that role in “Over the Hill.” Her work was beautiful, but Mary Alden offers us a classic in Mother Anthon, the foremost figure in Goldwyn’s presentation. In fact, it would be impossible to say too much for this artist’s work. Every point given her, and they are numerous, is accepted and perfectly handled. Particularly subtle is her interpretation of the self-contained misery which her lonely character experiences when bereft of the family for which she had lived. We may safely say that this is the best performing of its kind that we have seen. It is also Miss Alden’s greatest role and is in itself worthy of the work of a lifetime.

Dwight D. Crittenden is responsible for a carefully thought out portrayal. He plays with great understanding Dr. Anthon, the typical father of the typical, progressive American family of the upper middle class.

The Anthon children grown are all unusually well done by Richard Tucker, Louise Lovely, J. Park Jones, Cullen Landis and Helene Chadwick. Each part is comparatively small, but all are both consistent and complete, as are those done by the dandy group of little trouper who enact the family as youngsters. It includes Lucille Ricksen, Johnny Jones, Buddy Messenger, Billie Cotton, Marie Moorhouse, Robert De Vilbiss and Marshall Ricksen.

Billy Eugene is to be congratulated upon the accomplishment of that most difficult of things, a comedy “bit” that lives. Others in the cast are Theodore Von Eltz, Molly Malone, Nick Cogley and Fanny Stockbridge.
“The Evil Shadow” is the second production of a series of five features now being filmed at the Montague studio, San Francisco. The story is by Walter Montague and is being directed by Harry Revier. In the cast supporting Roy Stewart are Louise Lovely, Harry Van Meter, Eugene Burr, Ker- nan Wallace, Katherine Angus and Dorothy Valega.

Harry J. Edwards is busy cutting the first of a series of comedies to be made by the Max Robert Syndicate.

NAZIMOV’S LATEST TO BE RELEASED

Madame Nazimova’s production of “Camille,” on which cutting and editing practically have been completed, will be released shortly.

The cast of the Nazimova film is headed by Rudolph Valentino, and Edward Connelly also plays an important part.

ANOTHER LLOYD REISSUED COMEDY

“All Aboard!” is the title of the next Harold Lloyd comedy of the series of re-issued one-reelers, which Pathe has scheduled for release during the week of July 31. In this comedy, Lloyd is supported by Bebe Daniels and “Subby” Pollard, now being featured in Hal Roach comedies.

ANIMATED CARTOON ANNOUNCED

“The Country Mouse and the City Mouse” is the new animated series of “Aesop’s Film Fables,” created by Cancer- ist Paul Terry, and produced by Fables Pictures, Inc. The short subject feature has been scheduled for release by Pathe during the week of July 31.

FINISHES CUTTING

Alex Troffey has finished the cutting and editing of “The Light in the Clearing,” a T. Hayes Hunter production, for the Dial Film Company.

ANIMAL STORY COMPLETED

The Bradbury twins, the wild animal trappers of the Pathe series of “The Adventures of Bill and Bob,” have completed the filming of their Canadian lynx trapping adventure, under the direction of Val Paul, and are preparing to start production on their next adventure story.

FINISHES FIFTH

The Cyrus J. Williams Co. has completed the production of “The Honor of Ramerez,” its fifth picture of the second series for Pathe, and director Robert Bradbury has returned from Koen’s Camp with his players, who included Tom Santis, Ruth Stonehouse, Beside Love and Eddie Hearn.

CHAPLIN PREVIEW

A preview showing of Charles Chaplin’s latest feature, “The Idle Class,” was given at the Raymond Theatre in Pasadena recently before a gathering consisting of Mr. Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Rob Wagner, John McCormick, western representative of Associated First National, and the staff of the Chaplin studio and friends.

Mr. Chaplin, who has been working on “The Idle Class” for the past twenty-two weeks. Besides Mr. Chaplin, the cast consists of Edna Purviance, Loyal Underwood, Harry Bergman, Rex Storer, John Rand, Lelita Parker and Allen Garcia.

OWN PRODUCING COMPANY

Lloyd Ingrahm, who recently finished directing Carter De Haven in “My Lady Friends,” is busy on the plans for his own producing company.

AT UNIVERSAL

“The Mayor of Gopher Hole,” a two-reeler western featuring Art Acord, has been completed by Edward Laemmle. Isoble Wilford makes her debut in pictures opposite the western star.

“Transford of Rainbow Ridge,” a Eugene Manlove Rhodes’ story, is being used by Hoot Gibson as a support for Jack Pollard. Production of the story is under way, with Jack Ford directing.

Associates of Tod Browning have seen the first screening of “Fanny HERSELF,” the Edna Ferber story which has just been completed. The story was filmed with Mabel Jullienne Scott in the name role.

Marie Prevost has started work on “The Girl Who Knew All About Men,” a comedy by Roy Clements, which is being directed by King Baggard.

Production will start presently on a serial which will go to the screen as eighteen chapters from American history. The story is called “Winners of the West,” written by Ford Beebe from history, and will feature Art Acord. It will be directed by Edward Laemmle.

Jack Conway is filming the concluding scenes of “The Rage of Paris,” formerly entitled “The Wild Pink Feather,” and plans are being made for the filming of “Ropes,” the star’s next vehicle, from the one-act playlet of that name by Wilbur Daniel Steele.

Glady’s Walton has finished “The Ark Angel,” under the direction of Maj. David Kirkland.

AT GOLDwyn

E. Mason Hopper, who has directed several Rupert Hughes’ stories, has been assigned to handle the megaphone on “The Wall Flower,” the latest product of this author’s pen. It will embody an altogether new idea in motion picture photography, evolved by Mr. Hughes.

“Grand Larceny,” Albert Payson Ter- hune’s novel, will go into production this week under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

AT VITAGRAPH

Earl Williams has started work upon a five-reel picture called “Lucky Carson,” from the novel “Salvage,” by Agatha Dem- ster. Wilfred North and Robert Ensinger will co-direct this picture.

William Duncan’s new production, “The Comeback,” is being made.

AT REALART

Bebe Daniels’ next picture, on which she will start shortly, is at present entitled “Spring Fever.” It is an original story by Katherine Pinkerton and Grace Drew Brown. Chester M. Franklin will direct from the scenario by Douglas Doty.

Constance Binney’s first story at the Western Realart studio will be based upon “The Heritage of Dedlow Marsh,” by Bret Harte. Adaptation is being made by Fred Martin, and Major Maurice Campbell will di- rect.

AT METRO

Rex Ingram has started preparations for the filming of “Turn to the Right,” his forth- coming Metro feature.

Maxwell Karger is preparing for the filming of “The Golden Gift,” Alice Lake’s new starring vehicle, which he will direct.

COLETTE FORBES

Now playing an important part with Earle Williams.

The production is particularly to be commended for the superior characterization of its leading players and the general excellence of its technique.

Long have we desired to see several of our favorite character artists featured. In this play we have that pleasure in one instance, for William Y. Mong, whose comedy and pathos are well nigh unsurpassable, heads the cast in the role of Wilkins, the before-mentioned bookkeeping insect who, for fifteen years, accepts underpaid drudgery as the inevitable. That his revolt after such an exaggerated patience is all the greater when the final, impossible straw descends upon his roof, is but natural—and hungers the tale. Mong is truly beautiful in the part. Each little touch that he adds to poor Wilkins assists him to live pathetically, amusingly, nobly for his audience. There are no oversights in the precise, faithful characterization, and there are no misses when Mong goes through. He gets them! Wilkins is a screen personality who will be remembered.

Helen Jerome Eddy further demonstrates her versatility with Emily, the romantic old maid, whose adoration of Wilkins is fully reciprocated. Her oddly fitting garments and ribboning belt of Wilkins' garb complete her. Emily is lovable vitalis and has much sympathy in what seems to be an ill-fated love dream.

The young love element of the story which is scarcely necessary but still, as handled, a good touch, is managed by Pat O'Malley and Marguerite de la Morte, who play Jimmie, a regulation juvenile, and Dorothy, an average daughter of the modern business man. There is little to justify their presence save the appeal which always follows good-looking youth.

THE WHISTLE

Grauman's Riatio

Unless the lure of the screen proves too much for its most popular western star, we see no reason why Bill Hart finds that his new picture, "The Whistle," which is here for an indefinite run. Many thousands will miss the "good- man," whom they have followed for years—out it might be mentioned that he doesn't! And anyway he has given us a humdinger for his farewell offering.

"The Whistle" is an original by May Wilson, and Olgin Locke is a laborer and a capitalist. It claims to solve no problems save those of the characters in it, which is apparently its intention. The theme of "The Whistle" tells us in a somewhat new way that one wrong has never righted another and that vengeance is not man's heritage.

As usual Lambert Hillyer is responsible for the more-than-satisfactory direction and the camera work is all that it should be. Hart plays this time, Evans, an efficient factory foreman, whose life's tragedy comes in the form of what he considers his beloved son's unceasing, unprotected machinery. With bitter hatred in his soul for the employer who permitted such a condition to exist, he steals his son from his parents on his own way, saving the baby from the river in which it is later believed to have been drowned. Only years and suffering prove the futility of any man's revenge, and retribution is made in the sympathetic way that this actor has of portraying the sorrow and sacrifice of the strong. Robert Evans is a typical Hart character, rendered as Hart may be depended upon to individualize his roles.

Frank Brownlee is well placed as Henry Chappell, the negligent capitalist who isn't too "heavy" to love his family and to reform himself. He makes his part really very human on account of this last. Most of our opposition is inexcessively overdrawn.

Myrtle Stedman enacts Mrs. Chappell, a comparatively minor role, in her customarily good form, with what a splendidly natural work is done by Will Jim Hatton and Georgie Stone, who play respectively, Danny, Evans's son; and Georgie, who knows the silent man as his kindly uncle and his own parents not at all. Little Richard Headrick is adorablu as Georgie's baby.

"The Whistle" is Paramount's local, long-run release.

The Screen Writers' Forum — Conducted by William E. Wing

NOT TOO LATE

Sweden has given us something to think about outside of the hired-girl problem.

A film leader from the country which provides Minnesota with its congressmen, has just exploded a truth in our midst which has startled even old Doblin in his stall.

He says non-tippery screen productions and inevitable happy endings, at the expense of suspense and true art, are endangering the whole industry.

Once upon a time Old Dad sent Sonny Boy forth with:

"Get money. Get it honestly if you can—but get the money."

But our disturbing guest from afar didn't qualify in the least by adding:

"Let us have art and noble theme—if they will get the money."

Nope.

He forgot the old walk entirely, but he flung a warning into the teeth of commercial production that should rattle the bones of all the Old Dads.

Of course the Swedish film leader didn't realize how much of the paid upliftster is interfering blindly with production of stories which should be told. But he actually saw an army of men who, before the days of the cash-register reformer, buried art under a rain of dollars.

Writers are willing—always have been willing—to give to the world the things which are worth while. They should do this on the screen, without swerving from their loyalty to the worthy story itself.

And they are going to do it, despite commercialism, and the censor who would not be if the pay-roll dried up.

JINGLING LAURELS

The well-known victor, who is presumed to have a first mortgage upon the spoils, continued pleasantly in our midst. As in the past, he was trained to the minute.

The lounge-lizard of promise ran last, as usual.

"You might be interested in something which accompanied by a pleasant jingling sound, say to the tune of $5,000, as in this case of the J. Parker Read contest, when three boys were asked for Louise Glaum, the film star.

Of the 10,000 and more contestants, dormant with disappointment, all the winners proved to be those who had prepared faithfully for the event. The laurels went to:

Mrs. Frances White Elijah, Santa Barbara, $2,500; A. Earl Kauffmann, York, Pa., $1,500; Mrs. Anna Blake Mesquisa, San Francisco, $1,000.

So much for education and the trained individual.

O-O-OH! THE PAPER EDITOR!

If you are a hopeful in the ranks, try and find the Action which the screen demands in Illustration of situation, in the following cases:

1. A captivating woman from some distant land, who is sent to market. Perhaps you will take warning, but you better get understanding before sending the girl to market.

"Mary goes to the restaurant each day, hoping to see Jack, but he does not come. Finally, one day, she sees his approaching.

"Mary reappears in the restaurant and says: "Mary!"

2. A mysterious member of a secret society.

"Mary enters the mystery furnished apartment, uneasy and turtive. He looks from the window with a frown; he goes to the table and picks up a cigar but does not light it. He finally beats himself and ponders.

"Will they follow him? No, they cannot do that or the gang will expose itself. He decides to let matters continue as—etc., etc., etc."

DUSTING 'EM OFF

Always something new ahead.

Why not brush up and be ready?

One a student, always a student.

Brains are highly acceptable in a cafe, but the human kind are appreciated by patrons of the picture theatre.

A story can be red-blooded and yet teach a lesson or convey a moral. Sugar the pill, and send them away happy, though regenerated.

Where is the needed story revealing romance and happiness in an old age? You are holding out on a waiting public.

Why rock the boat? There are plenty of stories, yea, even melodramas, that can be written in place of the undesirable kind.

We hereby offer a prize consisting of one bar of soap to the person who will write a regular go-getter or a society drama without a villain.

Curse 'im!

There wouldn't be much danger of the imported article if the American product were better. The hope of the screen lies with the well trained writer.

The imaginative but untrained writer has about the same chance of scoring as has the gifted but untrained musician who hopes to create a furor among impresarios of the country.

Slump? Perhaps also the public is getting the false note in the story where we invest the handsome youth and the bob-haired ingenue with the wisdom and psychology of those who have lived out the years.

If you heard some studio manager say: "Personally I do not like this story, but it probably would suit the public. Therefore, I will put it on," wouldn't it startle you?

But I said "If."

The tendency to follow up big events with stories they suggest; nursing the senile triangle, and "marry or lose the money" are responsible for one-quarter of manuscript rejections. Are you guilty, or have you reformed?

DID YOU?

What did you get out of "Bill" week?

Did the message of flowers and the inspiration of music awaken something dormant but rather wonderful?

Did you go back to your desk and tear up something which, suddenly, had become unworthy?

And did you write again and put a new something in it?

Then you have added to the music and flowers of life.

PRIZE TITLE OF THE WEEK

(An idea from the leading comedy studio.)

"NO ONE HAS EVER KISSED ME SINCE MOTHER DIED."

Darrell Foss refuses the rumor that he is to be married in the near future.

E. Burton Steene is at present in Venice, Italy, on route to Constantinople, Athens and points in the Balkan states.

Edward Kinsella has an important role in "What No Man Knows," the latest Clara K. Young picture, which Harry Garson is directing.

The William A. Brady melodramatic production for Paramount, entitled "Lift," comes to Grouman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of Monday, July 25th.

A trio, composed of Louise Fazenda, Ben Alexander and "Teddy," has recently signed to appear at the Orpheum circuit.

IN ITALIAN PICTURE

Mario Dorso has returned from an extended European tour, during which time he starred in "Beatrice," an Italian photoplay, which will be released here by Goldwyn in the fall.

OCTOBER EUROPEAN TRIP

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks announce that they will take a trip to Europe in October. They expect to stop on the Riviera and later to travel through the Orient, where they contemplate making a picture.

GETTING EXTERIORS

The technical staff and principals of "Fifty Candles" are in San Francisco, shooting exteriors for this forthcoming Irving Willat production.
WARREN CORPORATION NOTES

Reginald Barker, the newest independent producer, will release his pictures through the F. B. Warren Corporation, a new independent distributing company. Mr. Barker will make four pictures each year for world distribution.

The Warren Company will also release annually four pictures by Lois Weber, four by Victor Schertzinger, one big production from each of four European countries, Norway, France, Italy and England, and plans a revival of "Qao Vadis," and the presentation of a Bohemia-made picture and a Will Bradley short feature. The company will release one picture a week, starting September 4th.

HAMILTON-WHITE COMEDIES

Having completed the filming of "The Vagrant," Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton is preparing to start production on a new story, the title and details of which will be announced shortly. "The Vagrant" marks the second of the new series of Hamilton-White Mermaid comedies for Educational release. Jack White will finish presently the filming of his latest comedy, the concluding scenes of which are being shot at Rancho La Brea.

RAY GALLAGHER WESTERNS

NEW HAROLD LLOYD COMEDY

Location sites are now being selected for the fourteenth Harold Lloyd comedy, production of which will begin shortly. Mr. Lloyd is at present engaged in going over the script of the new comedy, and supervising the assembling of his completed picture, "Look Before You Leap."

PATHE SERIALS

CHANGES DIRECTORS

A previous agreement with another producing organization prevented Victor Schertzinger from directing Jackie Coogan, and it has been decided that Victor Heerman will handle the megaphone for the little star. Director Heerman is busy preparing the scenes, work on which will begin August 1 at the Brunton studios. Casting will commence this week.

LOCATION SCENES

On the grounds of the Krotana Institute, a Hollywood theological community, Per- lind Earle spent two days filming scenes for the "Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam recently. Frederick Warde as Omar, Edwin Stevens as the chief of Assassins, little Kathleen Key as "Thou," and Ramon Sam- aniques, Hedwig Reicher, Stutz Edwards and Paul Weigel participated.

RAWLINSON VEHICLE IN PREPARATION

Harvey Gates is writing the continuity for "The Black Bag," a mystery story by Louis Joseph Vance, in which Herbert Rawlinson will begin his starring contract with Mr. Rawlinson is at present in the British Columbia woods, supporting Princess Diana in the star's forthcoming Universal-Jewel production, "Conflict."

"BITS OF LIFE" HAS SHOWING

"Bits of Life," Marshall Neilan's latest picture for First National release, was given its first showing at the Raymond Theatre, Pasadena, recently. The negative has been shipped to New York. The premiere attracted many of the independent stars releasing their photoplays through Associated First National. Among those present were: Charles Chaplin, Allen Holubar, Dorothy Phillips, Buster Keaton and Natalie Talmadge. Katherine Mac- Donald, Charles Ray, John M. Stahl, R. A. Walsh and Miriam Cooper, Marshall Neilan, Michael Gare, Abe Gore, and John Mc- Cormick.

Ernie Vin Moore has been cast for an important part in "Little Eva Ascends," George D. Baker's third production, to be filmed by S. L. Pictures.

ANNIVERSARY PARTY
Mrs. Rose Curley, mother of Pauline Curley, was the guest of honor this week at a gathering of friends at her home on College avenue, the occasion being a surprise party tendered Mrs. and Mr. Curley on the fortieth anniversary of their wedding. Many felicitations were in order.
"BOB HAMPTON OF PLACER"

"Bob Hampton of Placer," Marshall Neilan's latest by Ruth Parrish, takes one of the most picturesque historical novels that we have seen celluloided. Without being able to boast much of a story it must be credited with many thrills, much real comedy, and the famous Neilan suspense, which combination is sure to entertain any average audience and satisfy the critics. That the story's romantic interest seems somewhat mixed and is more or less unjustified as it pans out, is due, but is undoubtedly a minor matter, at least from the standpoint of the youngsters to whom this picture primarily belongs.

From an objective view the greatest art in the production is demonstrated in the quite marvelous photography, awe-inspiring scenic shots and perfectly managed battle action. Each scene is a correctly balanced painting in itself and every close-up is a portrait. The direction and Marion Fairfax's scenario are both excellent and Marion Fairfax's scenario are both excellent.

James Kirkwood in the title role is exceedingly well situated. He gathers quite an amount of sympathy for Bob, the rascal gambler, who is ever looking for the man the stigma of whose crime he has borne for years. This is quite a characteristic Kirkwood part.

The picture's comedy and, it must be added, probably its deepest tear are provided by little old Wes Barry, who has certainly developed into an artist worthy of the name. As the ridiculously bowlegged little roughneck who resents girls, he keeps the audience quite boisterous, while his death scene is one of the play's most gripping moments.

Marjorie Daw is very pretty as Nadine, Bob Hampton's long lost daughter. She is exactly the right type for her part.

Lieutenant Brant, her soldier sweetheart, is enacted by Pat O'Malley, who hasn't the ghost of a chance to appeal or make his character any part of the romance which descends upon his head from Heaven, as it were.

The exceedingly shivering opposition is provided by Noah Beery and Frank Leigh, who are excellent in their respective roles of Red Slavin, a crooked gambler, and Silver Murphy, the man under Custer's command. These two, with what appears to be many hundred Indians on the war-path, offer, as may be expected, a month of jhrills.

Dwight Crittenden's make-up as Custer is unusually good, while Tom Gallery, Charles West, Loyola O'Connor, Beri Sprote and Carrie Clark Ward complete the cast, each in a well handled minor part.

"Bob Hampton" is a First National attraction.

"PENNY OF TOP HILL TRAIL"

A entertaining little comedy-drama entitled, "Penny of Top Hill Trail," is Andrew Callaghan's latest presentation through Federation for International Pictures, starring Beatrice Love. It is the celluloid version of Belle K. Maniates' story of the same name, the plot of which is a mystifying one of thieves and others winding up in a fairly strong surprise finish. Although the story is credited as firm as it is complicated, it is favorably comparable to the pictures of its type that we have been seeing, while the direction, by Arthur Berthelet, photography and technical effects, are good. Several of the subplots are really clever, but others have been cut in more lucidly.

A very good cast surrounds Miss Love, who characterizes with artistry the title role in that inimitable little way of hers, which we remember so well. It is hard to understand why she is not starring at the present time, for real bone-fide cleverness of the extent, it is safe to say, seventy-five per cent of our busier ingenues. She makes "Penny," an honest-to-goodness modern girl in search of adventure, as such girls usually are.

Wheeler Oakman is very well established as Kurt Walters, a ranch superintendent with old fashioned ideas. He is also exceedingly picturesque.

Again our contemporaries, who have heretofore been so markedly kind, must handle the review of Joe Gay, the romantic cowboy, played by Raymond Cannon.

Herbert Porter is good as Hebler, while Harry De Vere, Lizette Thorne, Gloria Holt and George Stone complete the cast.

"THE MAN WHO"

Tally's

The screen version of "The Man Who," a Lloyd Osborne Saturday Evening Post story, provides Bert Lytell's latest starring vehicle for Metro release. It is a highly amusing comedy, revolving about a returned soldier who at the instigation of the most attractive girl he knows, sets out to be "a man who"—does things. The girl's displeasure at his ridiculous methods and the sympathy which he finds elsewhere keep the picture travelling pretty evenly once it gets on its feet. The start seems hard to make, somehow, which is always a misfortune. Much of the direction is good, while there are spots where it stumbles a little. Photographically and technically otherwise, it is up to standard.

Lytell as Bedford Mills, "the man who," in this case, walks the streets fully clad save for a pair of shoes so that he may assist humanity by lowering the cost of footwear and thereby be referred to as "a man who," is thoroughly refreshing in his comedy. His present role means more and gives him far more opportunity to please than has much of his recent work, including "The Message from Nowhere."

Virginia Valli, who plays the leading feminine part opposite the star, has a distinct personality, which is really charming. We will welcome her again.

Helen Jessop, the society girl who has ambitions for Beddy, is ridiculously exaggerated for comedy by Lucy Cotton. As it happens, however, her part is so placed that all is well.

Very small parts are done by Frank Currier, Tammany Young, Fred Warren, Clarence Elmer, William Roselle and Mary Louise Price.

"The Man Who" is a Maxwell Karger production.

"THE DIGEST OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY"

ENTERTAINS

Mrs. William Thalberg of Brooklyn, N. Y., mother of Irving C. Thalberg, general manager at Universal City, and Miss Sylvia Thalberg, his sister, are guests at the executrice's Wilshire home, where they will remain until September.

BACK FROM MOONMOON

Eddie "Bo" Boland and Jean Hope, his inceuse lead, now Mrs. Boland, returned this week from their honeymoon, spent at San Francisco. While there, the Theatre Treasurer's Club presented Mr. Boland, a charter member of the club, with a gold watch and chain.

MOTION PICTURE COURSE AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

Columbia University announces a course dealing with the production of moving pictures, not be lectured by the direction of Dr. Rowland Rogers, vice-president of the Picture Service Corporation, formerly editor of Paramount and Goldwyn Pictures and later production manager of the Bray studios. Dr. Rogers is serving as chairman of the Curriculum Committee of the Visual Instruction Association, which has secured the use of motion pictures in the New York public schools.

A. D. A. OFFERS ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM AT BARN DANCE

Wallace Reid and his Jazz Band will form one of many features of the Annual Dance of the Assistant Directors’ Association, to be given Saturday evening, July 30th, at the National Studios. This aggregation consists of three drummers, four saxophone manipulators, two violinists who use all of Max Fisher’s latest gymnastic stunts in playing, one cello player, and one pianist, all of whom give promise of a most interesting and amusing collection of jazz music under the personal direction of “Wallie.”

Pauline Frederick will have charge of the Hot Dog Concession, with three professional girls as her assistants in serving the guests.

Jane Novak has been spending her time for the past three weeks at her favorite soda fountain getting “wised up” on how to mix ’em, for she will manage the Soda Booth.

Wallace Berry has been rounding up all the Hawaiian Girls and Boys in California to appear in his Honolulu Village, but when questioned as to what he was going to put on in the way of a show, he just pulled a Theda wink and smiled. However, we all know Wallie.

The merchants and business men of Hollywood and Los Angeles have shown their appreciation of the pep and push of the Association by buying a block of tickets to devote to their employees and through the co-operation of these firms the Association has been able to complete the thousand and one details of what is expected to be the biggest dance of the film year.

IDA RUBINSTEIN FILM

“The Ship,” Italian photoplay recently acquired by Goldwyn for distribution in this country, is a screen version of Gabriel D’Annunzio’s novel of the founding of Venice, “La Nave.”

In the leading role is Ida Rubinstein, Russian dancer. Gabriel D’Annunzio, the poet’s son, directed this film, which required a year in the making.

NEW COMPANY

Mary Savage, president of the Mary Savage Corporation of New York, the American Vesta Tilly boy impersonator, will arrive shortly from the East, and will start at the head of her own company, producing “The Impossible Boy,” from the book by Nina Wilcox Putnam, for which she has acquired the screen rights.

CHILDREN IN HUGHES’ STORY

Johnny Jones, Lucille Ricksen, Buddy Messenger, Marshall Ricksen, Robert Devilbiss and Billie Cotton, previously in “Earthbound,” are the six children players cast in “The Old Nest,” receiving a pre-release showing at the Astor Theatre, New York.

KERN PRODUCTIONS AT FORD STUDIO

Harry Ellis Dean, business manager for the Producers Pictures Corporation, filming the George H. Kern productions, has moved the office of that company from the Hollywood Studios to the Francis Ford Studios, where he has been appointed attorney and general manager. Dean will divide his time between the two organizations awaiting the return of George H. Kern, who left recently for St. Louis for a preview of his “Unfoldment” with the executive officers of the Producers Pictures Corporation, located in that city.

Kern expects to return to Los Angeles shortly and start production on “The Scarlet Avalanche,” adapted from Bulwer Lytton’s story, “The Last Days of Pompeii.”

C. B. C. FILMS

"The Scorpion’s Sting" is the title of the newest of the two-reel Westerns released by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation for the state rights market. The cast includes Aubrey Beards, Hal Fers, Richard Johnson, Bonny Gray, and Marie Mayo.

New C. Edward Hatton two-reel Western, titled "Desperate Chance," has been shipped East. Catherine Craig, who has played opposite Mr. Hatton in the past releases on this series, is again his leading woman.

REGARDING NEW COMPANY

Lester A. Michael, Secretary and General Manager of the Precision Pictures Corporation, which is to produce a series of two-reel comedies, states that the first of its new series, in Lansdowne, Pa., will be completed presently, when Joe Conway will take possession to direct the second picture, which will be known as Omar Comedies. Announcement of distribution of the series will be made in the near future.

FINISHES TITLING

Thomas X. Miranda, who wrote the titles in "The Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur’s Court," has just finished titling Emmett Flynn’s current feature, "The Last Trail," a Fox picture, "Shame," (soon to open on Broadway), "Glen O’Kwan," John Gilbert’s first starring vehicle, and "Straight From the Shoulder," with Buck Jones, are other pictures recently titled by Mr. Miranda.

AT LASKY’S

Work started was by Sam Wood late in the all-star production as yet unnamed, in which Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter appear in the leading roles. Location scenes in Pasadena mark the beginning of the picture. Thompson Buchanan is supervising.

Jack Holt is preparing for his first starring vehicle, which is to be announced shortly. Rollin Sturgeon will supervise Mr. Holt’s picture.

Penrhyn Stanlaws is making progress with his picture, "The Woman in the Case," in which Betty Compson is the star.

INCE STUDIOS

Del Andrews has completed cutting "The Cup of Life," to be released soon by Associated Producers, Robert Bosworth, Midge Bellamy, Tully Marshall and Niles Welch constitute the all-star cast. Rowland V. Lee directed.

Final scenes of "Lucky Damage," a temporarily titled once special, were completed this week, under the direction of Lambert Hillyer.

Lewis Milestone is preparing Douglas MacLean’s latest release, "Passin’ Thru," for the laboratories. Mr. MacLean is assisting with the cutting.

HOLLYWOOD BOY IN GREENWICH FOLLIES

Following his recovery from a wounded ankle sustained last season while dancing in the Greenwich Village Follies, Allen Johnson, pupil of Ernest Belcher, is on his way East for the opening rehearsals of this season’s Follies at the Village theatre.

Lowel Sherman has been given a part in the new Clara K. Young picture in production at the Harry Garson studios.

Another Phase of the Strike

Now that we have just reached the point where it seems that things are looking up for our gasping industry, we discover, some of us with real discouragement, that another strike has been directed at our professional heads. Of course, we might have expected it! Lowered wages are as inevitably “strike” in troublous days like these, so organized labor has decreed, as two and two are four. Our mechanics’ salaries have been cut and our mechanics have struck. If the remedy were as simple to understand as is the situation itself, there would be little cause for apprehension after all.

Indeed, looking only at the surface of things, it might really seem that there has been an undue amount of hue and cry over this occurrence. If such is the case, it is easy to perceive that one of two things should happen quickly. The first has to do with the return of the Union man who is now walking out. That to come back will again be his prerogative is evidently doubted in some quarters where it is argued that there are many not-so-particular and equally competent workers to fill less expensively the places of the departing few. If these outsiders should be hired and the Unions ousted, this incident would mean but a slight interruption in present production plans, and although in such an event a boycott of the product of the organizations who follow this procedure would be attempted, perhaps even put over with effectiveness by the American Federation of Labor, it is somewhat significant to note that a boycott is not feared generally at this time.

From another and just as sane a viewpoint, it would appear likely that the present labor demands will be met by the producer to save a hold-up during this critical period, and to insure a standard class of technical work for the comparatively few pictures now being prepared for release. So it should be settled one way or the other with dispatch and with no great injury sustained by the industry. These are the only logical outcomes.

But—all that we have said applies here only if this controversial condition is a usual one caused by the same old differences. Should it have been precipitated by less worthy and more complicated motives, as has been suggested, we are facing an entirely different and more menacing problem than many of us have previously conceived.

We all know of the advent of the inferior foreign film and of its rejection by the majority. We have also considered much the fact that various big producing corporations are now embarrassed by a large amount of this material which the wary exhibitor is avoiding. It would be a financial feather in some one’s cap to figure an unloading stunt, wouldn’t it? Such a feat, as we all realize, could only be accomplished by starving the booker into submission with reduced or temporarily discontinued production. But there are many of our independents who, possessing no foreign pictures, would scarcely cease activities to benefit those who have them. And now the possibilities of a general strike present themselves. Even the independents are tied up more or less when it comes to matters of this kind, and a general salary cut for the technical man, along with its results, might easily have been premeditated by the powers that be. Without wishing to insinuate anything which we are in no position to prove, we yet hold that every angle of every situation should be lightened as much as possible. If we have traitors in our midst they deserve nothing so much as exposure. This subject will stand a little thought from all departments of the industry.

A Camera Corner

John Leezer, A. S. C., opens a column for the cinematographer in this issue. Although the articles will be in letter form, Mr. Leezer will also answer questions upon photography. Here’s an opportunity for the young camera artist to learn something while the older one may anticipate a “kick” from the challenging which he will be allowed to do at all times unrestrainedly.

Story: $0.00

By Frederick Bennett

It has been my fortune to see four estimates of costs of production during the past week. The average director’s salary is quoted at less than one-half of what it used to be; some of the men who were once regarded as essential to the staff of any production have been eliminated, such as assistant camera man and assistant director, and in one case the wife of the producer was taking charge of the dressing of sets and renting of props. In EVERY CASE there was a general slashing in pay. Extras were quoted at five dollars; characternen and character women who have been getting from fifteen dollars up per day quoted at seven-fifty.

Whether this is justified or not I do not presume to say, but when I saw that the costs of stories were ABSOLUTELY IGNORED, I could not help thinking that the Motion Picture industry is out of infancy and into imbecility. I asked one of the producers about this situation and he said: “Let the actors and the directors dope their own stories, there are plenty of old ones that they can make over.”

That is even cheaper than the German films and will do much greater harm. THE PUBLIC REMEMBERS. YOU CAN’T SERVE HASH ALL THE TIME.

TARKINGTON PHOTOPLAY

Booth Tarkington has completed the scenario of his story, "The American," which he has written as the initial starring vehicle for Miss Gladys Gentry of Louisville, Ky., who recently made her screen debut with Bert Lytell in "The Man Who--" "The American" will be the first of a series of photoplays in which Miss Gentry will be starred, designed especially for churches and schools as well as the cinema theatre, although the subjects treated will be neither educational nor religious in character, but selected solely for their entertainment value.

DORALDINA TO FILM ON CONTINENT

Doraldina, dancer and motion picture star, who has been making a trip through the south and central western states making personal appearances in conjunction with the showings of her latest picture, "Passion Fruit," is about to announce that her next picture, an historical spectacle, will be made by her own company, either in France or Italy.

MOUNTAIN STORIES

The five-reel mountain story titled, "The White Rider," recently completed by D. & M. Productions, featuring Alma Rayford and Denver Dixon, has been accepted by the distributing company for whom it was made and a contract for a series of seven more is now being negotiated.

STARTING

The title of Tom Santich's next picture, which is the sixth of the Cyrus J. Williams series being produced for Pathe, is "The Spirit of the Lake," by Bob Bradbury, who is also directing it.

The company left recently for Keen's Camp for exterior shots.

BILL AND BOB SERIES

The Bradbury twins and their director, Val Paulsen, left for a fishing cruise to Santa Catalina Island for the second episode of the new "Adventures of Bill and Bob" series which Cyrus J. Williams is producing for Pathe.

TITLED

"The Recall" is the title selected by the Morante Producing Co. for its latest five-reel production featuring George Chesebro. The company, which includes Evelyn Nelson and Virginia Morante, has recently returned from a three weeks' location expedition through the Yosemite country and is at present engaged in preparations for interiors which will be filmed at the Balboa studios in Long Beach.

KEATON COMEDY

"The Goat," starring Buster Keaton, is finished and ready for release. This picture was jointly written and directed by Mr. Keaton and Mal St. Claire for Joseph M. Schenck.

CUNEIO COMMENCES WORK

Announcement is made through Charles A. Mack of Doubleday Productions that Lester Cuneo has arranged to produce "Fat O'Paradise," the story by Leo Meehan and Henry McCarty.

IN PRODUCTION

R. A. Walsh has completed arrangements to leave for the north presently with his company to begin the filming of Peter B. Kyne's novel, "Rinded of the Dust.

FORTHCOMING METRO PRODUCTIONS

TO DIRECT EDUCATIONAL FILMS

George Frederic Wheeler of New York has been engaged to direct the first production for L. H. Ormsby of the U. S. Educational Films Corporation of Los Angeles. Mr. Wheeler's recent connection was with the Atlas Educational Film Company of Chicago.

THOMAS B. WALSH PRODUCTION

Director Thomas B. Walsh has recently completed his first independent production, "Shams of Society," in which Barbara Custer, Montague Love, Macey Harlan, Lucile Lee Stewart and others are seen. It was made for Walsh-Fielding Productions and will be released by R-C Pictures. The working title was "Worldly Goods.

AT REALART

Mary Miles Minter is scheduled to arrive from her European trip the last of August and will start forthwith upon "Tillie, the Mennonite Maid," which has been adapted to the screen by Alice Eyton.

May McAvoy is completing "The Happy Ending," by Hector Turnbull, which Frank O'Connor is directing.

AT UNIVERSAL

Marie Prevost has gone to Little Dear to film the opening scenes for her forthcoming photoplay, "The Girl Who Knew All About Men," which King Baggot is directing.

Eileen Sedgwick is on the eighteenth episode of her current serial, which Edward Kull is directing. George Larkin has the principal masculine role in Miss Sedgwick's support.

"Flying Fiats" has been decided upon as the new title for "The Reverend Meddler," the William Hadley novel story which Frank Mayo recently completed under the direction of William Worthington.

"Wild Honey," a story by Cynthia Stockley, has been chosen as Priscilla Dean's next starring vehicle.

The title of "The Butterfly," Marie Prevost's recently completed story, is changed to "Moonlight Follows." It was directed by King Baggot and is scheduled for early release.

AT VITAGRAPH

Larry Semon enact two parts in "The Bell Hop," his latest comedy under production.

"Steelheart" is the final title selected for William Duncan's latest western picture, which was shipped east recently. The working title was "The Superman.

SCHLANK PRODUCTIONS

"Should Brides Marry," the first of ten two-reel comedies featuring Eddie Barry and written by Frederick Bennett, has been finished by the Morris B. Schlank Productions. Preparations are under way for another Bennett story, "The Bluffer," a five-reel comedy-drama, under the direction of Ward Hayes.

AT GOLDWYN

"The Man with Two Mothers," directed by Paul Bern, will be completed this week. Cullen Landis plays the title role, which was formerly credited to Tom Moore, in this Alice Miller Dyer picture.

Wallace Worley will presently start "Grand Larceny," recently put into continuity by Heres Walsh and E. Mason Hopper will handle the megaphone on "The Wall Flower," an original story by Rupert Hughes. Mr. Hughes also wrote the continuity.

NEW CABANNE PICTURE

Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, who wrote the continuity for "The Wonder Man," has provided the story for "The Barricade," which William Christy Cabanne will produce as his next production for R-C Pictures Corporation, at the Victor Studios, New York. The cast is now being assembled.

TO DIRECT GIBSON WESTERNS

Albert Rogell has severed connection with the Star Ranch Photoplays Corporation, and in the future will direct a series of five-reel Westerns, starring Helen Gibson.

TO MAKE HOUDINI SECOND PICTURE

Houdini is working on the second picture for his own organization, Houdini Pictures Productions. It is an original story by the star himself, the working title of which is "Halladine of the Secret Service." Burton King will direct this picture. (Continued on Page 9)
“LIFE”

Grauman’s

We hasten to suggest that Thompson Buchanan, author of this week’s Zukor presents, has made the best of the material by the former’s co-partner in crime, refer to previous pages. In fact, this issue and learn from the pen of Mr. William E. Wing just what constitutes life and living before they apply those terms prematurely as play off titles. For certainly the screen adaptation of their stage drama, “LIFE,” is about as far as possible from all that its promising label implies. However, this appropriately christened offspring of the boards and Paramount has a marked degree of entertainment value in the mystery line which is fairly consistent in its development. The story’s plot is as antiquated as they get (the innocent hero about to be electrocuted for another’s crime, the last minute escape west, his final pardon and all the rest) but its handling somehow redeems it. Photographically the picture is just about average. Technically otherwise; it pleases.

The cast, although mostly satisfactory, probably sometimes due to a lack of opportunity, accomplishes very little in characteriztion.

Jack Mower makes a good looking and heroic target for the many blows thrown at his defenseless head. However, circumstances, rather than his action, collect sympathy for Billy Reid, his secretarial role. The romantic love interest which he shares is secondary and even a bit vague in the story, which will dissatisfy many.

Arlene Pretty enacts the feminine lead or Ruth, the daughter of a man whose murder is charged at her young husband’s door. This part can be criticized by remarking that it cannot possibly either help or hinder her career. It is indiscriminate.

Rod La Rocque as Thomas Burnett, the exceedingly rash young heavy unflinchingly blames upon another his robberies and murder, is quite convincing. He has always impressed us as possessing some unusual but submerged screen possibilities. How he should be cast, however, we have not yet discovered to our complete satisfaction.

Nita Naldi’s work as Barrisford, a professional dancer, and a menacing vamp (we recognized it from her cigarette) is surprisingly uneven. In scenes she approached the striking; again she is anachronistic. We do not know any of her previous film attempts.

The unfortunately weak role of Ralph Stuyvesant, Ruth’s brother, is made weaker by Leeward Meeker. His opposition is really quite pitiable.

J. H. Gilmore, as Wm. Stuyvesant, the doomed father and financier, is good, while Geoffrey Stein and Ellingham Pinto alone make a stab at characterization, no matter how exaggerated, in the parts of Dutch Joe and Monsieur Henri.

Travers Vale directed “Life.”

“THE OATH”

Kineama

Another murder drama based upon William Locke’s "Idols" is "The Oath," the May fair offering of the current all-star cast headed by Miriam Cooper. Four such pictures in one week occur to us as rather confusing the thing in the ground, particularly in "dog days," but booking freaks will come about as do all others. We said that "The Oath" was originally a novel. In many respects the story thing is left entirely to the subtitles, which are merely illustrated by the filmed action. Nevertheless, such a procedure may be gotten away with every once in a while without dissatisfaction ensuing, as it does here. R. A. Walsh’s direction of this photoplay is in most competent. He must be considered, however, for permitting his people to run away with themselves now and again. It is to be regretted that the camera work makes some of "The Oath’s" big moments.

Robert Fischer’s characterization ofインセクト Hart, the historic who is narrow alone in his religious traditions, is excellent, while Henry Clive does consider-ably little in Gerald Meeker’s role.

Ricca Allen in a well handled minor part ends the list of players.

This picture should have a fair drawing power.

“THE FIGHTING LOVER”

Superba

A Ben Ames Williams story which isn’t half as bad as its title promises for, if Universal’s loose Saturday, starring vehicle, "The Fighting Lover," It may be that such a headline pleases the average Universal audience, but "honest, Mabel, ain’t it awful!" The plot itself is a fast mover and providing one isn’t played out by the time this third murder mystery of the week is approached, it will prove comparatively diverting. The plot of the story hinges upon a wager that gathers three strange girls up in a millionaire with three variously disposed young men, a good natured auntie and — a diamond. The stage thus set, there are plenty of intruders from the out- side complicatedly; it must be expected the end leaves one with a "knowing it all the time" feeling, which propagates the ‘moral’ somewhat. The plot will at least one follows it all with some interest.

The direction, by Fred LeRoy Granville, and the photography are up to, possibly a little above, that considered average.

Mayo gives one of his customary performances in the role of Andrew Forside, Auntie Naldi’s brother, which is evidently more thrilling to the girl on our right. Indeed, she said so in a stage whisper to Clarisse who sit beside her. The woman immediately behind us was not thus served evidently, for although she remained through to what the picture’s end, her resentment of what she considered to be the star’s attitude of "hating himself" was plainly audible at short intervals. Personally we enjoy Mr. Mayo’s management of his work a lot better these days, and the action itself could be more carefully chosen for him by his company.

Jacqueline Logan is quite entrancing in the role, the leading lady. She is one of the mystery girls, Helen Leigh, whose unusual movements arouse suspicion in all but the stately hero’s unaltering heart. Miss Logan has marked possibilities.

Jean Cilhoum does some very good work as the real "crookess" of the bunch. She is more suited to the handling of opposition than any other kind of thing in which we have seen her.

A representative of the "good sport actress" is excellently done by Elinor Hancock, who is a very fascinating type of middle aged womanhood, by the way.

Jackie Reade and Colin Kenny are right there as the romantic Ned Randolph and the cynical and ill-fated Vic Ragner.

Gordon Sackville is also good as Helen’s brother Elinor, while our favorist, Joe Singleton, Ruth Ashby, Fred G. Becker and Robert Bolder complete the cast.

"The Fighting Lover" is an improvement over several Mayo pictures we have witnessed, from an attention-holding point of view.

"I AM GUILTY"

California

Horrors and then some more! We hadn’t thought that there was a stone age plot left uncovered after those that we have already consumed although "I Am..." (Continued on Page 17)
IN CURWOOD STORY

William H. Tooker will be seen in a prominent part in the second of the James Oliver Curwood stories, "God’s Country and the Law," which the Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., of Portland, Maine, is making for the screen, under the direction of Sidney Olcott. Besides Tooker, the cast includes Gladys Leslie, Cesare Gravina, Fred C. Jones, and Hope Sutherland.

HAS LEADING NEILAN ROLE

Rockcliffe Fellowes will be seen in the leading role of the new Marshall Neilan production now nearing completion under the tentative title, "Some People."

IN "SCHOOL DAYS" CAST

Mildred Moore has definitely decided to forsake the speaking stage for the screen, and has been given the part of the "school marm" in "School Days," which William Nigh is making for Warner Brothers.

IN DE HAVEN'S LATEST

Hazel Howell, Ruth Ashley, and Clara Morris are "My Lady Friends" in Carter De Haven's new film play of that name.

CONFERS WITH CURWOOD

Dorothy Farnum, scenario writer for Whitman Bennett, is in conference with James Oliver Curwood regarding a series of Curwood pictures which she is adapting, for Pine Tree Films, Inc., of Portland, Me. Miss Farnum has been loaned for the occasion by Whitman Bennett with whom she is under contract.

SUPPORTS HAMMERSTEIN

Niles Welch is playing opposite Elaine Hammerstein in her newest picture, "Re- morseless Love," which is nearing completion at the Selznick studios, Fort Lee, N. J.

ON SCREEN AGAIN

John T. Prince, formerly casting director at the Hollywood studios, is playing one of the fathers in George D. Baker's "Little Eva Ascends," starring Garegh Hughes at Metro.

SUPPORTS MAYO

Claire Windsor has been engaged by Universal to support Frank Mayo in the star's forthcoming comedy, "Dr. Jim," a story by Stuart Patten.

ENLARGES DEPARTMENT

Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, has added three new writers to his staff: J. Grubb Alexander, lately of Robertson-Cole; Edward T. Lowe, Jr., formerly of Metro; and Rita Kisin.

FRANCIS IN EAST

Alec B. Francis is to appear in productions in the east. His most recent pictures are "The Great Moment" and "The Virginia Courthouse," made by Famous Players-Lasky.

FOREIGN PLAYER IN HISTORICAL FILM

Mlle. Narcita, formerly premier luminary of the Patria Film Company of Madrid, and of the Royal Cinema Corporation, Ltd. of Montreal, Canada, has come to this country from Spain to study screen conditions in America. She represents a group of French and Spanish capitalists, including Louis Nalpas, French director. Mlle. Narcita will interpret the stellar role presently in an historical production, part of which will be made in France and part in this country.

Her previous vehicles are "A Night of Temptation," by Victoria cross; "Too Late," "The Crystal Cup" and "The Peacock."

ADDED TO STAFF

Mary Murillo has joined the scenario and continuity department of R-C Pictures Corporation and will work on original stories and continuity at the New York head quarters of that organization.

Miss Murillo’s previous connections have been with Sydney Franklin Productions and the Fox Film Corporation.

FITZGERALD MAKES CHANGE

Irving Thalberg has signed Dallas M. Fitzgerald, formerly of Metro, to produce Universal photodramas. His first story will be "The Gutterman," a comedy-drama by Percival Wilde, starring Gladys Walton.

WITH ROGERS

"Big Boy" Williams, being featured by Charles R. Seeling Productions, Inc., is spending his between-picture vacation at the Brunton studio assisting Will Rogers in a two-reeler.

ADDED TO CAST

Al Christie has added Earl Rodney, Eugene Ford, and Ward Caulfield to the cast of his forthcoming special, as yet unitled.

IN SANTSCHI PICTURE

Ruth Stonehouse and Bessie Love will support Tom Santisci in his current production entitled, "The Spirit of the Lake," written and directed by Bob Bradbury.

KATHERINE HILLIKER ON GOLDWYN STAFF

Katherine Hilliker, title writer, arrived at the Goldwyn studio recently to title "The Ship," and "Theodora," the two Italian photodramas which Samuel Goldwyn brought back from Italy. She will be at the studio about six weeks.

JOSEF SWICKARD SIGNS CONTRACT

Josef Swickard will be seen in an important part in upcoming Christie's Picture in "The Golden Gift," Miss Lake's first picture under Maxwell Karger's direction.

JOHN BOWERS IN LEAD

John Bowers will characterize the leading male role in "The Golden Gift," in which Alice Lake is starred.

Dorothy Devore will have the leading role in Al Christie's next comedy, now under production at the Christie studios.
AGAIN THE CRUCIFIXION

There is something the matter with the world when men who base all their acts upon religious principles can originate movements which culminate in the obstruction of the free will which is good.

Writers for the rather new industry of motion picture manufacture, have in their hands the lash which could sting the whole world into an uprising for something better; which would right wrongs and put civilization upon a higher plane.

Yet Dr. Crafts and his brotherhood are, in their blind zeal, not only tying the hands of the writer who would preach, but at the same time are putting a weapon in the hands of the weak man, which is reacting against things religious.

Dr. Crafts and all his kind are for censorship.

In the state of Pennsylvania—which is a part of these free United States—censorship, among other things of similar wisdom, has declined to allow the motion picture to intimate even that there is such a thing as motherhood.

It is as pure and sweet and a holy uplifting of the hands!

Now many other censors, encouraged by the "brotherhood" movement are rolling their eyes to heaven in imitation, when this defenseless little one is mentioned upon the screen, and then the axe swings downward, and the theme which should be preached from every pulpit, from every screen, and discussed in every home, if the world is to stand for right and justice.

Shall it only be told in the pulpit, and be barred from the film?

What then of this newborn babe?

It comes into the world as pure as its Maker, it seems.

It is born through no volition of its own.

But, bending above it we see the form of an imperfect adult, one who must likely has broken many laws, and who surely has broken the laws of God (for none are perfect); and, as this tinted one bends down, his stained hand is stretched forth to stamp upon that tiny soul the verdict—

Criminal!

Who?

Because this particular infant, who was smiled into the world by a loving Christ, has been born outside of wedlock.

Miserable cards, which make criminals of innocent persons!

Censorship!

Heaven save the mark, and bring the indomitable writer to the rescue, whether or no.

MISERABLE CARDS

We all know the woman who hustles into her boudoir early in the morning, to start on her daily rounds and visit the sick.

Isn't she the cheering individual, though?

She never fails to mention that "lots of people are dying around here lately—clear me, I don't know what we're all coming to!"

After introducing more congested gloom into worrying households than there is thrift in dry America, she returns to her domicile with a heavenly glow in her system, declaring that she hasn't enjoyed a day so much since she saw all those dead and starving people in the foreign picture weekly.

I am a humane, if not handsome man, but I shudder to think of what I would do if I ever caught one of these individuals at the edge of a smoky volcano.

There is a place for sympathy and tears in the motion picture, but I believe that any person who enjoys human agony more than a good laugh should be sent to the specialist. There is a crack in the concrete somewhere.

Therefore, being such a peculiar person, I may be pardoned for advancing the astonishing and startling theory that pleasant pictures are slightly preferable to those which sell one in all, while the management invites you to send in your friends for the same treatment.

Being thus gratuitously constructed, I also have arrived at the conclusion that execution is far preferable to life imprisonment, especially as they now are running pictures in penitentiaries, and are liable to force upon the merry inmates those film tales whose role mission seems to be that of killing the dignity, by starting the meat axe at the less vital end.

The main contention is that the picture, carrying a high percentage of true entertainment value, is the feature which the public wants. The cry for theme, and yet more theme, once was the watchword of many studios. There is nothing wrong with that.

But is it proven up that the gladsome, frisking picture, filled with humans who do things in a human way, is able to frolic away with the goods without resorting to much of a theme or plot.

This may sound like treason, but the vote has been counted upon more than one occasion lately, and "entertainment value" has won. Something more for the writer to ponder.

COLETTE FORBES

Now playing an important part with Earle Williams.

IF ANYONE CARES TO KNOW

A little more fraternalism, please.

Work up a little admiration for the other fellow's stories. Jealousy is cheap stuff.

Don't advertise Angel Food in your title, and then hand the poor editor coffee and sinkers.

If the editor turns down your good story but accepts a worse one, don't howl. That's one on him.

The houlier-than-thou clan now claims to be more intellectual than thou. Saving a resultant world from the sin of pleasure is some job.

The committeeeman of a local congregation recently declared he would have all pictures preach sermons. Would the church support picture theaters in such an event? Experiments in the past have proven not.

The independent market seems to think it needs stories. Some of the big studios are of the same mind. Neither seems to know exactly the character of the story desired, but would like to be shown. A meeting of writers and buyers might clear the atmosphere, in a general way, but would Governor Stephens be willing to declare marital law if something slipped?

The reluctance of successful fiction writers to accept the edict having to do with being born again, is a natural thing.

"The public accepts our stories in the book, why not on the screen?" is its argument. The public also enjoys baseball, but doesn't want to see it played by tennis cracks. The necessity for training for the somewhat peculiar photoplay art, hangs as heavily upon the fictionalist as upon the imaginative but untaught aspirant.

LIFE

(As a man thinketh, so shall he write.)

Did the little dog run away?

Yes, I suppose he did, perhaps with a tin can tied to his tail by a very, very naughty little boy.

The little dog cut quite a ridiculous figure, galloping wildly down the alley, with the tin can humming along behind.

Some of you howled.

To you it was comedy.

But did you laugh at the other side of the picture? The little dog that had to love the little dog, the little, heart-broken girl, with tears upon her cheek and poignant anguish in her tiny soul?

No, you did not laugh, for—

That was tragedy!

And everyone who looked upon that scene, from a queen upon her highly expensive throne, to the stub-nosed kid munching peanuts in the gallery of time, yearned for that little dog to come back to the little girl, and romp on her lap and miss her pretty dress, and insert a moist tongue in her ear, while the little angel hugged the prodigal, and kissed him, with a smile upon her dear, tear-stained face and heaven in her soul.

That is life!

We too, like the little girl, lived in the sunshine while we had our little dog. We never saw how ugly it really looked. We never noticed that one eye didn't match the other, and that the third eye was always where the canine family when this capers Kayoedle was born.

He was our little dog, and we loved him.

The other name for our little dog was—Joy.

When joy rod down the alley because of some naughty thing that had happened, the tin can of misery to its tail, tragedy entered into our lives.

But, when the glad day came, bringing—

FILM CENSORS TO CONFER

A conference will take place next month at Universal City, when representative film censors from all parts of the United States and Canada will meet with film producers, directors and executives in an attempt to solve the censorship problems of the moving picture industry. The various delegates from the State and municipal censor boards will be the guests of the Universal Company during the entire trip.

"Foolish Wives," a Von Stroheim picture, is in the process of cutting and editing, and the visiting censors will be given the opportunity of viewing the integral parts of the picture and passing upon it scene by scene. It is expected that in the general censoring of this picture, the various representatives will tend to arrive at a common basis for censorship.

Representatives from the censor boards of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and Kansas, and of the cities of Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City, Mo., Toronto, Vancouver, and Montreal, as well as the National Board of Review, will be present. It is expected that New York State will be represented by the newly authorized Commission of Three.

PRESIDENT SEES "GYPSY BLOOD"

"Gypsy Blood," First National attraction, was seen by President and Mrs. Harding at a recent private showing of the film in the home of United States Senator Philander C. Knox at Valley Forge.

SECOND RAWLISON STORY

"The Substitute Millionaire" will be the second starring vehicle for Herbert Rawlinson, following "The Black Bag," which will go into production at Universal City upon the completion of "Conflict," Priscilla Dean's current picture, in which Mr. Rawlinson plays opposite the star.

SCOTTY MACNICOLL

Who has expended his efforts in the advertising department of this publication for many months. Scotty is now taking a much needed vacation.

CLUB WOMAN AGAINST CENSORSHIP

A movement intended to attract the active interest of the club women of America has been launched in Detroit by prominent club leaders of that city under the name of "The League for the Silent Drama." The league's aims, as announced, are for a national body of women to extend encouragement to the producers of worthwhile plays and discourage destructive censorship.

The organization was formed at a joint meeting of the members of the Detroit Twenty-First Century, Review, Woman's City and Theater Arts clubs and the Cercle Dramatique.

Ethel Harmon has just finished playing an important part with the Campbell Comedies.
Production Notes

NO NEW CONTRACTS

Samuel Goldwyn issued a statement that there will be no new directors', players', etc., contracts at the Goldwyn studios. J. G. Hawkes' resignation has been accepted.

NEW WESTERNs

Work has started on the first of a series of five-reel Western comedy-dramas for McKenzie Productions at the Balshofer studios. Olin Francis is playing the lead in "Freshwater Jack," from the pen of Eva Heazlit. Estelle Harrison is the feminine lead.

ALADDIN COMEDIES

"His Valet," a one-reel comedy, is announced as the first of the series of Aladdin Comedies in which Pearl Shepard, Reekcraft's latest addition, will be starred. Miss Shepard will play opposite Billy Gilbert, who has been retained as leading comedian for the new series.

Dick Smith will direct the new Aladdin vehicles.

HIRSH BACK

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corp., who has just returned from Europe with a feature picture, announces that the Aywon Film Corp. will begin the immediate production of four-five reel jungle features.

TURPIN IN PERSONAL APPEARANCES

Ben Turpin is in Chicago, where he will start his personal appearances throughout the middle west. He will appear first at the Strand Theatre in Chicago.

MIRANDA TITLING

Thomas N. Miranda has finished titling "Hicksville to Broadway," starring Eileen Percy, and "Play Square," starring Johnnie Walker, and is at present titling Shirley Mason's current production, "Queenie," from the story by Wilbur Panley.

ROACH COMEDIES

Craig Hutchinson, comedy director, has been engaged by Irving Thalberg, general manager of Universal City, to direct a series of comedies, featuring Bert Roach, former Sennett comedian, who recently appeared in support of Gladys Walton in "The Rowdy.

JIMMIE ADAMS

AT LASKY's

Sam Wood is making progress with "Don't Tell Everything," in which Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter have the featured roles. Thompson Buchanon is supervising the production.

Howard Higgin, recently promoted to directorship by Josie L. Lasky, is scheduled to begin work the middle of August on "Rent Free," with Wallace Reid as the star. Supervisor-in-Chief Frank E. Woods will personally supervise the picture.

JONES FEATURE PRODUCTION

Grover Jones has finished his first feature production, "The Scar," with Ora Carew as the star. Besides Miss Carew the cast includes Jack Richardson, Charles Mason, Allan Garcia, Dwight Crittenden, Josie Melville, Camille Astor, Murray Miller and Roy McMann.

JACK PICKFORD IN SCREEN VERSION OF STAGE SUCCESS

Jack Pickford, on the completion of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which he is co-directing with Alfred Green, will enact the leading role in the screen version of "The Tailor-Made Man," soon to go into production.

The T. R. Film Company will start production shortly, featuring Teddy Repay, the child actor, in educational stories.

NEW COMEDIES READY

New Vanity and Gayety single-reel comedies for release during the months of August and September have been completed by the Christie Film Company.

The Vanity Comedies include: "Chicken-Hearted," with Earl Rodney and Dorothy Orth; "Eat and Be Happy," with Irene Dalton and Francis Peemy; and "Paying Patients," with Dorothy Devore and Al Lloyd.

The Gayety comedies are: "Wild and Willie," with Henry Murdock and Josephine Hill; "Oh Brother!" with Vera Steadman and Earl Rodney; and "Say Uncle," with Miss Steadman and the Jay Belasco.

The pictures were directed by Scott Sidney and Frederick Sullivan.

CAMERAMEN ASSIGNED METRO PICTURES

Cameramen for forthcoming Metro pictures have been signed as follows: John Arnold will photograph Viola Dana in "The Fourteenth Lover;" Arthur Martineilli will do the camera work for Bert Lytell's new picture "Lady Finger;"); Rudolph Borquist will photograph "Little Eva Ascends;" Roy Klaftki will serve behind the camera for "The Golden Gift." Alice Lake's next star vehicle, while John P. Seitz will photograph "Turn to the Right," Rex Ingram's new Metro production.

FINISHED

Thomas H. Ince's latest special feature for Associated Producers release, temporarily titled "Lucky Damage," which has been in production for the past nine weeks, is completed. Milton Sills, Florence Vidor and Tully Marshall head the all-star cast.

back the muddled and bedraggled little one, we found that, despite its experience, it was whole, inside.

We joy returned, the sun shone once more, and we wiped away our "foolish" tears.

We were content.

But, we were the better for having lost the cuddling one, for when it returned it brought to us a sweetness we didn't know was there before.

For we had loved, lost and suffered.

And, without these three things to stir the placid pool, one does not live.

THE WEEK'S BEST

A trusting soul, thirsting for knowledge, has brought upon the subject of true-to-life stuff as photoplay material. In a letter of inquiry the seeker propounds as follows:

"Would it be all right for me to use the experiences of my mother and father in a story? All I have to do is change the names and, presto! I have all the trouble I would need for a feature.

Guilty,” J. Parker Read’s latest Associated Producers release, we view murder-gasp number four, for this week. That means that for the fourth time we have seen an innocent individual accused of manslaughter, and believe us, their various weird and wonderful trials have contained about everything in the world but the happenings in an honest-to-goodness court room. It is scarcely fair to blame all that has bored us, however, upon a little of it, so we proceed. Outside of the somewhat hackneyed plot of the picture in hand, starting off with the neglected wife and ending with “the other woman killed him” (from behind the proverbial curtain) which Bradley King has employed for her story, the production isn’t half bad. Its sets are exquisite and the lighting and photography of them are both exceptional, while the strong cast is also handled beautifully by the Jack Nelson direction. These elements, as it would seem, go a long way towards making “I Am Guilty” a pardonable offense.

Louise Glau is starred in the role of Connie MacNair, the ex-chorus girl wife of a wealthy lawyer. During her husband’s long absence on business trips she reverts to her old acquaintances for companionship and meets fate in the form of an insistent suitor. There is no doubt but that in appearance Miss Glau fails to fit into the demure little mother whom she plays. That she gets it over at all is due alone to her ability.

Opposite the star, Robert MacNair, the negligent but upright husband, is interpreted by Mahlon Hamilton, who is always good in the straight, strong masculine things.

George Cooper gives what is to us the most interesting and well completed performance in the cast. He does Dillon, a man who nearly pays the penalty of murder for his thievery. He is the one very appealing note in the drama. The old reprobate, Teddy Garrick, whose evil desire kills him, could be made by no one quite as loathsome as he is by Joseph Kilgour, whose work is always vividly wicked and whose technique is just as admirable.

Ruth Stonehouse, as Dillon’s little cockney sweetheart, is a good touch, while the jealous mistress of Garrick is done quite well by Claire DuBrey.

Little Mickey Moore, as the MacNair baby, and May Hopkins in a minor chorus girl part, complete the list of players.

“I Am Guilty” cannot have a very general appeal, due to its unequal “hokum” strenuousness; so it really doesn’t justify the money which is apparent in its sets and cast.

KELSEY WITH VEILLER

Fred Kelsey has been selected by Bayard Veiller to play an important part in “Lady Fingers,” in which Bert Lytell is playing the title role.

RETURNING

Paul Powell and Mary O’Conner, working on the Famous Players-Lasky lot in London, will return to this country on the completion of their current production which is now in the process of cutting.

Director Fred Caldwell is engaged in preparing the continuity for his forthcoming production, which will be titled “The Eyes That Know.”

General Manager Charles Eyton announces the construction of an additional building to house the added directors and members of the scenario staff at the Lasky Studio.

Tomorrow's Entertainers

Every now and again we find ourselves party to a discussion which has been given rise to by the question, "What will be the source of supply for our next generation of entertainers?" and "Who will fill the emptying screen and stage ranks of tomorrow?" We have always been vitally interested in this problem, which we believe to be worthy of the gravest consideration, even though it appears to be solving itself, as such things have a way of doing.

First of all, we must assume that our future dramatists and comedians will be the products of a far more stringent training school than which prepared their histrionic forefathers for public careers. This is because the theatre-going public has done some progressing on its own through the years, as it will, in all probability, continue to do. All right! Where is this instruction to be received and by whom? The answer is simple. Los Angeles is the place and hundreds of its talented little folk the subjects.

For several weeks past Sid Grauman has been entertaining his audiences with twenty-minute kiddie revues, containing fifteen or eighteen diminutive singers and dancers, costumed after the regulation musical comedy plan. These literal "jazz babies" are without exception unusual characterizers as well as finished showmen, and this at from four to twelve years of age.

The fact that clever children form a big drawing card with their almost universal appeal is naturally sufficient reason for Mr. Grauman and a half dozen other local theatre directors to exploit so many of them; but the real importance which we must attach to their thus recognized ability is the fact that here is the material for which we are searching already in an advanced stage of theatrical education. Nor is it limited in numbers or scope. This is, of course, largely due to the presence in this city of the world's biggest picture colony, which has attracted hundreds of mothers with their many more hopefuls even as honey invites the proverbial bees. An occasional unusual one among these importations combined with the profession's own offspring makes up an almost unbelievable assemblage of primary talent. Therefore, just consider our picture babies, and still your worries for the theatre's future. Among them we have a list of at least twenty-five performers who excel, headed by Jackie Coogan, Wesley Barry, "Ichie" Headrick, Pat and Mickey Moore, Peaches Jackson, Jean O'Rourke, Frankie Lee, and Ben Alexander. It is significant to note that most of these youngsters are equally as well suited to the stage as to the screen. (We have in mind several very mature stars of which this can hardly be said with any element of truth.)

Moreover, every month reveals at least one new prospect; while the juvenile art which appears in our local prologues alone will easily fill a 1935 vaudeville circuit.

No, we needn't bother much about Progress—any of us. Precedent has proven it capable to care for itself always. In this instance it is already laying an admirable foundation for the greater entertainment which is to lighten our declining years.

Salaries for Service

The following editorial comment in The Moving Picture World by Arthur Jamieson presents a sane though not very strenuous angle of the salary situation. It interested us; maybe it will you:

"The fifth industry in the United States has no right to accept without compensation the services of leaders who sacrifice their time, money and effort in construction work from which all the industry benefits. We as an industry pay salaries to stars and salaries to directors that make the wages of a President puny by comparison. In many cases these salaries are swollen and out of proportion, but it must be remembered that competition has brought the high pay conditions into being.

"In times of prosperity these big sums have meant little in the general result, and they will continue to mean little when normal conditions are restored. They should, of course, be revised so that the box office value is the final gauge by which salaries are determined.

"In the meantime, despite temporary depression, there is a need for a fair judgment of salaries for men who are laboring incessantly and successfully for the common good of the business. As an industry we are not so low in finances that we need to accept these services as a charity contributed by individuals.

"We are looking at the situation from the industry's point of view. Is our appreciation to be expressed solely with hand-clapping, complimentary dinners and an occasional loving cup?"

"Can we feel like men when we permit service to go unrewarded save by conversation?"

"No other great business in the United States is on such a basis, and ours would not be were it not for the politics that continually affect the policies of our industry."

"Leaders are practically forced to describe their efforts with a humility that is almost ridiculous. They speak of their "small share" in the furthering of great movements. They must tell of their "humble work" in behalf of all. This sort of address, this minimizing of personal service is of course distinctly the political type of speech. We find no fault with those who use it, but it should not be necessary.

"We believe that the three big branches of our business should each maintain an organization with offices and staff fully financed and regularly paid. Then the business would have a right to their time and brains and effort. Any other course is belittling to us as a business."
The Texas Guinan Western Series

The Texas Guinan Productions has been organized to produce a series of twelve two-reel Western dramas starring Texas Guinan. These attractions will be released by way of the independent or state-right market, commencing September 15th.

In addition to these pictures Miss Guinan will also produce during the year two five or six-reel Western specials.

The eastern executive offices of The Guinan Productions are located in New York City, but production activities will be on the west coast.

The first six stories have been acquired and will be photographed at the exact location named by the author of the stories.

It is also planned that for a period of eight weeks after the completion of the first series of twelve releases, Miss Guinan will make a personal tour throughout the United States, appearing in principal motion picture and vaudeville houses showing her productions.

Camera!

Editorial work will begin presently on "Conflict," the Priscilla Dean production just completed. Director Stuart Paton will work in collaboration with Frank Lawrence, film editor-in-chief, in assembling the footage for the screen.

After locationing on the Mojave desert, Harry Carey has arrived at the studio to conclude "The Fox," his newest production. The star wrote the story himself and it is being filmed under the direction of Robert Thooney from Lucien Hubbard's continuity.

Frankie Kiolet has begun work at Universal City as a reward for having won the "Seattle Star" Universal Brains, beauty and popularity contest.

Robertson-Cole Notes

Comes the announcement of resumption of activities at the West Coast studios of the R-C Pictures Corporation. The new schedule calls for a series of productions with Pauline Frederick, Seside Rayaakawa and Doris May; and a star series to be directed by L. J. Ganssier and Christy Cabanne. A number of other features will be announced later.

Doris May has already started work on "The Foolish Age," the first of a series of comedy-dramas in which she is to be starred. They will be known as Hunt Strawberg productions.

Louis J. Ganssier and a staff of assistants are at Lake Tahoe preparing to film "Man'ssello Jo," an adaptation by Winifred Dunn, from the novel of the same name by Harriet T. Comstock.

Pauline Frederick is expected to begin work on "The Lure of Jade," an original story arranged for the screen by Marion Orth.

At Realart

Chester M. Franklin has arrived from New York, where he went recently to make a picture with Constance Bennett, Mr. Franklin is at present making preparations for "Spring Fever," a Bebe Daniels' starring vehicle, which he will handle.

Director Maurice Campbell is completing arrangements for the filming of "The Heart of Youth," by Sonia Levine, which will star Constence Binney.

Neilan to Make "Penrod"

Marshall Neilan will next produce Booth Tarkington's "Penrod," with Wesley Barry in the title role.

Neilan has already started work on the adaptation of the story, which work he will personally handle, and "shooting" is expected shortly. "Penrod" will be distributed by Associated First National Pictures following "Bits of Life," just finished.

New Five Reelers

The Border Feature Film Corporation has finished its fifth two-reel western, written by William R. Lichten. This company will start the first of August on a series of five-reel westerns, which Harry Moody will direct.

Stahl to Location at Mojave

Arrangements are made for the John M. Stahl company to leave for the Mojave desert shortly to film location scenes for "The Song of Life," a future First National attraction.

CURRENT REVIEWS

CAMERA! The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry

“CRAZY TO MARRY”

Grauman’s

Frank Condon’s “Crazy to Marry,” adapted by W. R. Burnett from Robert Ardrey’s novel for his newest Paramount offering. It is a surprisingly logical combination of the farce and slapstick which reaches the highest in its line of entertainment with a half dozen excellent gag lines, repetition action and other forced comedy situations. Its laughs always hit the audience forcibly and the thrust in the general plot never slackens. James Cruze “steps right on it,” showing some of the best farce direction of his career and the cast could not have been improved, while technically “Crazy to Marry” is up to Lasky’s best form.

Aruckle has a veritable gold mine in Dr. Hobart Hupp, the good-natured brain specialist, whose own mental movements are a bit too fast for controlling. It is rotund Hupp’s physical agility in itself is a seven-day wonder when his geography is considered. Taken altogether, “Fatty” has truly lively and entertaining, due largely to the exceptional situations with which he has to work.

Quite a little “speed” is shown by Lila Lee in the role of Annabelle Landis, Dr. Hupp’s beloved. Miss Lee, we observe enthusiastically, is learning how to act. She has also improved her screen personality, and the result of these two achievements is, in this instance at least, perfectly satisfactory.

A superior piece of work is done by Lara Anson, who plays Hupp’s tearfully unwilling bride, Estrella De Morgan. She has great comedy possibilities.

Two other clever trouper assist this picture to success. They are Lillian Leighton and Edwin Stevens, in the roles of Estrella’s dominating parents, who wish her on to Hupp that society may be at their disgruntled wealthy feet. The points of these performers are more carefully watched and executed than it is often one’s privilege to observe.

Dull Montana as Pansy, a “nutt” thief paroled in the Doctor’s care that he may be operated upon and reform, provides a hilarious note, while Sidney Bracy, Genevieve Clifton, Clarence Burton, Charles Ogil and Charles Wildish back up the more principal roles with capital support.

The individual to whom Aruckle’s stuff appeals in any degree will proclaim this the weighty star’s greatest.

“THE GIRL IN THE TAXI”

Kinema

Stanislaus Strange’s stage farce, “The Girl in the Taxi,” destined for Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven as their current long subject for First National release. All those who date upon the farce in its most ridiculous aspect will be more than delighted with this rapidly moving comedy, which just about reaches the standard of “Twin Beds,” the De Haven’s last effort, in entertainment value. Of course, this perilously near-untostaple type of thing hasn’t a universal appeal by any means, but that is far from necessary in a play of this class. It pleases its own element it gains its ends.

Considering the chaos of the situations throughout the play, the risques backward and forward, Lloyd Ingrams has kept the plot very lucid with his skilful direction, and the photography and general technique is brilliantly done, which in itself should form one of the picture’s most valuable notes.

Carter De Haven heads the list of players as Bertie Stewart, a very young man with “heart” trouble. Bertie is both realistic and riotously funny in De Haven’s hands, which surprisingly versatile actor dispatches with the youngsters as easily as if he were yet in the “first long pants” stage himself. He reveals unexpected angles with Bertie, who is really adorable in his unsophisticated deviishness. We developed a great affection for him by the second reel.

Mrs. Carter De Haven, although filling the play’s title role, is prominent only in the plot’s complications, but she is chic and dainty as the petite Mrs. Mignon Smith, a perfume manufacturer’s somewhat indiscreet wife.

As Major Frederick Smith, the young woman’s irate husband, who is “most feroce in uniform,” King Barger shows us some highly amusing comedy exaggeration, which was well received by Saturday’s matinee audience.

Very clever work is offered by Tom McGuire, Margaret Campbell and Lincoln Plumer, who play papa and mama Stewart and Cousin Percy, a triangle which operates at cross purposes to general hilarity, while Otis Harlan as Alexis, a different waiter, has his own ideas of comedy, the execution of which is not excelled in the picture.

Minor roles are filled by Grace Canard, Freya Sterling and John Gough.

“KEEPING UP WITH LIZZIE”

Clune’s Broadway

Al and Ray Rocklett present their second independent production locally at this time. It is in their production of Irving Bacheller’s “Keeping Up With Lizzie,” a fairly well-handled picture which, however, is richer in atmosphere than in action, and considerably slower in progress than its title would lead one to expect. The camera work on this production varies decidedly and is really miserable in places, but an exceptional cast offsets in large part these deficiencies.

It is headed by Emil Bennett, who does Lizzie herself, a country miss whose education sets a town agog and bankrupts her father. Miss Bennett handles the role competently and looks younger in it than she did in her last. Once starring vehicles. She has a windfulness in her personality that is invaluable in this type of thing.

The juvenile, Don Pettigrew, Lizzie’s faithful lover, is done by Edward Hearn, who nearly always takes complete advantage of the situations which he is given, while the prepossessing and engaging Roland, is managed in Leo White’s good form.

Leo Ingrams as Harlan, as Sam Henshaw, in our estimation runs away bodily with his sequences and nearly takes the entire picture. His characterization of the village groceryman, which has acquired a beat to anything that we have seen recently for both subtle and straightforward comedy. It is truly excellent as the village philosopher is more than pleasing, while good work is done by Victory Bateman, Harry Todd and Lila Leslie, who complete the cast.

Lloyd Ingrams directed “Keeping Up With Lizzie,” which should prove very gratifying from the box office viewpoint, everything considered.

“A WISE FOOL”

California

We have said so much about the adaptation, particularly the celluloid novel, that we have exhausted enough. A mere repetition rarely proves entertaining we will merely mention that “A Wise Fool” is such a one, or, rather, Sir Gilbert Parker’s “The Money Master,” scenarized in this instance by its creator and produced by George Mel- ford. To the end it remains the narrative which any interesting incident, but far too little suspense to result in a wholly satisfactory photodrama. An early subtitle tells us that the story is based upon a man’s changing philosophy, but the assertion fails to find sufficient proof in the action to bring conviction. However, the picture is marked by excellent performance of some of the best locations (presumably in Quebec) that we have seen in many moons.

The direction, although a bit ponderous in spots, progresses more easily than it always the case in Melford’s productions. Particularly enough this director’s atmosphere always hangs heavily about his characters.

The photography and technical effects are pleasing with the exception of several mis- placements and shining reflections. When will the ordinary electricians do more diffusing?

The central figure in “The Wise Fool” is Jean Jacques Barbille, a personage of note in St. Savior’s Parish, Quebec, who is in reality a simple soul enjoying a placid and unwavering trust in his own importance and the world’s good faith toward him. The story is based upon the troubles which descend upon the unwitting head of this role, which is least much of appeal by James Kirk- wood, whose performance was more touching to us by far than any other in which we have seen him. It is an achievement to gain sympathy for a not-entirely-admirable character. Kirkwood here proves himself an artist at pathos with his interpretation of Jean Jacques’ disillusionment and following anguish.

A no less artistically rendered portrayal is done by Delores, Mrs. Barbille’s Spanish wife, which is done by Alice Hollister. Carmen’s discontent with and desertion of Jean Jacques and final realization of her own sin is quite beautiful, although the novel never succumbs to the photoplay in this character or in any other. Miss Hollister, however, makes up for her shortcomings in Carmen’s action with her unusual characteriza- tion of the petulant, resentful woman. It is truly excellent.

Ann Forrest and William Lloyd lend quite some interest to the story and complicate

WRITE IT!

I do not believe that writers should become panic-stricken because of threatening censorship. They should refuse to be stamped. Strong, virile stories should be told just as they have been told throughout the centuries, in Bible and history even.

We are hearing alarming reports of this censorship rule and that which militates against bandits, killings, thrills, marriage questions and high dramatic episodes. Many a one has advised:

“What shall we do? Everything seems to be under the ban.”

If this is true, then the picture industry is the victim of the greatest piece of intolerance that ever faced an oppressed nation. There is nothing left to do save to fight.

I do not mean that sex stuff, murder for murderer's sake and other crime should run rampant. That has been the trouble with the stage, fiction and life itself throughout the past.

But, in all such cases, the law for one has been sufficient to attend the other. Police regulation of entertainment has never had such dire effect upon legitimate enterprises. The authorities quietly grasped the sinful offender by the neck and removed it, and thereby preserved the proper use of the church or any business desired exposure and punishment.

But if the hypocrite, neither business nor church went under the swinging axe, however. Neither received general condemnation. On the contrary, with an object in view, arose to denounce the whole fabric as bad, because of the filthy one who had sneaked in under the tent.

The laws of the United States and its various municipalities, are considered ample for the protection of 100,000,000 people. Officers of the law are deemed sufficient to contend with murderers, highwaymen, revolting criminals of lowest type and the whole sordid mass of offenders of the nation.

But the self-appointed reformer has declared that motion pictures, which preach sermons, teach high ideals and only touch on bits of the gross, teeming life of a people, are in need of special policing because of their alleged “crimes.”

It is time for the revolution, and the writer must rally to it.

That kind of a challenge, flung into the face of justice itself, should cause the statute guarding the gates of the Atlantic waters to crumble with shame, while the picture hosts gather for battle.

Then let the virile story be written, and vow that all studios are not surrendering without striking a blow. Many manufacturers will stand behind you and purchase your wares. Only the few will see copies and send the special policeman to have his way.

JUST MILLING AROUND

Have you a little plot in your system?
Lots of people didn't know they had a thirst until Mr. Volstead came along and began removing temptation. Why, didn't you tug that screen idea around all these years unless you corkscrew it out with a lead pencil?
There is no denial which we do not understand. They are: the aim of a woman, the rejections of an editor, and the inside of a censor's done.

The writer's complaint because of rejections is going to leave many a fat purse for the fellow who will not surrender to obstacles.

If, as you say, you are “just full of plots” but don't know how to write them, why fuss for the answer? Get a move on and chase the knowledge you thirst for.

If many more independent productions jump up, the photoplay writer will have to begin sitting up nights in order to meet the new demand. Most of them want plenty of comedy with the drama.

Don't write stories of the glacier country, of the pyramids or scenes which demand the Atlantic deed in action. Please remember that thinker and you will save lots of postage many times.

If you “know” you are writing good plots, but constantly have your manuscripts returned, why not employ a critic? He can help you if he is competent. Studio editors are not in the business of siding writers in the matter of proper form.

WHEN TO WRITE 'EM

There is a tendency of certain journals to explain how various fiction writers grasp time by the forelock and juggle around into a cramped position for the composition of another scream. Perhaps a vivid paragraph, filled with sparkle and originality, anent the joyous photoplaywright in action, will come as a godsend to the few million persons who are only awaiting this final piece of information before breaking the barriers themselves.

Such entrants should not be deceived by the actions of professional authors. For example, Sinclair Lewis writes whole novels on trains. Scenario writers do not pursue this course. While it is true that trains motivate and sometimes frolic from the track, producing thrills and other pleasing situations, the fare still is 3 cents a mile. As no one ever knew of a photoplaywright to cease photoplaywriting, and trains average 20 miles an hour, er—well, scenarioists do not write their screen plays upon trains.

The best time for some is midnight. If they do not wake up they write it the next day. Others can only write after a meal of tripe. When tripe is out of the market, the unfortunate writer is that way himself.

The writer's complaint because of rejections is going to leave many a fat purse for the fellow who will not surrender to obstacles.

If, as you say, you are “just full of plots” but don't know how to write them, why

CASH OR POSTAGE STAMPS?

If the student of photoplay writing could be privileged to glance through certain organs printed for the benefit of fiction writers, he would find many surprises and much encouragement therein.

Articles and letters from contributing writers speak of such things as sketches which bring $2 and $3; pictures which command from $8 to $15, and stories which bring the enormous returns of one cent a word, which would total $25 for a complex story of 2,500 words. If 2 cents a word is “unusual for the cheaper magazines,” last week, the gleanings of several of these publications reached the high spot to be a story published in one of the better magazines which (with great triumph) commanded $125.

Even the beginner in photoplay writing, who had any knowledge of studio prices would be offended if offered $125 for a successful feature photoplay. Little comedies written in brief synopsis form command from $50 to $100 when used for one reel productions.

While absurd prices for novels and fiction stories which must be adapted to screen needs are tumbling, good, healthy checks still are awaiting writers of photoplays, and the supply is not equal to the demand.

ARE YOU PLAYING?

“To write for a livelihood, even on a complete misappreciation of it, is a respectable impulse. To play at literature is altogether inexusable; the motive is vanity, the object notoriety, the end complete failure,” says Charles Eastman, in his first treatise to be published in "The Editor".

Listen further to him:

“Literature at is once the cause and effect of social progress. It deepens our natural sensibilities, and strengthens by ex-

RETURNS TO LOS ANGELES

Tula Belle, child actress, will arrive in Los Angeles presently after a season with the "Whirl of New York" at the Times Square Theatre, New York. Miss Tula Belle will be remembered as "Mytil" in Maurice Tourneur's production of "The Blue Bird," also with "The Little Players Company" of Hollywood. On her arrival Miss Tula will take up her screen work again before returning to New York later for a new stage production.

MEIGHAN PICTURE

"The Conquest of Canaan," Paramount's picturization of Booth Tarkington's novel of that name, comes to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of Monday, the 8th, with Thomas Meighan as the star and Doris Kenyon as leading woman.

EQUITY ANNOUNCEMENT

The Actors' Equity Association announces the engagement of Mr. Bennie Singer, formerly Metro casting director, as field representative for that organization. Mr. Harry Weil will continue in charge of the casting office.

Equity states that it is necessary to resume a five per cent commission charge, which was rescinded on June 1st. After August 8th, a five per cent commission will be charged on all engagements. This decision is the result of action by its Executive Committee, which was approved by the New York Council.

LINDER ON WORLD TOUR

After completing his present contract, Max Linder expects to make a world tour as a vacation. The whole trip will consume about a year. It is announced that Linder will make personal appearances in every large city on the way.

GOLDYN, HOST

Present at a dinner recently given by Samuel Goldwyn were Vice-President Leh; and his assistant, M. D. Gardner; H. E. Edington, business manager; Mr. Bern, Mr. Block and Mr. Hamilton; Charles Kenyon and Julian Josephson, of the editorial department; Lewis W. Physioc, head of the laboratory; Cedric Gibbons, art director; J. J. Cohn, production manager, and Joseph A. Jackson, manager of studio publicity.

Kathleen Ley will play the part of Sherin in Ferdinand Earle's motion picture of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

MYERS COMPILES FILM NOTES

Harry Myers has prepared a sketch-book of the film life in Hollywood, which will soon appear on the market. The copy is being published by an Eastern concern.

ANDREE TOURNEUR

Playing "Annette" in "The Conquering Power"

CHARITY PREVIEW

A national preview will be held in the interests of children's charities at the Ambassador Theater presently, when the Assistance League will have charge of the presentation for the first time in America of the Italian film, "Ricoletto," adapted from Victor Hugo's novel.

Leading producers and stars will witness the picture and attend a tea dance which is to follow.

SURPRISE PARTY

The technical staff of her supporting company tendered Wanda Hawley a surprise birthday luncheon recently. Included in the party were Director Heffron, Cinematographer Collins, Barton Hawley, Sylvia Ashton, Warner Baxter, Mae Busch, Dick Rosson, Tal Malarkey and Josie Von Deski.
FOR CO-OPERATION

The following film notables were the invited guests at the Brotherhood dinner of the Inmanuel Presbyterian Church, Monday evening, and spoke on "Shall We Have Censorship?": Reginald Barker, Bert Lytell, Thomas N. Miranda, June Mathis, Kathlyn Williams, Charles Eyton, and Wanda Hawley. Plans were effected for a larger meeting to be held in August, when definite action will be taken to extend the cooperation between church and film producers already begun.

CHRISTIE SCHEDULE

Christie releases will hereafter be made on a basis of two each month. This new series is Al Christie's third year in the two-reel field. During the first year twelve two-reel comedies were made, and the yearly schedule now includes twenty-four pictures.

HAYAKAWA PREPARING

Sessue Hayakawa and his wife, Tsuru Aoki, have recently returned from their Eastern trip, and Hayakawa is engaged in supervising the preparation of his next story, the name of which will be announced within a few days.

SANTSCHI'S SIXTH COMPLETED

Tom Santschi has recently completed filming "The Spirit of the Lake," the sixth picture of his new series under the Cyrus J. Williams banner for Pathé release. Bob Bradbury wrote and directed this picture.

FOREIGN RELEASES

Harry Owens, special representative for Thomas H. Ince and the Associated Producers, is in the Orient, making arrangements for future Associated Producers' showings.

A preview of "Lotus Blossom," a Leong Bun Jang production, just finished, was shown at Miller's recently.

Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton has recently completed the production of "The Vagabond," the second of his new series of two-reelers for Educational.

Clark Irvine's services have recently been secured by the Pacific Film Company to handle press books and publicity material at its Culver City studios.

Ramon Samaniegos, who interprets the juvenile role in Earle's production of "The Rubaiyat," also composed and directed the dances which the production contains.

Victor Potel is a member of the all-star cast of "Lavender and Old Lace," now playing at Tally's. Mr. Potel will be remembered by Shirley Slam of Snakeville, principal comedian for the old Essanay Film Company.

Production Notes

CONFERS WITH CURWOOD

Dorothy Farnum, scenario writer for Whitman Bennett, is in conference with James Oliver Curwood regarding a series of Curwood pictures, which she is adapting for Pine Tree Films, Inc., of Portland, Maine. Miss Farnum has been loaned for the occasion by Whitman Bennett, with whom she is under contract.

GOLDWYN COMEDY

Goldwyn has purchased the screen rights of "His Buck Against the Wall," a farce-comedy by Frederic Faust, better known under his pen-name of John Frederick, which will go into production at the Goldwyn studios in the near future.

RELEASED

"The Last Raid" is the title of episode fifteen of the Seitz serial, "The Sky Ranger," which Pathe will release August 7th. June Caprice is costarring in the chapter play with George B. Seitz.

NEW STORY

The Charles R. Seelng Productions, Inc., which has completed its second five-reel Western feature, is at present selecting the story for its next production.

Herbert Rawlinson, who is to be starred by Universal, has returned from Canadian locations with the Priscilla Dean company.

"Braco," the golden Dane, has finished with Geo. Baker in "Little Eva Ascends" and is at present with Alice Lake in "The Golden Gift."

Charles Moeak, Jr., has finished his engagement with Gareth Hughes in "Little Eva Ascends," in which he has been playing the leading child role.

Muriel MacCormac, child actress, may be seen at the Symphony in "Miracles of the Jungle." Miss Muriel has recently finished a picture with Century Comedies.

"The Great Moment," Gloria Swanson's first starring production, and Elinor Glyn's initial screen story, will be given its western premiere at Grauman's Rialto Sunday, Aug. 7th.

Little Walter Wilkinson has recently finished six weeks with Larry Semon in "The Bell Hop" and has left for Catalina Island to join the Rock Company in the filming of four pictures.

exercise our intellectual capacities. ***

It necessarily draws after it a larger crowd of servitors, filling noble minds with noble ambition.  It is natural that numbers who have once been thrilled with this delight should in turn aspire to the privilege of exciting it.  It has become a profession; to many a serious and elevating profession; to many more a mere trade, having miserable trade-aims and trade-tricks. to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

Please send me, without cost or obligation on my part. This questionnaire. I will answer the questions in it and return it to you for analysis. If I pass the test, I want to receive further information about your Course and Service to authors.

Music in the Cinema Theatre

There are two classes of cinema-goers: that which attends the motion picture theatre for the enjoyment of the drama and another which is attracted by the musical presentations that, due to the commendable shrewdness of the modern showman, may be found in all up-to-date picture houses. The exhibitor has wisely spent huge sums of money to maintain first class orchestras, install instruments and pay for the preparation of elaborate orchestrations to accompany his bookings which the public, dazzled by the film drama's rapid rise from the penny arcade to its present elevation, a plane which may be safely risked now and again by even the most soaring of highbrows, attends in greater numbers as a result. We all realize that the presence of good music in the theatre has done much to advance the popularity of the screen by appealing to its students and lovers.

But—today our foremost dramatists and musicians tell us that this very combination, as it is being handled, is proving detrimental to both arts. Their general argument seems to be this:

Although one art may be rendered more effective, oftentimes, by the assistance of another, the combination must not be obvious lest the position of the first be weakened and the second become meaningless in the jumble.

In the picture theatre the first consideration is, quite naturally, the drama, and anything that detracts from the attainment of the highest interest for that drama is bad art. With a large percentage of the average audience, incessant music with its film plays does just this. A familiar strain, in all probability having little or no bearing upon that which is before one on the silversheet will, particularly in a case where its subject knows music, often give rise to interference in the form of an associate train of thought which immediately proves ruinous to the individual's study of the play. On the other hand, there are many among us to whom indiscriminate music means comparatively little and who are therefore unimpressed by it in the theatre save that its persistence and oftentimes inapplicable ponderousness weighs upon senses that should be alert for the subject in hand.

Heretofore, in almost every instance, our music scores have injured some part of their photodramas, an unfortunate fact which must be blamed upon the ordinary conductor's lack of dramatic knowledge and the exhibitor's somewhat natural instinct to get his money's worth out of his orchestra by keeping it continually "at it."

There is not a doubt but that, were producers willing or in a position to expend the required time and money, that an original music score might be composed for each production and wisely applied where it is necessary, as for instance in the establishment and development of a character, or in the event that an effect might be assisted to vividness by it, the real note in this much discussed problem would be sounded. Handled appropriately in this way and more sparingly (there are dramatic actions which should never be set to music) it may be made invaluable to the film; as it is managed today, the best in each is mutilated.

Being an unprecedentedly progressive industry, we should not fail to remedy such a marked defect as the one here presented. Advance alone justifies the existence of anything.

F. R.

The Panic Artist

We reprint here from the Exhibitor's Herald a few remarks concerning a recent statement by one of our industry's officials. We all know the sort of fellow it refers to, and if his own panic crying will eliminate him, we are almost tempted to encourage it.

"A particularly appropriate statement was made last week by S. R. Kent, Famous Players distribution chief. Mr. Kent sees in the present situation an inevitable tendency toward the elimination of what he describes as the 'yellow streakers' and the 'quitters' of the business.

"The Kent statement is particularly appropriate because it focuses attention upon the certain failure to survive of that type of person who seizes upon the first indication of a slower pace in business to shout panic in the desperate hope that his individual failure will be attributed not to his own unfitness but to the general conditions.

"This type of person is the commercial counterpart to the one who shouts 'Fire' in a crowded theatre. In each instance it is a case of lost nerve.

"An unusual combination of unfortunate circumstances has resulted temporarily in a condition which is a test of the men and the companies of the industry. When the full course of this test has been run it will be found that the industry is rich of a lot of personal and corporate deadwood that under less drastic procedure might take many years to eliminate. And when this is done the way will be cleared for the realization of Mr. Kent's prophecy that 'there is no industry so fortunately situated to reap the benefits that will accrue through deflation and sane reorganization in the business world."

Film Capital Production Notes

BAKER SIGNS NEW CONTRACT

George D. Baker, who has just completed a series of three comedies, starring Gareth Hughes, has signed a contract under which he will make another series of pictures with the same star.

"Little Eva Ascends" is Mr. Baker's most recent production with Mr. Hughes. The other two pictures of the series were "Garments of Truth" and "The Hunch."

TO MAKE FIVE-REELERS

Ranger Bill Miller recently signed a contract with Chart, whereby he will make twelve five-reeel Northwest Mounted Police pictures, two of which have been completed.

Walter Bell is directing the star, and production on the third of the series will begin immediately.

"FANNY HERSELF" RETITLED

"No Woman Knows" is the title finally settled upon for the Universal-Jewel production directed by Tod Browning from Edna Ferber’s novel, "Fanny Herself," in which Mabel Juilenne Scott is featured.

CHRISTIE NOTES

"Saving Sister Susie" is the title of a new two-reeel comedy which has been started under the direction of Scott Sidney, featuring Dorothy Devore.

Bobby Vernon is being featured in a two-reeel comedy now filming, titled "Pure and Simple," which William Beaudine is directing.

Next Burns and Viora Daniel will appear together in the next at Christie comedy, soon to go into production.

MACDONALD PICTURES

"Stranger than Fiction," the Katherine MacDonald picture which has arrived for exhibition at an early date, is the forerunner of other MacDonald releases, which will soon come west, among them, "Her Social Value," "Man’s Game," and "Poschke."

SANTSCHI MAKING WALKER STORY

In the San Jacinto mountains, exterior scenes are being filmed of Robert Walker’s story, "Hard to Catch," Tom Santoschi’s fifteen-picture serial, under the Cyrus J. Williams banner for Pathe. Bob Bradford is directing.

HAYAKAWA PRODUCTIONS

Norman Dawn is directing Sesene Hayakawa in his forthcoming NC production, entitled "The Street of the Flying Dragon," which will be followed by "The Vermillion Pencil," the continuity for which is being written by Edwin Warren Guyol.

The First National picture, "What Women Love," with Annette Kellerman, has recently been released in Australia.

Warl Caulfield, Virginia Ware and Mary Wynn are cast in the present William Beaudine comedy in production at the Christie studios.

AT LASKY'S

Wallace Reid will presently begin work on "Rent Free," the story which Elmer Rice is scenarizing and which Howard Higgins will direct.

Jack Holt begins Monday on "The Call of the North," by Stewart Edward White. The original novel was called "Conjuror’s House," Joseph Henabery is the director and Rollin Sturgess is supervising editor of this picture. The cast has not as yet been announced.

August 23d is the date assigned for the beginning of Ethel Clayton’s new Paramount picture, "The Cradle," adapted by Olga Printzlau from Eugene Brulex’s play. Julia Crawford Ivers will supervise the picture.

 Shortly after the completion of "The Sheik," in which Agnes Ayres has been appearing with Rudolph Valentino, Miss Ayres will begin work on her first starring vehicle, the nature and title of which have not yet been announced.

Thome Meighan arrives this week from New York and is scheduled to begin work presently on Geo. M. Cohan’s success, "A Prince There Was," which Tom Forman will direct.

AT UNIVERSAL

"Foolish Wives" will be released in October. Erich von Stroheim is at present making the first screen cut and the picture will be ready for its preview on August 15th when censors will arrive from all over the country to view the production.

Eddie Polo has returned to Catalina, where location scenes were shot for "The Secret Four," his new serial, which Albert Russell is directing.

Art Acord, making "Winners of the West," is on location in the Chatsworth hills with the entire unit.

Frank Mayo will begin on "Dr. Jim," his forthcoming special attraction, September 1st.

Marie Prevost is completing her second comedy, in which she is being directed by King Baggot. The story is called "The Girl Who Knew All About Men." Harry Myers appears opposite the star.

AT REAL ART

Mary Miles Minter will arrive from her European trip sometime in August and will begin work on "Tillie," which is scheduled to begin August 22d. "Tillie" is from the story, "Tillie, the Mennonite Maid," by Frank Howe, Jr., based on the novel by Helen R. Martin. Alice Eyton wrote the scenario.

Constance Binney has started work on "The Heart of Youth," the story by Sonya Levine, scenarized by Percy Henth and Aubrey Stauffer.

Bebe Daniels is busy on "Spring Fever," by Katherine Pinkerton and Grace Drew, which Chester M. Franklin is directing.

AT VITAGRAPH

Larry Semon and his company are locationing at Lake Hume, where practically all of the next Semon comedy will be made.

Director David Smith, Pauline Starke, Howard Waife and other members of the "Flower of the North" cast, returned this week from Trucker, Calif.

FINISHES FIRST

Bert Roach has finished the one-reel comedy called "Hi," under the direction of Craig Hutchinson. The comedian and his director are now at work on another short reeler entitled, "Copped."
THE CONQUERING POWER

Mission

Roy Ingram comes back after his very successful "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" with another unusual photoplay. "The Conquering Power," as most of us know, is June Mathis' screen adaptation of Balzac's "Eugenie Grandet," a literary work containing a very valuable picture material which has been used to excellent advantage in the cinematic adaptation. Mathis has shown a perceptible understanding of avarice and his final destruction by the gold he worships; it contains pronounced possibilities for the utilization of many wierd effects, such as the dying miser's terrifying hallucinations. These artistically managed visitations are ghostly enough to hand the shiver to the "blasé-est" of mankind, but that it may be rescued from the classification—uncanny, the production's love theme is treated with a very human, wholesome sweetness.

Any inconsistencies in the French village life of "Eugenie Grandet's" time are quite cleverly excused by the editors in explanatory titles at the picture's offset, wherein it is stated that no attempt at absolute detail accuracy has been made in the telling of this story of ages; consequently there is nothing to detract from that score. Photography and lighting are causes for continual joy, and some almost startling effects are obtained with them.

Ingram has already proven his sense of the dramatic, but he re-proves it here with his superb direction of a delightfully "trouping" cast.

From the standpoint of vivid characterization the picture belongs to Ralph Lewis, who interprets Pere Grandet, a miser whose death is as fascinating as it is repelling. Moreover, it is a masterpiece in the hands of this actor, who has long been forging his way to the highest pinnacle in dramatic achievement. Lewis' interpretation makes Pere live for us today as he unquestionably once lived in Balzac's sensitive mind. To us and to the audience he is both ardent and pitifully childlike in his passion for his beloved playing—gold. Indeed, there is almost a tear where he gossips over the crucifix of glittering pieces, at the picture's offset, that this effort strikes the really big note in the play. Throughout, Lewis' tempo is consistent in this performance, which ranks among his best in our approach.

Alice Terry's most convincing work is also seen here as Eugenie Grandet, Pere's stepdaughter, whose unselfishness finds her love and whose patience restores it after the intervention of years and misunderstanding. Infinite care in the direction of this part is continually perceptible without, we may say, being obvious. In any event Eugenie more than gets the sympathy she goes after and her romance is exceptionally beautiful in its tenderness.

Charles Grandet, the gallant young Parisian who captures Eugenie's heart, is rendered quite picturesque by Rudolph Valentino. His characterizations are coming so much into prominence.

A well chosen type to play Charles' fated father is Eric Mayne, and his performance stands as a significant one, as Eugene's mother, who is but another possession of her dominant husband, Pere.

Edward Cedric, in the opposite in the role of the notary, Cruchot, who would marry his son to Eugenie, the heiress, while non-descript young man himself is made the ridiculous village fool by George Atkinson.

Some carefully placed comedy, bordering the slap-stick, is handled by Mary Hearns, who plays Nanon, the Grandet servant.

Willard Lee Hall and Mark Fenton each has a few good scenes as the Abbe and M. des Grassins; while Bridgeatta Clark and Ward Wing complete the list of players as des Grassins' wife and son, safe for C. E. Collins, whose make-up for the ghost of gold is more than hideous.

Whether or not "The Conquering Power" will prove a sensation is a matter for speculation, but it is a well rounded drama, more than happily comparable with those which are being foisted upon the public this summer. Of it Ingram has made no spectacle—he intended none. It is enough to do what one sets out to do.

SCRAP IRON

Kinema

Hundreds of fans and no mean representation of the profession turned out to see Charles Ray's "Scrap Iron," which re-opened the Kinema theatre this week, that their curiosities might be satisfied regarding this actor's directorial ability, for in this picture we have Ray's first personally-directed production. Oftentimes we find a star's picture deteriorating when he undertakes the megaphone holder's job in addition to his own. In this particular instance we have a knockout story with several new twists correctly put over to gain the desired effect, so that we have only the best to report. One thing is certain, this picture will bring Ray a new host of admirers in the country's mothers, for "Scrap Iron" concerns a boy whose mother in his only sweetheart. Of course this story of Chas E. Van Loan, from the Saturday Evening Post, includes the ineluctable girl, one who pursues the lad with her disloyalty, only to return rapidly to his side when success is his, but oh!—what a relief it is to see her in the last sequence literally give the little roughneck the "gate." We were intensely afraid he'd open his arms and stand there dumbly, as they have a habit of doing. Aside from this decided "kick" there are several more, and far greater suspense than Ray's productions have been able to boast lately. Technically "Scrap Iron" is very good.

The star is seen this time in a somewhat different role. He does John Steel, who is Johnny Scrap Iron, because he respects a mother's wishes sufficiently to refrain from a boxing career. All of that sensitive stuff is that so individually Ray is brought into early in this youngster, who is endeared to the audience by the homely details which surround him. A rare aspect is created by the actors for the boy and much heart interest is a result. The Ray fans will get much of joy from Johnny Scrap Iron.

The girl next door is cleverly characterized by Vera Steadman, who makes her a very human, very wicked little minx. She has the sympathy, however, which makes her final abrupt exit for great satisfaction rather than otherwise. Lydia Knott is lovely as John's beloved miss who is also grand sister (particularly sister) readers of fiction who will welcome to the great benefit of this box office the release of Elinor Glynn's initial photoplay attempt, "The Great Moment." They always get a kick out of Elinor and to make the prospect of this en- joyable experience even better they know that this production also serves as Gloria Swanson's first star picture. It is to be readily admitted that the psychology of this combination is worthy of considerable admiration, due to the fact that both of the artists in question appeal largely to the same class of fans, which forms, by the way, no mean piece of the general populace.

That "The Great Moment" has for the most part an annoyingly aged and exceeding overplot which holds its elaborate sets and superior cast together, will probably detract not one whit from the picture's popularity. The majority of its audiences are concerned, for hasn't it all of the madly impassioned moments that its authors' name guarantees, not to mention the bizarre costumes and barbaric head-dresses that they affect for Miss Swanson out at Lasky's? These flesh-pots will be accepted avidly by many even at this stage of advanced fan education, but the profession is going to emit one resounding laugh over it all. Speaking of garments, in this instance it is agreed that there is a great value attached to the sensational in any fiction, but it must not out-distance reason, as happens with the major- ity of its audiences, concerned for hasn't it all of the madly impassioned moments that its authors' name guarantees, not to mention the bizarre costumes and barbaric head-dresses that they affect for Miss Swanson out at Lasky's? These flesh-pots are seen here.

The star fills quite typically the role of Nadine Pelham, a daughter of England's nobility, who comes to America to meet a man of status, but whose life is dependent upon being exotic always. Her followers will be delighted with Nadine.

Milton Sills' portrayal of Bayard Delaval makes a good turn and as he becomes with his role, which is perhaps better played than written. Delaval should have not have been dropped so much so as has been the story. He loses all value.

Alec B. Francis is well established in the (Continued on Page 16)

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS’ ASSOCIATION

At the next bi-monthly meeting of the A. D. A. it will resume its regular program of having a feature speaker top the entertainment. The next meeting will be held Friday evening, August 9th.

The Third Annual Farm Dance, held July 30th, was a success, and the Assistant Directors’ Association wishes to thank the public for its attendance and the studios and merchants and others of Hollywood and Los Angeles for their co-operation, which helped the dance go “over the top.”

Harry Tenbrooke is assisting Reggie Morris in completing the fifth of a series of 56 two-reel features. They expect to go to Tia Juana to view the Dempsey light films, next week.

Scott R. Beal has started a two weeks’ vacation and on his return will be with Director Wray, who will direct Wray Special Productions.

William Cunliff is scheduled to start next week assisting Director Scott Dunlap in the production of Mary Anderson Feature Films at the J. D. Hampton studio.

Eugene Deblie will finish this week his first production as co-director with Eddie Lyons of the well-known team of Lyons and Moran. Their new picture will be a two-reel comedy, produced at the Berwalla studios for the Arrow Productions. Mr. De Rue was with Lyons and Moran for five years as co-director at the Universal studios.

Dick Sheer is preparing the script of Elmore Glyn’s book, “Six Days.” The director has not been decided on, but it is understood that Miss Glyn will supervise, personally, the direction of the production.

Claude Camp has returned from a vacation at Catalina.

Virgil Hart started August 3d, assisting Director George Marshall in the production of five-reel Johnny Walker pictures at Fox.

Charles Huber arrived in the city on the 3d from Catalina, where he has been busy on the R. C. Entertainment Committee.

DEXTER WITH GOLDWIN

Elliott Dexter has joined the Goldwyn forces, having been loaned from Famous Players-Lasky, and will play the leading male role in “Grand Larceny,” by Albert Payson Terhune, which goes into production soon under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

JOINS R-C STAFF

Ace Berry, formerly with Selznick, First National and Mayflower, has joined the publicity staff of R-C Pictures Corporation. Mr. Berry is attached to the office personnel in New York and will handle special exploitation of productions for exhibitors.

IN WORSLEY CAST

Tom Gallery, Richard Tucker and Roy Atwell have been chosen for important parts in the forthcoming Goldwyn production, “Grand Larceny,” which Wallace Worsley will direct.

CHANGE

The child playing “Cupid” in “Crazy to Marry” is “Maxine,” not Jackie Young, as previously announced.

Kenneth Harlan will be seen in support of Constance Talmadge in “Good for Nothing,” her latest picture for First National.

COULDNT STAY AWAY

The famous feline of ancient song, who always returned, despite such things as very fat hunters and other treatment prescribed for that kind of pesky critter, seems to have nothing at all upon the tough old bird: "How long shall the synopsis be?"

This time-honored query has been led to its last resting place so many times that one would suppose it would eventually give up its ninth life and remain content as a decedent. But it refuses.

An enthusiastic reader again has fired the query at the writer of this department, while an able professional magazine has, in recent issue, devoted two pages to the matter.

Riding the same kind of a brick mentioned above, and denying not that the mission of the same is entirely praiseworthy, we hereby take the plunge, defending our position only on the claim of charity. We mean the brain-frazzled studio editor who has been sentenced to read these same synopses, and who cannot evade the issue without jumping from luxury to penury.

In this feature, this article induces one guilty wretch, even, to see the light and change his ways, the effort will not have been in vain. A motion picture synopsis should be as long as that demanded by the dramatic situations, not the incidents. Each situation must have its own plot, should be written fully and in action. That is all. For a feature there should be about 50 of these situations.

Significant situations require longer paragraphs. The average feature synopsis, written by a trained writer, will average around 10 pages of single-space typewriting, or about 20 pages of double spacing.

The editor is not a mind reader. He cannot see actualities which are in the writer’s mind, but are not on paper. Therefore he cannot “read between the lines,” if special action is intended. But he doesn’t care to read a few thousand words which reveal people indulging in thought, or making journeys from one place of action to another, or long wavy arguments between principals, or anything else which has no screen-story value.

THE THIN PLOT

Entertainment of the people, that world-old problem of he who would make mankind happier and better, is something small in its nature, that only he who Paddocks may read. The writer who seeks to provide first aid in the business of giving the movie lover what he wants today—and especially tomorrow—should be the first to read the signs of the times. The popular demand in this direction now seems to have turned heavily to the comedy-drama. It has been discovered that it is not always the great theme that cleans up. Somewhat to the surprise of the manufacturer himself, it now is found that a sparkling feature, chock full of entertainment value, is the money-maker of the season, even though the cheer-em-up photoplay hasn’t much of a plot. It is the secret the writer should hug up, the one embodied in that meaningful word, “entertainment.” Smother your subjects with sunshine and make them laugh. Gloom never cured an ailment.

IN FILM ALSO

“The difficulty of literature is not to write, but to write what you mean; not to affect your reader, but to affect him precisely as you wish,” says Robert Louis Stevenson in “Truth of Intercourse.” He continues: This is no contempt for the business of giving the public a bit of books or set rations; even in making your will, or writing an explicit letter, some difficulty is admitted by the world. But one thing, despite the surprise of the compiler, has become evident: that the business of life is mainly carried on by means of this difficult art of literature, and according to a man’s proficiency in that art shall be the freedom and the fulness of his intercourse with other men. Anybody, it is supposed, can say what he means; and, of course, the contrary, people so continue to suppose.”

J. H. Richardson, former editor of the "Saturday Magazine," and now at the Fox studio, said: The Screen Writers’ Forum

THE DIGEST OF THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

Page Seven

SACKCLOTH

It occurs, now and then in the lives of department writers, that they are deemed and pressured to come up with all sorts of pro bono publico articles which have been given to them by the human jury—only the gods could make such a decision. And in that case—perhaps we have been unfair to the gods!

Therefore, when an eminent critic writes from “general delivery” and signs his august name with a lead-pencil which could not have cost more than a dime, reviling the editor for failing to operate a free scenario school upon this page, we are cast down and abashed.

Because we are not teaching this aspirant how to write ‘em for Griffith and others, we are rebutted and all our efforts are as dust. We are very sorry to tell the reader of the rescue of this homeless one but we will firmly declare that—

The department which attempts to operate a school of instruction by means of a printed page per week, is off the track, and any weak son of Adam who attempts it is working with his sign— the man driven out of Eden because he dallied with the unknown.

GENEVIEVE BERTE

Here is this answer. Taking an unfair advantage of a humble writer who suggested that he would reply to queries which were not over his head, a few of the studio “boys” have seemed to bunch their troubles, passing them along with the suggestion that the reply column prod should be scenario writer upon the various common points involved.

“Situation” in a story are the steps by which that story climbs. Each situation aids in the further expansion of the plot. At times the situation may be a crisis, but the term “crisis” does not mean revolutionizing the student than the term “crisis.” The real crisis of your story is the climax, which should be the maximum. Although the climax allows a quick fade to the scene of final happiness where the climax is rather muisy.

The fifty situations: Some person, with king of the line, tells the uninitiated, they have 50 situations in his synopsis. Evidently this was intended as a definite guide as to length, the writer had in mind. Some very talented, many persons write stories which could be played in a reel or two. “Not sufficient material” has been the cause of many a rejection.

Mexicans: Writers are advised against using Mexican characters in their melodramatic stories because the government of these United States objects. The rule stands as to the Japanese.

Murder: Stories based on crime itself are avoided by studios because of the activity.
DOUG AND MARY TO ATTEND PREMIERE

Douglas Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers" has been completed, and comprises ten reels. When its first showing takes place at the Lyric Theater, New York, both Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks will occupy a box.

WANTS STORIES

Irving Cummings Productions, Inc., is in the market for two-reel Northwest Mounted Police stories. Applicants are referred to Dick L'Estrange, general manager.

STARS IN CHARITY VAUDEVILLE

A vaudeville show under the direction of Jimmy Mitchell will be staged presently in Sunland by the Sunland Chamber of Commerce and the Council of Community Service of California to raise funds for needed equipment for Monte Vista Lodge, a vacation home for needy children.

Vaudeville and film stars will appear personally on the program.

TRIP TO ORIENT

Norma Talmadge and her husband, Joseph Schenck, will start soon for Hawaii and Japan for a few weeks' vacation, and it is probable that the star will proceed to India and Egypt, where she will make a picture for Associated First National release.

MOTION PICTURE EXPOSITION

The Ethical Motion Picture Society of America announces the First Annual Motion Picture Industry Exhibit, to be held in Los Angeles, in January, 1922, for the welfare of the motion picture industry.

This exhibition will present the motion picture industry from its inception to date, and its chief purpose is to inspire better film standards and thereby lay deeper foundations for this industry.

SILVER SHEET CLAIMS MRS. WALLACE REID

Mrs. Wallace Reid (Dorothy Davenport), has signed a contract with Lester Cuneo whereby she will appear opposite Cuneo in his forthcoming production for Warner Bros., "Behind the Mask." She will appear on the screen as Mrs. Wallace Reid.

GOWLAND SAILS

Gibson Gowland, accompanied by his son, Peter, and Ralph Wells, is en route to England where he expects to make several pictures during the ensuing year.

FILM EDITOR GOES EAST

Alex Trofey, who recently finished the cutting and editing of the T. Hayes Hunter special production, "The Light in the Clearing," left recently for New York, where he will edit and cut two productions of foreign make.

GOLFING

George Ovey, Pacific Film company star in White Cap Comedies, is entered in the picture players' national golf championships, scheduled to finish September 25th.

Production of Charles A. Logue's play, "The Infield," will begin presently at the Ambassador studio.

AT LAKE TAHOE

Louis J. Gasnier, with his company, has gone to Lake Tahoe to film exteriors for his forthcoming production for Robertson-Cole, entitled "Ma'amselle Jo."

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

FRED MALATESTA

Senor Fredrico Marie Malatesta, or rather Fred Malatesta, is an Italian by birth, an American by adoption. He was born in Naples about thirty years ago and has been an actor on the stage and screen ever since he was seventeen, that being his age when he left military school for his first part, a harryer.

He played small parts for two years with splendid success for he was a good looking chap and very versatile. Motion pictures were then just starting in Paris, where he played with both the Gauumont and Pathé companies. He appeared in the two great feature pictures of that time, "Quo Vadis" and "Cabiria."

Becoming restless then chance took him to South America, where he appeared with a dramatic stock company for four years. Here he received much training, for he was kept playing in French, Italian and Spanish.

Returning to Italy Malatesta became a motion picture exhibitor, but luck was not with him, so he again went to Paris, where he directed Max Linder, the comedian, in many comedies.

Mr. Malatesta came to America for the Essanay Company with which he worked in Chicago for three and a half years. Since his arrival in Hollywood he has appeared in D. W. Griffith's "The Greatest Thing in Life," "The Mask," "The Best of Luck," "Big Happiness" and "The Sin of Rosanne."

In these stories he has invariably been cast as a society villain, with little opportunity to show his versatility as a character actor.

Now, however, he rejoices to step out of a dress suit and portray the role of "Dick," the Italian bootblack in Mary Pickford's picturization of "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

ALLAN DURNELL

A clever juvenile, who is going up the cinema ladder via the Paramount route, is Allan Durnell, who was seen recently as Arthur Simmons in Roscoe Arbuckle's "Crazy to Marry," which was directed by James Cruze. Durnell, who goes in for slang lover roles, will next appear in "Should a Man Marry," playing Tommy Jones.

ON CHARITY PROGRAM

Geoffrey Dering has recently finished with Betty Compson in "The Woman in the Case" under Director Penrhyn Stanlaws.

Mr. Dering will appear presently in a one-act sketch with June Dawn at Monte Vista Park, Sunland, for the benefit of the children's hospital.

TITLED

"For Land's Sake" is the title of the latest Hamilton-White Mermaid comedy, the third of the new series for Educational that has just been completed with an all star cast, including Lize Conley, Marvel Rae, Karl Montgomery, Frank Coleman and others.

GERMAN RELEASE

Donald Campbell, who controls in the foreign markets the Selig serial, "Vanishing Trails," featuring Franklyn Farnum and Mary Anderson, has sold the film for Germany.
FIRST NATIONAL RELEASES

The following plays have been completed by the Eastern independent producing organizations releasing their product through First National:

First National also has acquired the distribution rights to the Oliver Morosco production, "The Half-Breed;" the Hepworth production, "All's Button," an Australian play, "The Sentimental Bloke;" Harry Raver's "Cabiria," and is negotiating regarding four south seas productions by W. F. Alder.

PREPARING CONTINUITY

George Chesebro, being featured by the Morante Producing Company in a series of northwest mounted police stories, is vacationing at Coronado Beach while the continuity for his second picture is being written. The company will leave next week for Big Bear Lake, where it will location for about a month.

ROCK SCHEDULED FOR FIFTY-TWO

Joe Rock, former Vitagraph comedian, has started work on a series of fifty-two comedies, the first of which has been completed at Catalina Island. Lillian Biron, former Christie player, is playing opposite the star. Miles Overholt is writing the stories and "Kitty" Howe is directing.

CUMMINGS PRODUCTIONS

Irving Cummings' production, "On the Trail," had a recent showing at the Rialto in New York, followed last week by his second picture, "Tricked."

Work will start presently on production nine, which was written by Ruth St. Claire, and is as yet untitled.

ROBERTSON-COLE NOTES

Pauline Frederick started production this week on "The Lure of the Jade" (working title), under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Sessue Hayakawa is busy completing final arrangements for his forthcoming production, "The Street of the Flying Dragon," written by Dorothy Goodfellow, and adapted to the screen by Eve Unsell and Garrett Fort. Norman Dawn will direct.

GOLDWYN STARTS "GRAND LARCENY"

"Grand Larceny," from the pen of Albert Payson Terhune, will be put into production at the Goldwyn Studios this week under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

R. A. Chapman has finished his first production, "Call of the Pines," and preparations are underway for the second, which will be directed by Fred G. Hartman.

The filming of "Omar, the Tentmaker" has been deferred by Richard Walton Tully, the author.

"THE KID" IN SOUTH AMERICA

Wm. M. Vogel, New York exporter who controls the Charles Chaplin six-reel production, "The Kid," in the foreign markets, announces the sale of this latest Chaplin release for Argentina, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Uruguay and Paraguay to the firm of Max Glucksman, with headquarters in Buenos Aires. The deal with Mr. Vogel was negotiated in New York by Jacob Glucksman.

FRANZ PRODUCTIONS

J. Joseph Franz has contracted to make a series of pictures for the Western Photoplay Corporation, the first of which will feature Beatrice Burnham.

FINISHED

William P. S. Earle, Selznick director, has completed "The Way of a Maid," starring Elaine Hammerstein. In the supporting cast are Niles Welch, George Fawcett, Diana Allen and others.

FOX CONTRACTS

Fox recently closed long term contracts with Al St. John and Chester Conklin, who are to appear in comedies. He also signed a long term starring contract with Barbara Bedford.

part of Sir Edward Pelham, Nadine's intellectual equal, is to any role in which he finds himself.

A really unusual piece of unsympathetic comedy is the work of Arthur Stewart Hull, who enacts Honore, a wealthy but unhappy man. F. R. Butler, Raymond Brethwaite, Helen Dunbar, Clarence Geldart, Julia Faye and Anna Devlin are among the remaining players in this picture, which was directed by Sam Wood from Monte Katterjohn's scenario.

"THE CONQUEST OF CANAAN"

Grauman's

We never really grasped Tarkington's story, "The Conquest of Canaan," but we do know its author sufficiently to imagine his feelings upon seeing Paramount's screen version of this, his very popular brain child. For in it, he will see the lowest possible film story, lacking the human interest that is his chief characteristic of his work, with, we are forced to say, not one, particularly redeeming feature from the photoplay standpoint. What must have been long and interesting in the novel is, in the above statement, all that it was. The novel are often covered in Frank Tuttle's scenario by a flash and a subtitle, or possibly only a line. And while in other instances the play fairly shrinks into pale suggestiveness with detail and monotonous action. Outside of the unusually unsatisfactory screen treatment, this production is technically about average. Its photography is good, as are several of the subtleties, and an invigorating comedy touch is provided in the art titles upon which various sets, and models of dogs are used to symbolize the characters and situations in hand.

It is perfectly clear, just what William Neill intended with his direction but it is evident that he was considerably handicapped by the script.

We almost forget to mention that "The Conquest of Canaan" is a Thomas Meighan starring vehicle. That he makes no very definite impression with Joe London, his stalwart young hero, whose continual fight is with respectability, is also largely due to deficiencies of material as presented. Some way or other Joe's introduction and early action do not include the opportunities and characterizations which might have gotten him by the public, but that his hero, what exaggerated abuse by Canaan's entire populace accomplishes. In any event, this is just another role of fiction that isn't made especially admirable anywhere, or even amusing save in one intoxicated sequence which will cause many to swiftly redeem.

Meighan is getting too far along in years to afford any misses or even mediocrity in his work.

Ariel Tabor, the girl who alone believes in Joe is played by Doris Kenyon. This actress has always been handicapped by a displeasing personality and an absolute lack of taste in dress. Her wild and woolly "Puckin" is as the resplendent Ariel just in from Europe detract considerably from her scenes, while in her early sequence her complete and undemonstrated wardness gives the impression of being forced and therefore a little silly. This last may get over the general fan public, however.

Judge Pike, Joe's chief persecutor, is played with probably more violence than realism by Louis Hendricks, but the old heavy is swallowing with relish by many, which lets him off.

A few real comedy scenes, which will be generally appreciated, are done by Cyril Ring, who is cast as Joe's half-brother, the very respectable second heavy.

Alice Fleming and Paul Everton complicate things with their more minor roles of Claudine and Happy Farley, while Charles Abbe, Malcolm Bradley, Henry Hallam, Charley Hartley and Jed Prouty are excellent villains in the cast. Diana Allen, Ann Egeston, Mary Harlam, J. D. Walsh and Riley Hatch complete the cast.

Truly there is much in being able to choose a story which will adapt easily to the screen; there is equally as much in being able to screen that story after chosen. We believe that it is the latter ability that was lacking here.

"THE STING OF THE LASH"

California

Robertson-Sele's current Pauline Frederick release is Harvey Gates' "The Sting of the Lash," which has been adapted for the celluloid by H. Tipton Steck. This filmplay is a very strenuous drama which depends more upon one or two effective situations and some artistic characterizations to hold the attention than upon anything different in the plot. The story is merely the depiction of three chapters in a strong woman's life. They are all subtly handled by Henry King, who directs the production. However, in an apparent effort to get down to footage things are cut rather short at the end, leaving the plot seeming someway underdeveloped.

Miss Frederick's interpretation of Dorothy Keith, a sweetheart whose love makes of him a failure, and who finds her real womanhood, is exactly the sort of beautiful work that we have come to expect from this actress, but the little "naturalness" which she inserts into the drama of her women fairly make them breathe. Possibly Clyde Fillmore has a broader scope of work to display his dramatic talent as Donald Keith, a prospector whose failure and wrongs deplete him, than he has had herebefore. We see him here as the manly lover and young husband, the drink-sodden beast who terrorizes his family, and lastly the man who has experienced and mediated upon which he has lived through. Fillmore is a capital opposite for the star.

Lionel Belmore is good as Ben Ames, the conniving sheriff, and Lawson Butt does satisfactorily Steven Rhodes, a "harassed sympathizer" part.

Betty Hall and Evelyn McCoy make a very interesting little girl of Crizzy, which they play at the ages of five and ten, respectively.

Miss Stevens and Jack Richardson complete the cast.

"The Sting of the Lash" has its credit considerable in entertainment value.

SCREEN ORIOLES AND WHERE TO FIND THEM

By Ernest Butterworth

Ernest Butterworth, Jr., is with Mary Pickford.

OLD ATMOSPHERE

They call me "Old Atmosphere" and that's all I am.
A played-out, worn-out, tired old ham.
With little to eat, drink, smoke or to wear,
I came west to act, but was cast in the air.
I thought when I got here I'd choose a nice part.
At a few hundred a week, just at the start.
Call up the big ones, and tell 'em I'm here,
Then name the salary I want for the year.
So I put on my "dickey" and pinned on my cuff,
Got out my old snipe to keep up the bluff,
And saluted forth, "Ye Gods!" to see,
Ten thousand actors that looked just like me.

There were actors large, and actors small,
And some that could not act at all.
No and then a fine old face,
That lent the mob a little grace.

There were actors thin and actors fat,
Some were round and others flat.
Some were silent, and some were talking,
But I did not see the old ghost walking.

My "pipe dream" was over, and I laughed out loud.
As I stood and gazed on that vast actor crowd.
So day after day, and year after year,
I stand or sit in "just atmosphere."

Just a word of advice from one old and fat,
Who was once an "up stage" but now is broke flat.
Who has chased pretty chickens, drank wine and such—
Save some of your coin—or you'll land in Dutch.

For when you are old, you will surely find,
That the best of your acting is just in your mind.

And the day will come, be it far or near,
When you'll be playing in "just Atmosphere."

And when that day shall end, don't let it appall,
But say to the greatest Director of all:
"O Lord, please take me just as I am,
A worn out, played out, tired old Ham."
—Dr. Charles Lang.

LETTERS OF A SELF MADE CAMERA MAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer

Glen Cedar Ranch, Burbank, Calif.

My dear Nephew,

Was not at all surprised at the contents of your last letter. I have been expecting something like it ever since you went to work on that lot. That laboratory has a sort a dash reputation, and as I knew sooner or later you would put up a holler. Don't try to argue with them, because it won't do any good. Try to get your work sent off the lot. Make a couple of shots of the same thing and send one of them outside. That will tell the tale, and if your director has any backbone where a backbone ought to be, why all will be lovely.

Until conditions are different, I am in favor of the commercial laboratory. Competition is a great thing, but then doing the best work gets it. I am reminded of an experience we had once with the superintendent of a strictly commercial laboratory. The people happened to be with at the time had arranged to take the work there, for they had been made a rate of a fourth of a cent off providing they had the release made there. As I wanted to know how they wanted the stock sent in, and how they handled it after it did get in, I had a little talk with the aforesaid official. "Young feller," he says to me, "it don't matter to us how you expose your film, or how you light your sets. We don't want any tests either. The soup we here will take care of anything, and if you don't want to separate your interiors from your exteriors that will be O.K., with us. Your stuff is racked and in the soup, it can stay there twenty minutes or longer. If the boy goes out to smoke a cigarette, and forgets to set the clock, it will be all right any how." There is one thing lacking in the motion picture business, and that is an emblem. The one we ought to have been appropriated by the benefactors of a famous smoking tobacco, and I suppose this is the reason we haven't any. Well, anyhow, I think I suggested to the superintendent of this set Kichen, as you call it, that he tie the animal outside, he became real peved. I don't doubt but that the developer he mentioned would do all he claimed for it. Where he and I differed was on the result.

The test system is the only system. Otherwise if the negative developer comes to a light effect, he is just as liable to figure that the photographer was playing in hard luck, and do his best to bring it up to density, thereby ruining the effect worked for. Most negative developers have an aversion to taking a rack out of the tank. Once in, they seem to thing it ought to stay there. When they finally do take it out to make room for another, the detail you have been lighting to get has come and gone.

We believe the time is coming, and it may soon, when a photographer will be allowed to personally superintend the developing of the negative and making of the sample print. Then animated photography will have that stamp of personality which is peculiar to the work of the still life photographer. There will then be more photographers and fewer crank turners.

In reply to your question about spuds will say, "That's something we ain't got nothin' else of but." Everybody sends best regards.

Write soon and often.

Your Uncle Dudley.

Publicity Due

During the much-publicized undersea search recently conducted by the county to recover from the unconscious Pacific a gun which was supposed to have figured conspicuously in Los Angeles' latest sensational murder, a local newspaper, either through negligence or intent, laid itself open to much severe criticism by the picture colony. The circumstance was this: Having learned that the authorities were in need of deep sea divers and apparatus to aid in their project, the Irvin Willat Studio magnanimously offered them, free of charge, the paraphernalia which had been acquired for use in a late Willat production and which was at the time forming a lobby display for the theatre running that filmplay. At great expense the equipment was transported to the beach and studio divers furnished to assist those in charge.

At a somewhat later stage of the game, attaches of the naval base at San Pedro joined forces with the searchers. Then it was that the daily previously mentioned, seeking perhaps a little self-aggrandizement, stressed in remarkably lengthy stories the strenuous though ineffective effort of the navy and itself to reclaim the fatal weapon. One was left with the impression that this enterprising sheet was personally responsible for the whole show. Meanwhile the Willat organization, having done a great portion of the first and hardest work, was scarcely mentioned in connection with the affair.

Good publicity, although we happen to know that its prospect had nothing to do with the affair from the studio's standpoint, would have been invaluable, not only to the company in question but to the entire industry. On the other hand, it meant nothing to the navy, which isn't recruiting at this particular time and therefore in no need of boosted stock.

And yet how many times have we picked up this same journal to be met with headlines to the effect that some beautiful Movie Queen has turned shoplifter, etc., etc., etc. The inevitable "queen" may or may not have illuminated a mob scene once; the point is that the title makes a good story.

The local press should make more of our virtues and less of our alleged sins if they would retain our support. What about it?—F. R.

English Productions

Ordinarily statistics for statistics' sake absolutely fail to appeal to our imagination, but occasionally they suggest things and at other times they are downright enlightening. The compilation below, for which we are indebted to London's "The Motion Picture Studio," is of such value. It tells us what England is doing in the production line; it also locates some of our missing friends. We feel that the various interests attached to each consideration justify the space we expend upon it.

J. Stuart Blackton is filming "The Glorious Adventure," a seven reel drama starring Lady Diana Manners at Bush House, Aldwych. He is being assisted by Clifford Grey with Nicholas Mursuraca at the camera. The scenario is by Felix Orman.

A British and Colonial drama, "The Puppet Man," is being directed by Frank Crane. Molly Adair and John Reid are being starred, Cosmo Gordon Lennox is the scenarist and I. Roseman is the photographer.

Broadwest is producing a drama, "The Imperfect Lover," directed by Walter West and starring Stewart Rome. J. Frangueili is the cameraman. The same company has just finished "Christie Johnstone," a Norman MacDonald production starring Stewart Rome and Gertrude McCoy. W. G. Clifford scenarized this costume romance; G. Pauli photographed it. "VI of Smith's Alley" is being cut and assembled by director Walter West. This drama, which stars Violet Hopson and Cameran Carr, was scenarized by J. B. Bertram Brown and Charles Barnett. It was shot by Frangueili. Casting has commenced on "Levity Hicks."

"The Bigamist," a George Clark production, directed by Guy Newell, starring himself and Ivy Duke, is being assembled. Newell scenarized the story which was photographed by Bert Ford.

I. B. Davidson is cutting its production of "The Fifth Form at St. Dominic's," directed and scenarized by A. E. Colly, with D. P. Cooper at the camera.

Famous Players-Lasky has completed "Dangerous Lies," a Paul Powell production, starring Mary Glynne and David Powell. Mary O'Connor adapted this society drama; R. J. Cullen assisted in the direction and C. McDonald photographed it. Donald Crisp, assisted by Claude H. Mitchell, is directing himself in "Bonnie Brier Bush," a Margaret Turnbull scenario.

"The Haigh Serial" being produced by Frederick White under the direction of Edward R. Gordon, is working on schedule. It stars Ernest Haigh.

"Roses in the Dust," a Gaumont production, starring Iris Rowe and Gladys Mason, and directed by Captain Calvert, is now being photographed by Basil W. G. Emnett. H. Morgan wrote the scenario.

An untitled comedy drama is being made by Harma, under the direction of Bernard Dudley. Marjorie Villis and James Knight are being starred in this comedy drama, with J. McKenzie photographing.

Director G. Greville has completed a costume drama entitled "All Sorts and Conditions of Men" for Ideal. Rex Davis and Renee Kelly are starred in this Colleen Moore Production. "Sonia," featuring Evelyn Brent and Olive Brook, is nearing completion under the direction of Deni-
BLACHTON PRODUCING ON OTHER SIDE

The British production, "The Glorious Adventure," a drama of the seventeenth century, is being produced and personally directed by Stuart Blackton in England. Blackton is using the color camera in the making of this picture.

He has chosen Lady Diana Manners to interpret the leading role, and the all-female cast, which Mr. Blackton has assembled, includes Gerald Lawrence, Alice Drasgow, Cecil Humphreys, Lennox Pawle, William Luff, Flora Le Breton, Haidee Wright, Lois Sturt, Elizabeth Beerbohm, Victor McGlazian, Marjorie Day, Tom Heselwood, Fred Wright, Rolf de Cordova, Gertrude Rolle, Rosalie Heath, Lawford Davidson, Violet Virginia Blackton and Charles Stuart Blackton.

RELEASING PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

National Exchanges, Inc., announces that beginning with next month, one five-reel feature picture will be released through its exchanges monthly. "Shadows of the West," presented by the Motion Picture Producing Co. of America, Inc., will be the September release.

"The Lotus Blossom," produced by the Leopold H. Jung Production Co. and starring Lady Tsan Mei, Chinese film star, will be published in October. Other releases will be announced later.

Simultaneously with the feature program, National Exchanges, Inc., will begin the release of one two-reel King Cole comedy monthly. These are also presented by the Motion Picture Producing Co. of America, Inc., and feature Bobby Burns.

FIRST FLATHEAD PICTURE FINISHED

The first of a series of feature length North woods pictures, being made by the Flathead Producers Corporation, at Columbia Falls, Mont., has been completed and titled "Rough Bark le Noir." The same cast, including Art Staton and Hazel Hart, has starred with the second of the series, which will be made in the Glacier Park district. C. O. D. Blanchfield will distribute these productions on the State Right market.

STARTING

Yellowstone National Park is the locale of the newest Ann Little serial, being directed by Duke Worne.

Supporting Miss Little are Joseph Girard, Leonard Clapham, Hal Wilson, Edith Stavari and Howard Crampton. William Nobles is in charge of the photography, and the story, which is being tentatively called "Nanette of the North," is by Karl R. Cooledge.

TO RELEASE COMEDIES IN MEXICO

The Loanchuug Films Co. is producing in El Paso a series of one-reel comedies for release in Mexico.

GOLDWYN TO RELEASE LINDER PICTURES

Max Linder, French comedy star, has signed a contract with Goldwyn to release his future pictures, starting with "Be My Wife," which he recently previewed in New York at Aeolian Hall.

Robert Goldin is assisting Fred Newmeyer in the making of "A Sailor-Made Man," Harold Lloyd's next comedy.

Eleven weeks of studio work and "Disraeli" is finished, starring Geo. Arliss. Director Henry Kolker is cutting and assembling the picture, which will be released presently.

READY FOR RELEASE

"The Playerhouse," written by Buster Keaton and Eddie Cline, is Keaton's latest comedy. Virginia Fox plays opposite the comedian and Joe Robert enact the heavy. "The Playerhouse" is on its way to New York.

CHARLES R. SEELEING

Motion picture director and producer, who is president of the corporation bearing his name.

AT UNIVERSAL

Production will start sometime in September on "Man to Man," by Jackson Gregory, starring Harry Carse.

Simultaneously with the start of "Man to Man," Priscilla Dean will begin work on "Wild Honey," a drama of the African veldt, from the novel by Cynthia Stockley.

Gladys Walton will commence the fall season with "The Gutsersnipe," by Percival Wilde, for which Wallace Clifton is working the continuity. It is expected that Dallas Fitzgerald will direct this picture. "Sandman" will be used by the star for a forthcoming vehicle.

Upon the completion of "The Rage of Paris," Miss Dupont will film "You Can't Live on Love," a comedy-drama by John B. Clymer, which has been scenarized by Geo. Hively.

Frank Mayo has a sea story for his first post-vacation starring vehicle, called "Dr. Jim," written and directed by Stuart Paton, following which he will star in "The Altar Stairs," a third romance of the South Seas, written by G. B. Lancaster.

Herbert Rawlinson will start work presently on "The Black Bag," by Louis Joseph Vance. Mr. Rawlinson's first featuring vehicle will be "The Substitute Millionaire," purchased recently from the estate of the late George L. Tucker.

Marie Prevost's next story will be "Princess Virtue," which Doris Schroeder is adapting to the screen. Hoot Gibson's starring vehicle will be "Headin' West," an original story by Harvey Gates, which it is expected that Jack Ford will direct.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

"White Eagle," the Ruth Roland serial, is nearing completion under Director W. S. Van Duke.

Eddie 'Bo' Boland began production this week on a new comedy, under the direction of Bob Keer, in which Ebeie Broadhurst plays opposite the star.

Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, which is in its second week of production, will have for its releasing title "A Sailor-Made Man." Mildred Davis is playing opposite the star, as usual. Lloyd's recently finished two-reeler, "Don't Worry," is having the art titles added to make it ready for shipment to New York.

Harry "Snub" Pollard recently finished a "beach" picture, as yet untitled, with Marie Mosquini playing opposite and Noah Young and "Tiny" Ward as chief supports.

Harry "Snub" Pollard's three recent releases for Pathe are: "No Stop Over," "At the Ringside," and "What a Whopper."

NOVO NOTES

Adelle Buffington, author of "Apples of Sodom," in which Gladys Brockwell is being featured, has been advanced to the position of secretary of the Novo Film Syndicate, which is starring Miss Brockwell in a series of society dramas. This Syndicate has purchased through the Photoplaywrights League two future stories for Miss Brockwell.

In addition to her duties as Scenario Editor for the Novo Film Company, Adele Buffington has been made a member of the Board of Directors, and left recently for a conference with Mr. Glasgow, head of the corporation, in St. Louis.

George Cooper will enact the part of "Mugsy" in "Turn to the Right," at Metro.
"THE LOST ROMANCE"

California
A simple little story naturally told, depicting the struggles of three souls for the attainment of lasting romance is William de Mille’s production for Paramount of Edward Knoblock’s play "The Lost Romance." Following a now-very-popular trend, this screenplay depends more upon its humaness than upon the inclusion of any particularly startling situations to carry over. Excellent use has been made of the original’s invaluable familiar touches by both direction and the Olga Printzlau scenario, which moves carefully, avoiding quite gracefully the too-be-dreaded pitfalls—sticky sentiment and inconsistency. The picture’s sets, photography and lighting are pleasing throughout, while the cast is of the high standard that is almost inevitably found in a Lasky drama.

Headlining it, at least from a story’s principal, whose humor breaks she shares happily, this woman appears to be yearning over their misunder standings and weaknesses. Elizabeth Erskine is a sweet impression filmed, that any actress might claim with pride. She demonstrates Miss La Rue’s great versatility. Lois Wilson is exceedingly well cast in the young feminine role, Sylvia Hayes, a girl with whom two young men fall quickly in love under a June moon. Her marriage with one of them and their lost romance is the real starting point of the story. Miss Wilson is doing some really remarkable work in the very day woman line that should not be overlooked. Sylvia is a good representative of it.

It has been some time since we have happened upon Conrad Nagel in a straight, almost juvenile part on the order of Allen Dineen’s work in "The Lost Romance." But to be seen in this picture. As might almost go without saying, however, he makes his portrayal of the young doctor entirely worthwhile from both a dramatic and human interest consideration.

Jack Holt is also placed advantageously in the role of Mark Sheridan, an adventurer whose fortune is to love another man’s wife.

Little Mickey Moore as Allen Erskine, Jr., Lillian Leighton, Robert Brower, Clarence Geldart, Mayne Kelso, and Clarence Burton compose the remainder of the cast, which is in every instance satisfactory.

It has been said that Miss Erskine’s smiles and several tears to offer the public, which always enjoys a well balanced combination of the extremes.

"SHORT SKIRTS"

Superba

A more different photoplay than "Short Skirts," Universal’s current Gladys Walton starring release, is hard to imagine. Following the foregoing remark, we do not mean that its plot, if indeed it possesses anything worthy of that much abused title, is at all new fundamentally, but this pictured version of an Alice Tildesley story is mostly remarkable on account of the fact that it deserts the comedy-drama routine to form merely an incident in the life of a modern girl-child. Of young love interest it has practically none; of that sordid but enthralling element, excitement, this time parading under the fascinating caption, Romance, there is considerably more present. This picture, which on the whole is very entertaining, has been well handled by the direction, which was in the hands of Harry B. Harris. His management of the "kid stuff" is unusually good. It is, therefore, a pity that the cutter should have been permitted to mutilate some sections of the production with a pair of indiscriminately slashing scissors. (Do they employ scissors to smear most Universal and a lot more photoplays or is the tortuous instrument a lawnmower?) Photographically, "Short Skirts" is standard.

Again we forecast a big future for a clever little star, Gladys Walton. Much of her material has been against her, but in Natalie Smith, the affected little Happer (and a ridiculously childlike flipper at that) in this picture, she has a very fair opportunity for characterization, which she accomplishes with much young charm. Poor Natalie’s almost laughable independence, her lack of very good sense, her loyalty, her resourcefulness, and general good intentions all remind us particularly of little girls whom we have always known and in fact, of little girls that we once were. This will be true for many more who see her. Miss Walton will derive much of popularity from Natalie, a little pared of femininity which she portrays truly.

Jack Mower is convincing as Lance Christie, the inadmirable young man who inveigles Natalie into the theft of a very political paper. This actor should stick to his heavy. They suit him better than juveniles.

Jean Hathaway and Edward Martindel are both pleasing as Natalie’s mother and her fiancé, a reform candidate for governor, while William Welsh, Harold Miller, Howard Ralston, Scotty McGregor and Ena Gregory are all well placed in the remaining roles. "Short Skirts" will beguile an hour much more pleasantly than the ordinary program picture of its type.

"THE HELL Diggers"

Grauman’s

A regulation story done in the same old way is "The Hell Diggers," Byron Morgan’s Saturday Evening Post story, which serves as Wallace Reid’s latest starring vehicle. It is one of several vehicles which Morgan sufficiently to overlook anything for the sake of observing his handsome face on five reels of film and an occasional glimpse of his ex pression. Probably, it is technically beyond reproach and more seriously, quite entertaining. Its author scenarized it.

Teddy Darman, a young engineer who invents a reclamation device drives his car to a girl order it is, another typical Reid hero. Following it, at least in his lighter business now and again which adds interest to his work. We will be glad to see him pull out of a rut as "Affairs of Anatol" and "Peter Ibbetson." Monotony is killing, anywhere.

Very little is required of Lois Wilson in the leading feminine role. She is merely Teddy’s pretty stimulus to greater things. Miss Wilson fits into the role easily, which in consideration of her heavier work speaks well for her. Frank Leigh makes an exceptionally villainous heavy. He enacts Masters, a crooked manager of a big dredging company. More laughs are produced by Lucien Littlefield, who does Silas Hodkins, Masters’ comedy bookkeeper, than any other member of the cast.

Alexander Brown in a set of ridiculous false whiskers, Clarence Geldart and Bud Petrie as more minor parts.

Frank Urson directed this production for Paramount.

"HER STURDY OAK"

Clune’s

An Elmer Hardy photoplay which we took to have been mere horse for a fact that approaches the tragic from the viewpoint of an entertaining motion picture, is "Her Sturdy Oak." Certainly offer the best effort, starring Wanda Hawley. It is a sickly, uninteresting, domestic affair which fishes frantically for laughs and obtains very few. At that, some of its business might have been rendered amusing had it been efficiently handled by the leading members of the cast. There is, however, only one clever performance in the play. Technically the production is about its company’s average.

Probably there is a place for Miss Hawley in the picture business, but it is certainly not the position of a star, particularly a comedy star, anywhere. All of the dainty beauty which this actress represented in her old Lasky stock days has become oversown with a sullenness as to personal appearance and manner that results in a real displeasure to mass audiences. Moreover she gives the appearance of knowing her technique but slighting it through indolence, an error which the profession will not tolerate. It is unfortunate that Miss Violet White, the heroine of this picture. This is especially unfortunate because a sprightly comic rendering his character’s laugh very evident by forcing them in places, while again they aren’t made recognizable. (Continued on Page 14)

Upon the completion of "The Rage of Paris," Miss Dupont will film "You Can't Live on Love," a comedy-drama by John R. Clymer, which has been scenarized by Geo. Hively.

Frank Mayo has a sea story for his first post-vacation starring vehicle, called "Dr. Jim," written and directed by Stuart Paton, following which he will star in "The Altar Stair," a romance of the South Seas, written by G. B. Lancaster.

Herbert Rawlinson will start work presently on "The Black Bag," by Louis Joseph Vance. Mr. Rawlinson's following vehicle will be "The Substitute Millionaire," purchased recently from the estate of the late Geo. Loane Tucker.

Marie Prevost's next story will be "Princess Virtue," which Doris Schroeder is adapting to the screen.

Speculation that a starring vehicle will be "Headin' West," an original story by Harvey Gates, which is expected that Jack Ford will direct.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

"White Eagle," the Ruth Roland serial, is nearing completion under Director W. S. Van Dyke.

Eddie "Bo" Boland began production this week on a new comedy, under the direction of Bob Keir, in which Eddie Broadhurst plays opposite the star.

Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, which is in its third week of production, will have for its releasing title "A Sailor-Made Man," Mildred Davis is playing opposite the star, as usual. Lloyd's recently finished two-reeler, "Don't Weaken," is well on its way, with the titles added to make it ready for shipment to New York.

Harry "Sfib" Pollard recently finished another "Beach" picture, as yet untitled, with Marie Mosquini playing opposite and Noah Young and "Tiny" Ward as chief supports.

Harry "Sfib" Pollard's three recent releases for Pathé are: "No Stop Over," "At the Ridgeside," and "What a Whopper."

"THE LOST ROMANCE"

California

A simple little story naturally told, depicting the struggles of three souls for the attainment of lasting romance is William de Mille's production for Paramount of Edward Knoblock's Western novel "The Lost Romance." Following a now-very-popular trend, this screenplay depends more upon its humanness than upon the inclusion of any particularly startling situations to draw it over. Excellent use has been made of the original's invaluable familiar touches by both the direction and the Olga Printzlau scenario, and the picture moves carefully, avoiding quite gracefully the to-be-dreaded pitfalls—sticky sentiment and inconsistency. The picture's sets, photography and lighting are pleasing throughout, while the cast is of the high standard that is almost invariably found in a Gatsby drama.

Heading it, at least from a sympathetic standpoint, is Fontaine La Rue, playing Elizabeth Erskine, a middle-aged maiden lady whose own loneliness has made her very tender toward the youth, especially the troubled youth, about her. This character is interpreted with great delicacy, which renders it the utmost in gracious refinement and lends its philosophy, which so often makes for prosiness in a picture, a great poetic appeal. As the aunt or friend of the story's other principals, whose harshness breaks she shares helpfully, this woman appears to be yearning over their misunderstanding and weaknesses. Elizabeth Erskine is a sweet impression filmed, that any actress might claim with pride. She demonstrates Miss La Rue's great versatility.

Lois Wilson is exceedingly well cast in the young feminine role, Sylvia Hayes, a girl with whom two young men fall quickly in love under a June moon. Her marriage with one of them and their lost romance is the real starting point of the story. Miss Wilson is doing some really remarkable work in the every day woman line that should not be overlooked. Sylvia is a good representative of it.

It has been some time since we have happened upon Conrad Nagel in a straight, almost juvenile part on the order of Allen Erskine, Elizabeth's nephew and Sylvia's husband, and to be seen in this picture. As might almost go without saying, however, he makes his portrayal of the young doctor entirely worthwhile from both a dramatic and human interest viewpoint. Jack Holt is also placed advantageously in the role of Mark Sheridan, an adventurer who is unfortunate to be love another man's wife.

Little Mickey Moore as Allen Erskine, Jr., Lillian Leighton, Robert Brower, Clarence Geldart, Mayme Kelso, and Clarence Burton compose the remainder of the cast, which is in every instance satisfactory.

Lois Wilson has many more smiles and several tears to offer the public, which always enjoys a well balanced combination of the extremes.

"SHORT SKIRTS"

Superba

A more different photoplay than "Short Skirts," Universal's current Gladys Walton starring release, is hard to imagine. The foregoing remark, we do not mean that its plot, if indeed it possesses anything worthy of that much abused title, is at all new fundamentally, but this pictured version of an Alice Tildesley story is mostly remarkable on account of the fact that it deserts the comedy-drama routine to form merely an incident in the life of a modern girl-child. Of young love interest it has practically none; of that more sordid but enthralling element, excitement, this time parading under the fascinating caption, Romance, there is considerably more present. This picture, which on the whole is very entertaining, has been well handled by the direction, which was in the hands of Harry B. Harris. His management of the "kid stuff" is unusually good. It is, therefore, a pity that the cutter should have been permitted to mutilate some sections of the production with a pair of indiscriminately slashing scissors. (Do they employ scissors to smear most Universal and a lot more photoplays or is the tortuous instrument a lawnmower?) Photographically, "Short Skirts" is standard.

Again we forecast a big future for a clever little star, Gladys Walton. Much of her material has been against her, but in Natalie Smith, the affected little Happer (and a ridiculously childlike chafper at that) in this picture, she has a very fair opportunity for characterization, which she accomplishes with much young charm. Poor Natalie's almost laughable independence, her lack of very good sense, her loyalty, her restlessness, and general good intentions all remind us peculiarly of little girls whom we have always known and in fact, of a little girl that we once were. Because this will be true for many more who see her, Miss Walton will derive much of popularity from Natalie, a little parcel of femininity which she portrays truly.

Jack Mower is convincing as Lance Christie, the inadmirable young man who inveigles Natalie into the theft of a very political paper. This actor should stick to heavies. They suit him better than juveniles.

Jean Hathaway and Edward Martindel are both pleasing as Natalie's mother and her fiance, a reform candidate for governor, while William Welsh, Harold Miller, Howard Halston, Scotty McGregor and Leo Gregory are all well placed in the remaining roles.

"Short Skirts" will beguile an hour much more pleasantly than the ordinary program picture of its type.

"THE HELL DIGGERS"

Grauman's

A regulation story done in the same old way is "The Hell Diggers," Byron Morgan's Saturday Evening Post story, which serves as Wallace Reid's latest starring vehicle. It is a usual story of a slim thread of romance, and possibly a superfluity of the inevitable Morgan machinery. However, some people like machinery and a whole heap of it. Morgan sufficiently to overlook anything for the sake of observing his handsome face on five reels of film and an occasional glimpse of his excellent belt. "The Hell Diggers" is technically beyond reproach and more seriously, quite entertaining. Its author scenarized it.

Teddy Darman, a young engineer who invents a reclamation dredge because his best girl orders it, is another typical Reid hero. Fortunately, it is a lighter business now and again which adds interest to his work. We will be glad to see him pull out his ruler from "Affairs of Anatol" and "Peter Ibbetson." Monotony is killing, anywhere.

Very little is required of Lois Wilson in the leading feminine role, Linda Wade. She is merely Teddy's pretty stimulus to greater things. Miss Wilson fits into the role easily, which in consideration of her heavier work speaks well for her. Frank Leigh makes an exceptionally villainous heavy. He enacts Masters, the crooked manager of a big dredging company. More laughs are produced by Lucien Littlefield, who does Silas Hoskins, Masters' comedy bookkeeper, than any other member of the cast.

Alexander Brown in a set of ridiculous false whiskers, Clarence Geldart and Bud Post fill up more minor parts.

Frank Urson directed this production for Paramount.

"HER STURDY OAK"

Clune's

An Elmer Harris photoplay which we took to have been made for a farce but which approaches the tragic from the viewpoint of an entertaining motion picture, is "Her Sturdy Oak." It is a present offering, starring Wanda Hawley. It is a sickly, unfunny, domestic affair which fishes frantically for laughs and obtains very few. At that, some of its business might have been rendered amusing had it been efficiently handled by the leading members of the cast. There is, however, only one clever performance in the play. Technically the production is about its company's average.

Probably there is a place for Miss Hawley in the picture business, but it is certainly not the position of a star, particularly a comedy star, anywhere. All of the dainty blonde who this actress represents is little old Lasky stock has become over-run with a slovenliness as to personal appearance and manner that results in a real displeasure to most audiences. Moreover she gives the appearance of knowing her technique but slighting it through indulgence, an error which the profession will not tolerate, is uttering the wails of Violet White, the heroine of this picture. This is especially unfortunate because a sprightly spitfire might in some part have justified the whole.

Walter Hiers also disappoints in his portrayal of Samuel Butler, Violet's heavily poetic husband. This ordinarily beauteous comedian renders his character's laugh very evident by forcing them in places, while again they aren't made recognizable.

GETTING CLOSE

What can I do to put myself over as a screen writer? Many of my stories are very close to my heart, and yet I feel I am not making the most of them, thinking that they may be even stronger, more subtle, more interesting. And yet I know that, if I put my best into them, they will be accepted, and that the public will enjoy them. But I am not sure how to do it, and how to make them more attractive to the reader. Can you help me?

Writers of popular fiction, writers of screen stories, and writers of plays, all have their problems. The writer of fiction has to create a world of his own, and make his readers believe in it. The writer of plays has to create a world of his own, and make his actors believe in it. The writer of screen stories has to create a world of his own, and make his audience believe in it. And yet, in all these cases, the writer has to be true to himself, and to his own ideas, and to his own emotions. And yet, in all these cases, the writer has to be true to the public, and to the public's taste.

However, whether or not we are members of the group of writers who are trying to make themselves understood, we are all trying to make ourselves understood. And yet, in all these cases, the writer has to be true to himself, and to his own ideas, and to his own emotions. And yet, in all these cases, the writer has to be true to the public, and to the public's taste.

Continuity Writing An Education

Try continuity. Do not let the reader of your story be confused. Do not let the reader of your story be misled. Do not let the reader of your story be deceived. Do not let the reader of your story be surprised. Do not let the reader of your story be puzzled. Do not let the reader of your story be disappointed.

However, whether or not we are members of the group of writers who are trying to make themselves understood, we are all trying to make ourselves understood. And yet, in all these cases, the writer has to be true to himself, and to his own ideas, and to his own emotions. And yet, in all these cases, the writer has to be true to the public, and to the public's taste.

JACK STRUMWASSER

Author, scenarist, and editor for the West Coast Fox Studios, who is responsible for "Play Square," "The Drifter," "Live Wire," etc.

Picture Analysis

Another method of "trying" continuity is to go to the picture theater, watch the production carefully and, upon returning home, write the story you have seen, in numbered sequence. You will find many reasons for things you have not understood. Comparison of such stories from the screen with your own efforts will enlighten you; you will open your eyes much better as to true form in synopses.

It is true that you will see upon the screen certain things you have been warned against. You will find weaknesses and mistakes. The logic of certain pictures will cause you to disagree. Some characteristics will appear as faulty or artificial. If so, your education is advancing. You are analyzing.

Inconsistent Characterization

One of the several general faults which may be discovered by rough practice at continuity writing, is the lack of proper characterization. Many earnest writers who have succeeded elsewhere, fail to convince the studio editor because of seemingly inconsistent action upon the part of important characters who aid in carrying his story.

Fiction writing, for example, can cover up such weaknesses by a multiplicity of words. Upon the printed page we may "convince" the reader of many things not shown, by depicting the effect of matter upon the mind. The typical law-abiding person, who naturally would do no violence, sometimes figures in one-half of those front-page shockers.

Why?

Because, unknown to his intimates even, certain tendencies may proliferate against good judgment, may poison his mind and embitter his soul to such an extent that he will surprise friend and stranger by a violent act.

Such things—the poignant assassination of a man's very soul—may be told in fiction, for words may follow up the vivid warning before the victim's eyes. But, as thoughts cannot be registered upon the screen, save in very specific instances, this chemical change in the soul of a well-regulated man must be left to the writer of narrative, so far as the demands of the photoplay are concerned.

Therefore, the writer of continuity, will not accept the scenario, wherein the "well-regulated" person of the story, who has been proceeding in his role "true to form," suddenly loses his mind, to the unnatural, and does things of which his nature never hinted previously in the file, because he knows that the audience cannot be convinced that the melodramatic sequence could have come about through such a well ordered character.

Continuity, in its true form, reveals earlier action which begins to warn the spectator that the character is undergoing the change. "Error" is used if the tenacity is augmented through more action until the outbreak is received as a natural consequence.

A word or two about the screen story is shown in illustration of that change, we have the difference between narrative— or thought—and screen story.

The Rambling Continuity practice also will pull up short the writer who rambles; the enthusiast who believes he has a story because he sets down a number of dramatic incidents, each of which is in itself a good, strong situation. An adventure may be put on the screen in a series of occasions which will thrill throughout the presentation but, in the end, no story will be shown.

The one-reel days presented many such stories, as well as the story which opened by a very convenient invention of trouble for the handsome leading man, planted merely for the sake of watching him extricate himself.

But the old days have gone by and audience growth has grown so "wise" that they demand at least, a reason for every story that is told upon the screen. They may read the book, but they will not be satisfied with the book story told in narrative form upon the screen.

The continuity itself must transform all that into the satisfactory photomama; therefore even a single time when numbered scenes will bring the hopeful apprentice much closer to true form in his synopses than an imagination which has not received necessary schooling.
Pickups By the Staff

WILL PAY FOR PICTURE IDEA

The Grant-Mills Productions, a new company which is financed by Texas capital, although located here, has decided upon an advertising campaign to interest picture fans in their first production. They are offering a thousand dollars for the best fifty-word idea on which their scenario department can base a big story. Wy-cliffe A. Hill, President of the Phineas Wrights League; Florence Lawrence, screen star and Miss Bobby Hunter, late of the Lasky scenario staff, constitute the committee which will select the winning idea.

CARL BERCH GOES DOWN WITH "ALASKAN"

Carl Berch, actor of "the old school" for some thirty-five years, was among the forty odd passengers who recently lost their lives on the ill-fated steamer "Alaskan." Mr. Berch was returning to his Los Angeles home after a stock season in the Northwest when the accident occurred. A member of the A. E. A. and B. P. O. E. 906, Mr. Berch will be greatly missed by his scores of friends.

STUDENTS' "LOCATION COURSE"

Sixty-five members of the Commerce Club, Los Angeles Polytechnic High School, students of law and business, gained entry to the Hollywood studios recently and worked as extras in the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam to get "inside information" on motion pictures.

Classrooms are deserted for "location" each week by the Commerce Club, to study under the guidance of Charles Edwin Locke, industrial and governmental organizations at first hand.

NEILAN MANAGER HERE

Something must have slipped up for Walter. The one redeeming feature in "Her Sturdy Oak" is the stalwart Sylvia Ashton, who enacts Belle Bright, Samuel's persistent pursuer. Ashton's scenes are well proportioned and each one means just what its interpreter intends. Nor does she stop at comedy, for one or two daring approaches to the pathetic are accomplished and successfully given away with by this dependable "old-timer."

Wayne Kelso is a good type for Violet's political mother. Leo White and Frederick Stanton complete the cast in good positions.

Thomas Heffron directed the production.

son Cliff, who also wrote the scenario which is being photographed.

Director John Guilden is producing "The Night Hawk," starring Malvina Lonfellow and Henry de Vries for International Artists. Ford Hughes is responsible for the scenario and Will Howse is at the camera.

Master Films is cutting and assembling a drama entitled "The Marriage Lines," which Wilfred Noy wrote and directed. Barbara Hoff is starred; Theodore Trumbull photographed.

Minerva Films is making "The Beggar's Syndicate," a comedy drama featuring Mary Patterson, Bert Darley, and Crispin Hay, under the direction of Adrian Brunel, who also wrote the scenario. Frank Hoffman is the cameraman.

"The Mayor of Casterbridge," starring Fred Hughes, is being made by Progress. Sidney Morgan, who wrote the scenario, is directing the production, which is being photographed by Harry Munford.

Samuelson will start a new picture under the direction of Rex Wilson shortly. In the meantime "Dick's Fairy," the drama recently photographed by Bert Wynne, starring Hargreaves Munsell, Joan Griffith and Albert Branford, is being cut and assembled. Elliot Stannard scenarized the story, which was directed by L. Frobenius.

Screen Plays is producing one short reel melodrama a week under the direction of Fred Paul and Jack Raymond. Stoll is producing "The Fruitful Vine," under the direction of Maurice Elvey and the camera of Germaine Berger. "General John Brown" is also being made under this company by Harold Shaw. "The Hound of the Baskervilles" was finished some time ago by Director Maurice Elvey. Elvey and his assistant, Campbell are starred in this production.

H. W. Thompson is producing "The Wonderful Year," a French drama directed by Renee La Guardia before a largely attended meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at Brown's Chop House on August 4th. A practical plan is being put in shape by the directors of the association, and it is their desire to work in cooperation with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Conference of New York, the Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. The first attack is to be made by the directors of the association on every candidate for Assembly (there are no Senators to be elected this year) to express his attitude in writing regarding this picture. The censorship board is not at all sure how he will vote for or vote against the repeal of the censorship law.

The campaign is to be absolutely non-partisan, and it is the purpose of the leaders in the movement to ask that support be given, regardless of party, to those who will work for and vote for the repeal of censorship, and to oppose the candidates who are against the liberty of the screen.

To take censorship "lying down," to curry favor with the board which holds in its hands the power to make it hot for any producer or distributor who shows any inclination to be a "bad boy" in the matter of presenting controversial pictures in opposition to the policies of the party in power, is of course the line of least resistance. But if they can do it and already there is a strong indication that the passive course is the popular course.

The absolute folly of becoming driven sheep with no definite plan of resistance to an out and out menace to our liberties both as moving picture men and as American citizens is evident to even to those who subscribe to the false theory that "the easy way is always the best."

Suppose our forefathers had said of King George III: "He is not fit for taxation without representation." "Oh, the easiest and best thing to do is not to make a fuss about it. We can all make a nice living by hard work so why should we worry about a little thing like that." Where would our liberties be today?

In fact and in effect the censorship law is even more of an enslaving measure than all the policies of George III combined because it seeks to enslave the brain. Any man in the moving picture business who subscribes to legalized pre-publication censorship is either mistaken or too soft to fight.

As the case was here, practical plan has been prepared in structure, the only present need is a full, complete and militant support of that plan. The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in preparing this plan are acting within their province because among their membership are these whose special work is it to whip into shape the ideas of their clients and to aid and direct the ideas of their own which will appeal to the public. They are a body of experts in the organizing of stock.

Their plan, as we are advised of it, calls for a co-operation between the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, and the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and other organized bodies, and they stand ready to offer their services for such of the people within their exellent line of training. They have no glory to seek and no politics to play. They desire to be of practical service to the industry for work is not fed by perfunctory resolutions, passed and forgotten.

In view of the differences which occur from time to time between and in the way of cooperation, this organization has made a fortunate entry into the situation and complete working program with a united front should not be difficult to secure.

NAZIMOVA STOCK

Nazimova is negotiating for the use of the Earl Carroll theatre, New York, almost completed, where she hopes to head her own stock company next winter.

SWANSON RESTING

Having recovered from a minor operation, undertaken in a local hospital, Gloria Swanson is preparing to leave Hollywood for a short vacation in New York.

Harry Myers has one of the principal roles in Rex Ingram's "Turn to the Right."

Baby Jackie Condon may be seen in "Miracles of the Jungle," recently released by Warner Bros.

Betty Compton makes her debut as a Paramount star in "At the End of the World," directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws, which will be the attraction at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of August 22nd.

HEARINGS SOON

The Senate Finance Committee will hold its hearings on the tax bill. It is expected that one day, or a part of one day, will be given to representatives of the picture industry. Foreign producers, as well as those interested in the importation of films and raw stock manufacture, will be heard.

Saul E. Rogers of the Fox organization is among those who will appear when the committee starts work.

PINE TREE OFFICIALS CONFER

Fred W. Hinckley, president and Carl E. Millicken, treasurer of Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., will confer with James Oliver Curwood on the next production to be made for Arrow release. Millicken is former governor of Maine.

NOVEL REVIEW

Charles B. Burr will sponsor a series of short subjects in which will be incorporated Pen and Ink Comics, Rollin Lester Dixon's "Scenic Poems," natural color fashion studies and current events topics by Edwin Marcus. The series will appear under the title of "Burr's Novel Review."

"THE ATHLETE"

The second feature produced by the United States M. F. Corp, entitled "The Threshold," is to be renamed "The Athlete."

TO PRODUCE HERE

Iris Pictures will hereafter make their pictures here. Walter Steiner, director general, is finishing the company's initial film, "Tangled Hearts."

RESUMING ACTIVITIES

David Horsley, "pioneer" in the industry, has reopened his New York office, and will resume a series of 20 two-reel Bostock Wild Animal dramas in which Patricia Palmer and all-star casts are featured.

SINGERS REPLACE MUSICIANS

Choruses are being trained to replace the striking musicians in various New York picture houses. The number of 75 has replaced the symphony orchestra at the Capitol. The deadlock still continues.

LEASES ESTEE PLANT

Ray C. Smallwood has leased the Estee studio for one year. Smallwood will make pictures for Pyramid Pictures, Inc., of which Walter E. Greene is president.

CHICAGO ACCEPTS "ANATOL"

The Chicago Board of Censors has passed "The Affairs of Anatol" intact.

E. M. Asher, Sennett representative, has left for New York with a print of "Molly Q."

Dorothy Richards, who was in "Debura," has joined the cast of "The Barricade," being made at the Victor studio by Wm. Christie Cabanne.

RAY PRODUCTIONS

Charles Ray has finished "Gas, Oil and Water," his latest comedy for First National release. "Two Minutes to Go," Mr. Ray's football story, is cut and ready to be sent to New York.

This star will begin work presently on "The Deuce of Spades," a Charles E. Van Loan story.

AT REALART

William D. Taylor is making preparations for the next May McAvoy production for which Julia Crawford Ivers is writing the scenario.

Alice Eyton is finishing the scenario which will be the next vehicle for Mary Miles Minter. It will be a January release.

THEDA BARA PICTURES

Theda Bara will resume the production of pictures presently; Lee A. Oehs will be the sponsor for the former Fox star's pictures, three of which will be made a year.

VIGNOLA DOING "BEAUTY'S WORTH"

Robert G. Vignola, with assistant director Philip Messi, Luther Reed and camera man Ira H. Morgan, are en route here where scenes will be taken for the Cosmopolitan Production, "Beauty's Worth."

Production on "Sisters," which had been assigned to Vignola, will be in charge of Albert Capellani at the International Studios, New York.

SHIPS PRAIRIE PRODUCTION

Bob Horner, who is writing and directing a series of western dramas for the Prairie Film Company, has finished cutting his current subject and shipped it to the C. B. C. Sales Company, in New York. Fred Hirots, formerly with Selznick, has arrived here to take over the business management of this concern.

MAJOR JACK ALLEN'S JUNGLE PICTURES

Major Jack Allen, of wild jungle beasts, will make his bow to the motion picture public on September 25. Pathe announces this date of release of "Netting the Leopard," the first of a series of one-reelers produced by Adventure Films, Inc., in which his savage four-legged captives "play the star parts."

MORE WESTERNs

Director Fred Caldwell has as his guest Louis Boston of Washington, D. C. Mr. Boston is combining a pleasure and business trip, having in mind the formation of a company in Los Angeles to produce five-reel westerns.

TITLING FOX PICTURES

Tom Miranda has completed titling Dustin Farnum's current release—"The Primal Law," and Johnnie Walker's "The Drifter," and begins Monday on "Bar Nothin'," starring Buck Jones.

MORANTE NORTHWESTERN

Millburn Morante will shortly start production on a five-reel story of the Northwest woods written by J. Inman Kane, purchased through the Photoplaywrights League of America.
LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW
By John Leeser

Glen Cedar Ranch, Burbank, Calif.

My dear Nephew:—I have just broken into the business. I had been an actor of ability, and had a splendid foundation upon which to become a first-class director. I offered quite a few suggestions during the course of the picture, because I felt it was up to me to give him the advantage of what I had learned from other directors. It began to wear on me, and while I never say that I was making a mistake, I finally became aware of it myself. We made three pictures together, but I have wished many times since that I had "let the director direct the picture." Of course, when the two can work together on both sides of the fence, there is no question but what a better picture will result. Many directors are artistic, and on the other hand a photographer has an angle or view point also. If I were you I would have a nice little talk with your man, and assure him that it will never occur again, unless he desires it. Just say: "Let's you and I get along together." I don't care what business we're in, it seems awfully hard to acknowledge we're wrong, but it does everybody concerned a lot of good when we say it out loud where everybody can hear it. Even where it affects your own department; all directors are not photographers, and many times they are from the state south of Iowa. It's all in the way you go about getting your point over. If they insist then ask them if they will let you shoot it both their way and your way. It may be that the next time you would only have to shoot it one way. If you are making a five-reeler in two weeks, I guess that's the only way you could shoot most of the scenes. They say that two heads are better than one. I'll go so far as to say that even four or five heads are better than one. We have in mind one of the big directors. He was nearly six feet, and looked no doubt from the impression that he was making ideal pictures because every one on the staff agreed when any point was discussed, that his opinion was the best. As a matter of fact none of them had the courage to suggest what he thought was better. It's a great life though, after all, if you don't weaken.

I have been "shooting" some of the animals here on the ranch. Have a monkey and a turkey for leads, and I am here to state that no peroxide ever had anything on either one of them, but temperamental.

Write again soon.

Your affectionate,

UNCLE DUDLEY.

Margaret Loomis has been chosen for an important part in the forthcoming Rex Ingram picture, "Turn to the Right."

Co-operative and the Industry

The financial depression which has been, is, in fact, still being experienced by big business all over the country, has brought many changes of methods in its conduct. The picture industry has not been an exception. With money for the production of anything nearly impossible to procure, some energetic film promoter conceived the idea of adopting the much discussed "co-operative" plan to effect a photoplay. His result must have been gratifying, or so it would seem, if we are to judge from the promiscuous following enjoyed by the theory which he sponsored. For dozens of organizations have sprung into being in the past few months, each one with the intention to make independent pictures upon this basis, i.e., that their talent, technical men, directors, etc., render their services in return for the receipt of a sufficient amount of stock in the company to meet their ordinary salary figures.

Quite naturally there are as many opinions in regard to the advisability of encouraging this method of procedure as there would be in any other line of endeavor. A review of the situation, therefore, is not inopportune.

It is a fact that up to the present writing about fifty per cent of the attempts made in the co-operative direction have met with a greater or less degree of failure. There have been various reasons for these misadventures, but probably the majority of them trace back to a lack of ability in some one, or several, departments of their respective companies. It is simple to perceive that as long as our most capable actors, photographers, electricians, etc., can keep employed for cash they are unlikely to favorably consider an entrance into less certain agreements; hence the liability of inferior work somewhere.

Of course, we all recognize blatant errors in the program turn out of our big corporations and we repeatedly complain at being inflicted with them, but in the end our grumblings mean little other than perhaps discouraging theatre attendance, for the Wall Street affiliations all control their own channels of release and even hundreds of the houses. The independent cinema play, however, with no such assurance of purchase and distribution, must "go the magnates one better," admittedly an undertaking of which very few are capable.

For the achievement of success, then, the company operating upon this plan must be proficient in all departments. The other half of our co-operatives have apparently measured up to this standard, for they are selling their material at a decided profit. They have on their side thousands of exhibitors who in return for injustices of the past are fairly aching to tear holes in our financial demons the moment that they are afforded an opportunity to slide acceptable independent productions into their houses.

Anyway we take it, this activity among the industrious but "uncapitalled" class will prove beneficial. Besides increasing competition, always a good thing, it will bring to the fore the man in our profession who through lack of opportunity has been assigned only mediocre positions. Moreover, it will weed out of the business the promoter who either through unworthy intent or inability steers a bark containing a crew of trusting artists onto the rocks of disaster. It is an unusual project that proves equally advantageous to an industry in its success or failure.—F. R.

Foreign Atmosphere

By Harry E. Nolan

A party of Americans, of which I was one, took in a picture show last winter at a certain resort on the French Riviera. Sandwiched in between an Italian film and a Pearl White serial was a "Drame du Wild West," as they call it. It was sure enough wild! Hardly had it gotten on its way before we began to feel that something was wrong. I, for one, felt a disconcerting sense of unreality and began to ask myself in what studio and in what part of the United States that film could have been produced. Soon some rank discrepancies in the props and costumes, and especially in the action, made us all burst out laughing. No bunch of cowboys in real life, or before the camera, ever acted in any such manner. Any of our Mix's or Harts or Barnums would have undertaken to catch between their teeth the bullets from their cunning little revolvers. Something—all things—was wrong with that Western mining town. The bartender overplayed his part, the bottle which he shouted out on the bar may have once had some "vin rouge" in it, but never any real American whiskey, and the hero that he served had evidently never taken a drink of said stuff. You felt that you could look right into their brains like an X-Ray, and know that they weren't any of them thinking as any true Westerner ever thought. In spite of plenty of action, some splendid riding and some really dramatic incidents, the picture was a roaring farce-comedy to us. But some of the audience went wild over it.

We found, of course, that the picture was produced right there in France, and that everyone connected with it, from the author of the story to the donkey ridden by the (French) Chimnman, had never been any nearer the "Far West" than Bordeaux. It was an earnest, but pathetic, attempt to picture something that they could not correctly visualize. No doubt they thought that their picture was a true-life copy of the real thing, as judged by all the Western dramas they had seen and all the dope that their combined researches could dig up. But they had seen with French eyes, and established their values according to French standards. The result was (Continued on page 15)

MERIT FILM COMPANY BUYS GUINAN WESTERNs

The Texas Guinan Productions announces that a contract was recently closed with I. E. Chadwick, representing the Merit Film Company of New York, and the Merit Film Company of Baltimore, whereby the first series of twelve Texas Guinan two-reel Western and Northwestern productions were acquired for the territory of Greater New York and New York State, Northern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia.

In addition to the two-reelers, and during the course of the making of the first series, one special five-reeler production will also be made, the story having been acquired from Mildred Moreno.

NEW STAHl STORY

Louis B. Mayer has secured the film rights to Halber Foutner’s “The Fur Bringers,” and it will be made by John M. Stahl as his third independent unit production for Mr. Mayer.

“The Fur Bringers” will have an all-star cast, and will be presented through Associated First National.

SANTSCHI TO HEAD HIS OWN COMPANY

Having terminated his Pathé contract, Tom Santschi is solehurting at his California mountain resort. Preparations for his own company are now in progress, and it is likely that his first picture will be made in New York.

WILL TAKE MORE WESTERNS

As a result of his country-wide canvas showing that Western pictures are in keen demand by exhibitors, Irving M. Lesser, general manager of the Western Pictures Ex- ploitation Company, is looking for more Western pictures with California backgrounds.

FORTHCOMING STEWART PICTURES

Anita Stewart’s next two starring vehicles for First National release will be “Rose o’ the Sea,” by Countess Barrynska, and “The Woman He Married,” by Herbert Bashford. Miss Stewart intends to terminate her va- cancy in the East and is expected here shortly.

Midge Tyrone, who edited “The Child Thou Gavest Me” and wrote the scenarios for “Habit” and “The Invisible Four,” is working on the script of “Rose o’ the Sea.” The film version of “The Woman He Married” is being prepared by Josephine Quirk, who scenarized Miss Stewart’s last two pictures, “Her Mad Bargain” and “A Question of Honor.”

LONESOME LUKE COMEDIES PREPARED

Arrangements have been completed to launch Gaylord Lloyd, brother of Harold Lloyd, as a comedy star. He will impersonate the Luke character originated by his brother. Four pictures, to be released soon, will mark his debut. The Gaylord Lloyd comedies thus far delivered are: “Trolley Troubles,” “The Lucky Number,” “A Zero Hero,” and “The Devil to>Date.” The last three were directed by Erle Kenton, with Estelle Harrison as leading lady.

Jean Calhoun will enact an important role in the current Frichthingham picture, entitled “The Daughter of Brahma.”

LITTLE ON LOCATION

Aun Little and company are at Yellow- stone Park making exteriors for the Ben Wilson serial, which is in its third week of production.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

The title of Katherine MacDonald’s photo- play most recently completed, formerly “Mother Goose,” has been changed to “The Woman’s Side.” J. A. Barry, who directed Miss MacDonald in “The Woman’s Side,” is cutting and editing the picture, and will have it ready presently for shipment.

Charles Ray has finished shooting “Gas, Oil and Water,” and is preparing the con- tinuity of Charles E. Van Loan’s story, “The Deuce of Spades.”

John M. Stahl has virtually finished “The Song of Life.” Only a few scenes remain to be filmed. Then he will go to the Moc- jave Desert between Sperry and Shoshone.

Norma Talmadge is in the fifth week of “Scalp!” Through,” which she is making at her New York studio. Herbert Brenon is directing.

Duster Keaton has finished “The Black- smith,” his second production for First Na- tional release.

Colleen Moore, recently seen in “The Sky Pilot” is appearing in her final scenes in the Oliver Morosco production, “Iwo Mc Gee,” at the Louis B. Mayer studio.

Allen Holubar is busy preparing his next production in which Dorothy Phillips will be featured.

Weley Barry will soon start work in Marshall Neilan’s photoplay version of Booth Tarkington’s “Penrod.”

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

“Pickaninni,” a recently completed com-edy, is ready for New York shipment. This two-reeler includes in its cast “Sunshine Sammy,” Jane and Vera White, Ethel Brod- hurst, George Rowe, “Tiny” Ward, Mark Jones and Sammy Brooks. H. M. Walker is author of the titles, and Bob Kerr and Jimmy Parrott directed it, with Frank Young at the camera.

“Rainbow Island,” one of Harold Lloyd’s early comedies, has been reshot. In the picture “Snub” Pollard, who now has his own company, is the star’s running mate.

Production has started on a comedy whose locale is “Zululand.” George Rowe, cross- eyed comedian, and “Sunshine Sammy” will have important parts. Ethel Broadhurst will play the feminine lead.

AT METRO

Viola Dana will start work presently on “Glass Houses,” an original story written by Clara Genevieve Kennedy, for which Edith Kennedy, the author’s sister, has prepared the continuity. Harry Beaumont, who directed Miss Dana in her last picture, “The Fourteenth Lover,” will again di- rect her in “Glass Houses.”

Bert Lytell will start the filming of “The Right That Failed” within the next week. Bayard Veiller will handle the megaphone for the new picture.

George D. Baker is engaged in the prepa- ration of a new series of productions in which Gareth Hughes will star. There will be five comedy dramas in this new group of Baker productions, to be filmed by S-L Pictures.

PICKFORD’S LATEST FINISHED

Current Reviews

“THE END OF THE WORLD”

Gramman’s

The release of the celluloided version of Ernest Klein’s “At the End of the World,” which Betty Compson’s debut as a Paramount star. The story is of a cynic’s sensitive daughter, her life in a Shanghai cafe and her position in the lives of four men. Opening in an Eastern cross roads of the world, and finding its culmination at that world’s end on a lonely lighthouse site, this refreshingly novel picture play holds much of fascination. Moreover, it is the style of setting into which its star best fits. The Edrith Bingham scenario is excellent and there are comparatively few errors in the Penrhyn Stanlaws direction. Some truly remarkable miniature, lighting and photographic effects have also been accomplished for it under the able supervision of cinematographer Paul Perry.

As we have remarked, Miss Compson is ideally placed as Cherry O’Day, the superlative woman who finds her soul in a love that can include no cynic’s reservations. This actress’ superb dignity, rare in one so undeniably young, her open-eyed, ingenuous attitude, together with a clever knowledge of technique and proportion, lend her personality an irresistible allure. We anticipate her forthcoming work in this line.

It has been some time since we have enjoyed Milton Sills in one of his worldly “men” more than we did in this picture. He plays Gordon Deane, the adventurer who struggles longest against the recognition of Cherry, his heart’s desire. Without being heroic he includes in his character all of the attributes that go to make up the modern American favorite. Sills’ fans are certain to be enthusiastic over Deane. He is correctly done.

A striking contrast is created for the story by Mitchell Lewis and Casson Ferguson, who enact respectively Donald Mac Gregor, a sea-faring combination of fanatical sincerity and a crudity that approaches the bestial, and Harvey Allen, a weakening whose temperament and actions are invariably a woman. They are both very clever and contend valiantly with each other for highest honors in their scenes. An interestingly even break results.

Spotlitswood Atiken, Joseph Kilgour and Goro Kino could not possibly have been improved, the roles of Frank Kilgour’s, Cherry’s father, William Blaine, her husband, and Yong, her Chinese godfather. It is a delight to witness occasionally a sympathetic Oriental.

“At the End of the World” has much of value from the standpoint of entertainment and the box office is bound to report favorably upon it.

“ONE WILD WEEK”

Clune’s

A Francis Harner story, adapted by Percy Heaviside and directed by Archie Congdon for his latest Redrat comedy, “One Wild Week.” Miss Daniels’ productions are improving from several standpoints, and this comedy goes on every level as a new appreciation line. (There isn’t a question but that a goodly portion of picture-going humanity will follow closely below paragraph.) The comedy is a natural combination of intelligence and art to overcome a really bad story, but “One Wild Week” isn’t bad at all. In fact, it has many enlivening moments, the audience’s appreciation of which was distinctly audible at the opening performance. Although based upon the lighter side of reform school life, it hits rather squarely at some of its abuses in a highly effective manner. The action is sufficiently rapid, and not too consistent, to proclaim this production a first rate farce.

No very noticeable errors show up in the Maurice Campbell direction, and H. Kinney Martin’s photography is very fair, resulting in satisfaction from a technical consideration.

Elinor Hancock

Pauline Hathaway, the reckless and much plotted young heroine, is a regulation Daniels’ flapper, a bit too startling for practicability, but quite entertaining always. The star lends Pauline a rather colorful personability and some easily handled comedy.

Frank Kingsley, a stranger to us, is ample in the “scientific” juvenile, Bruce Reynolds, who invents an electrical apparatus which is infallible in judging a criminal’s guilt. Some achievement?

Mayne Kelso and Edwin Stevens render the exaggerated opposition never amusing and convincing in the roles of Angeline Jessop, Pauline’s miserly spinster aunt, and Oliver Tohin, her dandy suitor.

Frances Raymond, Herbert Standing and Edythe Chapman are excellently situated as Mrs. Brewster, Judge Bancroft and Mrs. Deere.

Carrie Clark Ward and Bull Montana, in small but appropriate positions, are also included in the cast.

“WEALTH”

Tally’s

Julia Crawford Ivers’ screen version of Cosmo Hamilton’s story, “Wealth,” is Paramount’s latest publication, starring Ethel Clayton. The theme of the photoplay is based upon the much-discussed question of the relationship between riches and happiness and the plot drags in a designing mother-in-law to “help things happen.” Taken by and by, it is an ordinary drama inteligently presented so that it results in very acceptable entertainment.

The camera-work for which James C. Van Trees is responsible varies somewhat, but is, taken generally, perfectly adequate.

William D. Taylor also reaches his standard in the direction of the capable cast with which he has to deal.

The star portrays Mary McLeod, one of the workers of the world, who is not given contentment by the money that she marries, despite a great love for her well-meaning husband. We have long admired Miss Clayton’s technique but we feel that her appearance in older roles would not be justly justified. However, she carries conviction here as usual.

Herbert Rawlinson is a suitable type for the young, irresponsible girl, that is Phillip Dominick, the male lead. Such work is, after all, his forte.

Probably the strongest position in the picture is occupied by Clara Bow, who enacts Mrs. Dominick, the aggressive, overbearing controller of her family’s much-prized millions. This pronounced heavy proves much concerning its interpreter’s adaptability.

J. M. Dumont, in a rather unnecessary sacrificial role, gets over satisfactorily, while Jean Ackerman, and Richard Wayne play calmly the almost irreparable parts. Estelle Rolan and Dr. Howard. Due to some miscalculations, the sets, the lighting and the acting, it is a safe bet that the audience here will find this a charming and engaging picture.

Harry Steers and George Periolat complete the list of performers in this Lasky-made production.

“MOTHER O’MINE”

Kinema

“Mother” stories seem to be on the crest of popularity’s unsteady wave, at this particular moment. We have had several strong, even overdone, ones lately, so that, largely due to its title, we expected something different in the treatment of the subject matter contained in Thos. Ince’s “Mother O’Mine,” than it has received. True, the plot is based upon a boy’s worship of his mother and her sacrifice to save him, but it is her influence that remains more than presence that is realized throughout.

In fact her footage is markedly limited. The Charles B. Brackett story, however, makes an interesting drama, in the scenario of which Gardner Sullivan has carefully judged the placement of the suspense, heart interest and climax. Nible has further increased the production’s value by handling the script and excellent cast with true artistry and proportion. Photographically, “Mother O’Mine” is exceptionally good as it is otherwise technically.

Robert Sheldon, the upright young hero who is unfairly accused of murder, is made very human by Lloyd Hughes, whose work becomes more and more pleasing as his scope widens.

Opposite him we see Betty Ross Clarke in the role of Dolly Wilson, an actress who loves the boy for his cleanliness. Miss Clark has ahead of her the brilliant future that is the reward of natural charm and clear headwork. She is quite lovely as Dolly.

In absolute extreme to her situation in “Wealth,” Claire MacDowell is seen to advantage as Mrs. Sardis. This is a new, in this picture. Her work is handled with well shaded sympathy.

If it is possible Joseph Kilgour offers a more emotional piece of acting in Willard Thaxter than ever. Thaxter is another brutal heavy with which his portrayal will arouse loathing in any audience. His unsavory credit that makes that unrepentant monster’s death scene pitiful enough to extract a tear from the stoniest heart.

Bette Blythe in a small but well rendered role.

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS' ASSOCIATION

William Rau has finished assisting King Baggot in the production of "The Girl Who Knew Everything" at Universal, and has gone to Camp Baldy for a vacation. A surprise party was rendered "Buddy," the picture dog, last week, by his business manager, Henry East, of the A. D. A., in honor of "Buddy's" 12th birthday. Many well-known dogs of filmdom were present, accompanied, of course, by their bosses. Dick Rush has recently completed assisting Directors Howe and Heresholt in the production of "The Grey Dawn" at the Brunton Studios, for R. B. Hampton Productions. Harry Tenbrooke and his director, Reggie Morris, have come to New York.

COOGAN SIGNS GILLINGWATER

Claude Gillingwater has signed a contract calling for his appearance in Jackie Coogan's forthcoming production. Mr. Gillingwater, who but recently completed "The Earl" in Mary Pickford's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," will be starred upon the completion of his present role in a Broadway play which John Golden and Winchell Smith are preparing.

"SNOWY" BAKER WITH SELIG-ORK

"Snowy" Baker, Australian athlete, has been signed by Selig-Rork to star in a five-reel production entitled "Sleeping Acres," by Brayton Morton, adapted to the screen by Bertram Bracken, which will start production under the direction of Mr. Bracken around September 5th.

IN WILSON PRODUCTION

Peggy Blackwood is enacting the character lead in "A Motion to Adjourn," co starring Roy Stewart and Marjorie Daw, which Roy Clements is directing for Ben Wilson Productions.

HEADS TITLE DEPARTMENT

Wells Hastings, magazine writer, scenarioist and former associate of D. W. Griffith, has recently been assigned by Supervising Director Elmer Harris as head of a newly formed title department at the Realart studio.

Georges Benoit has completed photography and lighting effects for the "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" after eleven weeks' activity. He is succeeded by Gordon Bishop Pollock, who is working with Mr. Earle on photo-illusions for the production.

GASTON GLASS SIGNS METRO CONTRACT

Gaston Glass will be seen in support of Viola Dana in her forthcoming Metro production, "Glass Houses." This is Mr. Glass' second appearance with Miss Dana, his first being "There Are No Villains," a Raynor Veiller production soon to be released.

Evelyn McCap, who will be remembered in "The Sting of the Lash," is now cast in "The Daughter of Braham." The following players have been added to the cast of B. A. Walsh's first national production, "Kindred of the Dust": Eugene Besserer, three-year-old Bruce Gue rin, Maryland Morne and Pat Rooney.

LASKY SIGNS EDITH ROBERTS

Edith Roberts has signed to play the stellar role in Cecil de Mille's production now being prepared.

TO HAVE CHARGE OF DEVELOPING DEPARTMENTS

Lenwood Abbott has been added to the force at the Hal E. Roach Studios, where he will take charge of the developing department of the recently completed laboratory. Mr. Abbott was previously in charge of the laboratory at the National Studios, and prior to that he managed the Morocco laboratories.

LINDER GOLDWYN STAR

Goldwyn has signed Max Linder, and the French comedian is to work at its Culver City studios.

KING WITH BARTHMESS IN SECOND

Richard Barthmess's second starring vehicle will be directed by Henry King, who has recently completed direction of Barthmess in "ToBlie David."

JOINS CHRISTIE

Alice Mason, who recently closed in the "Princess Virtue" company in New York, has come west to appear in a new Christie comedy, to be started presently, which will feature Neal Burns.

"BILLY" REID ON SCREEN

Little "Billie" Reid, the four-year-old son of the Wallace Reids, is playing a part in the new Lester Cuneo picture in production at the Warner Brothers studio.

PLAYING SERIAL LEAD

Leonard Clapham is playing opposite Ann Little in her current serial for Ben Wilson Productions.

Charlotte "Peaches" Jackson is playing in "A Prince There Was," the current Thomas Meighan picture.

Wedgwood Newell enacts the heavy in Louis B. Mayer's "The Song of Life," a John M. Stahl production. The first picture to pass the censorship rulings of the New York Motion Picture Commission was Charles Ray's "A Midnight Bell."

Margaret Whistler, who designed and costumed "The Queen of Sheba" and "The Connecticut Yankee," is at present in charge of the wardrobe at the Fine Arts Studio.

Frankie Lee and Mary Jane Irvice are cast in the J. L. Frothingham Production, "The Daughter of Braham," now being made at the Brunton Studios.

Elmer Dewey is the featured heavy in "Vim, Vigor and Vitality," starring Richard Talmadge, which Grover Jones is producing for the Goldstone Production Company.

Among those appearing in the all-star cast of the James Oliver Curwood story, "The Muse," which Bertram Bracken is making for Selig-Rork, are Willard Louis and Rosalee Wong.

Lucille Ricksen is in Minneapolis making a series of personal appearances. She is the little leading lady of the Booth Tarkington Edgar comedies, produced by Goldwyn. Little Miss Ricksen will also be seen in "The Old Nest."

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"
The Screen Writers’ Forum

Conducted by William E. Wing

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

With everyone telling us the ailments of the motion picture, I have been asked to ask a stunt student of the screen to have his little say.

He has done so, and the result is altogether worthy. This special critic who peopled, but withhold his name, is of highly trained mind, a keen perceiver and a noted technician. Great corporations have used his analytical mind and have absolutely abided by his decisions. Listen to him then:

THE STUDENT SPEAKS

A young boy's first sign of intelligence, other than the instinct to feed and struggle, is its discovery that it can see something. It begins to note moving objects, lights, colors. It realizes that there are things outside of itself and its material craving.

This is the birth of the instinct for entertainment. It must be amused, as many mothers and fathers know to their chagrin, as they indulge the child's whims to be lifted in arms, etc.

Later the child has toys, but is always reaching out to broaden its experiences. The toy gun is exchanged for a real one, and he becomes a hunter or soldier. The doll is exchanged for the baby, and the child joins the ranks of mothers.

No longer are they interested in Mother Goose, or Diamond Dick, or the Youth's Companion. Their minds continually reach out for new experiences, new knowledge, new worlds to conquer.

So inestimable are these minds in their discontent that they are never satisfied with the personal experiences of life; but must peer about for other lives, for wider and more stimulating experiences.

The mind lives and has experiences apart from the body.

Some few, called geniuses or creative minds, live more in the body than in the brain, but I can only heard music such as his grandest compositions handed down to us do not even approach. Dickens wandered about the streets of his mind-towns, talking with his characters as familiarly as we wander in our home towns.

The pictures of truly great artists are only faint reflections of mind-scenes whose glories we can only conjecture.

Such persons need no entertainment other than the workings of their own minds; at least in their own specialties.

The rest of us have only fragmentary mind pictures, ideals and memories of emotional experiences. Therefore, our entertainment consists of delightfully recognizing the co-ordination of experiences whose fragments, beauty, and comic absurdities already exist in our daily lives.

Donovan, the technician, could not comprehend the pandeism of Richard Thurd or Hamlet, because his honest mind has no fragments or pictures of fine-spun emotions.

Americans may not be cultured people in terms of classics, ethics or psychology; but they know life because they live it. They want their pictures in terms of life, instead of classics.

We have had in pictures the West, the East, the mountains, the Negro, the Chinese, etc. No human picture of any of these has yet failed; but every attempt is followed by imitators who use the same locale, a mechanical plot, three hundred and sixty-nine close-ups of some star, etc. The audience falls away, and the exhibitor probably cannot see the difference between the real picture and the mechanical.

To illustrate what is the matter with the movies.

I have been associated with college people all my life, and I have yet to meet the movie professor with the white hair, the benign, childish, helpless smile, the black cape and the large glasses.

Again: we show to a theater full of ex-cious "problems," etc.; but aren't we a little tired of such things? Furthermore, most of us doubt if there is in existence a really bad person; aren't they merely defective beings, or egotistic youngsters who need guiding?

The artist student first learns to draw pictures of classical faces which are mathematically perfect; and branches out into creative work, expressing his own ideas in individual faces.

The technical student first learns the great compositions, then begins to create along original lines.

The motion pictures have passed through the conventional purl of a star 'n a triangle 'n everything. We have established the principle of conflict, of thirty-six basic situations, of thirty-six emotions. We built for a long time on the formula: 'Make 'em laugh! Make 'em cry! Make 'em wait! Now we must proceed to more subtle emotion; our scale must have more than three notes.

When Katy ceases to be the well known and heavily advertised character who plays Katy O'Grady, not by subtle and announcement, but in character and mannerism, right down to the last detail of buttoning her dress as noticed in the various pictures; or do we? Then people will come back to the theater to see her.

Recently I overheard at a picture house: "The star must be a pupil of X, the director. He always teaches them how to walk that way." There is our trouble. Better that the character walk pigeon-toed or bowlegged, or any other way that would make her a character, and make her different from any one else in the world.

Writing and acting have been so standardized that the public appears to be tired of both.

Yet Griffith, Pickford and others in advance of their time continue to pack theaters with films which are histrionic in their originality. In fact, they have even touched the upper notes at times, and presented material for which the theater public is not yet quite ready.

HELP! HELP!

For the love of Little Rollo, what is it all about? It is whispered that a recent story was turned down by several of the large studios because they were "afraid of the censors!" It had been proclaimed by their own experts, "One of the strongest screen stories that ever passed through the departments!"

What a wicked story it must have been! Was it vulgar? Indecent? A sex play? Un-patriotic? A menace to public morals? No! It had in fact, they have even touched the upper notes at times, and presented material for which the theater public is not yet quite ready.

NEW STORY BY MORRIS

Gouverneur Morris is at present writing an original Chinese fantasy for the screen. It is called "What Ho!—the Cook," and will have an Oriental actor in the leading role. The story is being put into continuity by Ruth Wightman, who adapted Mr. Morris' other screen stories.

STUDIO CELEBRATION

The Realart Studio recently celebrated the completion of its new Number Four Stage. Those in charge of the affair included James Gilton, Production Manager; Mrs. Olden of the Property Department; William Ranft and Russell Pierce of the Property Department; and Ray Mercer of the Laboratory. Mr. Mercer provided an all-laboratory jazz band.

ROY HUGHES INJURED

While filming "The Oily Crooks," current comedy for Loganhuages Film Co., Roy Hughes, enacting the heavy, met with a severe accident.

It is expected, however, that Mr. Hughes will soon recover and reclaim his place before the camera.

METRO VISITORS

Judge Frederick Evan Crane, of the New York Court of Appeals, and George W. Baker, head of the New York shoe firm that bears his name, were visitors at Metro's Hollywood studios recently.

BELCHER BALLET SCHOOL FOR SAN FRANCISCO

Ernest Belcher, dance impresario, is surveying possibilities of the Bay district as the locale for a second school of ballet technique, at the invitation of private interests who offer capital for such an undertaking in that vicinity.

TO MANAGE LOEW THEATRE

Nat. Holt is to be the manager of the new Loew State Theatre, nearing completion at Seventh and Broadway.

Mr. Holt will take active charge on September 20th, and will arrange details for the formal opening, which it is expected will take place the first of November.

ORIGINAL SCREEN STORY

The literary partnership of Kennedy and Kennedy, composed of Clara Genevieve Kennedy, short story writer, and her sister, Edith Kennedy, scenarist, has turned out the story which Viola Dana is making entitled "Glass Houses."

MERMAIDS WIN BATHING PRIZES

Beth Darlington of the Hamilton-White Mermaid Comedies was awarded the first prize in the annual bathing suit parade held at Venice recently and the second prize was won by Melba Brownrigg, who has also appeared in pictures starring Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton.

C. Gardner Sullivan and Fred Nible have returned from a sojourn in San Francisco.

Harry "Stubb" Pollard and Director Charles Parrott of the Pollard Comedies, recently contributed twenty gallons of ice cream to the orphan children of the McKinley Home, summing at Del Rey.

ROACH TRAVELS EAST

Hal E. Roach has left on a four weeks' trip to New York, where he will transact business in connection with his productions.

THE ORIOLES AND WHERE TO FIND THEM

By Ernest Butterworth

Bill Ryno is with Pete Morrison. Ruth Handworth is doing a character part with Bebe Daniels at the Realart studio. Ernest Butterworth, Jr., has recently signed to play three pictures for the New Era Productions under the direction of Wilfred Lucas.

Charles Thurston is with Director Hall enacting the Sheriff in a boy scout story. Jane Crawley, Joe Hazelton, Jack Hassett, Ernest Butterworth, Ethel Kennedy, Miss Bennett, L. F. Bougardou, Ed Burns, Bob Burns and Fred Burns, Jack House, Jack Williams and Shorty Hendricks are with Russell Simpson at the Clermont studio.

A concert and dance will be held at the lodge rooms at 16th and Figueroa, Eagles Hall, commencing at 9:30, August 29, 1921. All Oriole who were at the initiation of officers at the Elks Club, and those who showed their willingness to join the Order, are especially invited to attend. An orchestra has been engaged, also an array of first class artists. Don't forget Monday evening.

STUDIO CLUB DANCE

A dance will be given at the Hollywood studios on the evening of September 9 for the benefit of the Hollywood Studio Club. Manager Bradford has donated the use of one of the stages for the gala event, of which Herbert Glennon is director.

The dance will mark the close of a campaign to raise $5,000, which will start September 1.

ACTRESSES ON CAMPING TRIP

Grace Darmond, Claire du Brey and a party of friends have gone on a 350-mile motor and camping trip to Pacific Grove, California. When Miss Darmond returns she will be starred in a picture by the Rockett Film Corporation.

Mary Miles Minter has returned from her European trip and will begin presently on her next production for Realart.

Alfred Allen and Robert Littlefield are two of those cast in "The Daughter of Brama," which Edward Sloman is directing for J. L. Frothingham Productions.

Dustin Farnum has recently completed his first picture as a Fox star, while Barbara Bedford is starting her initial starring vehicle for the same organization.

The Paramount pictureization of Rita Weiman's story, "Footlights," starring Elsie Ferguson, comes to Graman's Million Dollar Theatre the week of August 29th.

Announcement is made that C. Gardner Sullivan has renewed his contract with Thomas H. Ince. Mr. Sullivan's latest photoplay is "Hail the Woman," which is scheduled for an early release.

Jack Pitaun, who has been identified with the Morosco stock company, has joined the cast of the forthcoming Charles R. Deering production, entitled "The Curse of the Timberland."

John Griffith Wray, who directed "Hail the Woman," an Ince production, and Ralph Dixon, who is cutting the film, are on a holiday of two weeks pending the return of Thomas H. Ince to the studio.
Production Notes

HARMS WITH MEIGHAN
Lasky has engaged Mildred Harris to play opposite Thomas Meighan in "A Prince There Was," which Tom Forman is directing.

Milla Davenport

"MY BOY" WILL BE TITLE OF JACKIE'S NEW PICTURE
Jackie Coogan's forthcoming five reel photoplay is an original story, written by Jack Coogan, Sr., and Victor Heerman, Jackie's director, and is entitled "My Boy." Work on the new story has commenced at Brunton studios.

CUMMINGS' STORY FOR GIBSON
"The Badge of Fighting Hearts," by Ralph Cummings, which appeared recently in "Short Stories," has been purchased by Universal for Hoot Gibson. Mr. Cummings is also the author of "Where Men Are Men," William Duncan's first seven-reel special, which will soon be released by Vitagraph.

PLAYS TITLE ROLE
Lois Wilson will interpret the title role of "Miss Lulu Bett," the current William de Mille Lasky production.

KINEMA TO RUN HAMILTON-WHITE COMEDIES
The Kinema has contracted with Educational for the entire series of Hamilton-White comedies.

Little Jean O'Rourke has recovered from her recent illness and is back in pictures again.

FILM EXPOSITION LAUNCHED
Active preparations were launched this week for the first annual motion picture industry exhibit, the initial cinema exposition to be staged in America. It will be held in Los Angeles as the capital of the film world, and will be thrown open to the public early in January.

Frank B. Davison, exhibition executive, has been chosen director-general of the event by the officers of the Ethical Motion Picture Society of America, who are sponsoring the exhibit.

Already it has received the indorsement of Gov. Stephens of California, Mayor Cryer of Los Angeles, State Corporation Commissioner Bellow, Jonathan S. Dodge, State Bank Superintendent, State L. Criswell, president of the City Council, and R. F. McClellan, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, and the motion picture fraternity in general.

The exposition will give a dignified and comprehensive presentation of the motion picture industry in its relation to the economic, business and social conditions, locally and nationally.

The exhibit will present the motion picture industry from its inception to the present date, and its chief purpose will be to inspire better film standards and thereby lay deeper foundations for the nation's fastest growing industry.

The exposition is to be a non-stock, non-profit institution and no subscriptions or contributions will be authorized or accepted.

The officers of the Ethical Motion Picture Society of America are Edward S. Langley, art director for Douglas Fairbanks, president; Dr. John T. Thompson, first vice-president; Arthur P. Henderson, treasurer; Charles E. Sibert, executive secretary. The directors include Ray E. Nimmo, former president of the Los Angeles Advertising Club; William J. Palmer, Kimpson Ellis and A. Lincoln Hart.

A suitable site for the exposition will be selected, and as soon as this is decided upon contracts will be let for the erection of the buildings.

The exhibit will be maintained for thirty days, with a different feature attraction for each day.

NEW YORK BUSINESS TRIP
Adeline Alvord, who arranges the screen adaptations for many authors, has left for New York on a business trip. Ada McQuillan, assistant to Mrs. Alvord, will look after her business while she is away.

The chief character role in "The Daughter of Brahma" is to be taken by George Periolat. Mr. Periolat recently returned to the coast from Chicago.

Violet Schram has just finished the lead opposite William Fairbanks in his latest production, an untitled Western.

Jean Carpenter, who played the part of the blind child in Clara K. Young's latest picture, has been signed to play in George Beban's new production.

Foreign Atmosphere

that they missed the true Western atmosphere by a mile. It was not so much the mistake in the props, although these struck us like a wallop in the eye—the ridiculous part about it was in the way they acted and carried themselves.

If that film could be exhibited here in Hollywood to an audience of our motion picture producers, directors and stars (with reserved seats for the technical staffs) I believe that it would produce the biggest laugh of the year, but by that very token it might serve as a very good object lesson. The inevitable thought would come to some that it might behoove us to stop laughing at a moment at their well-meant, but grotesque, efforts to picture us, and see if the shoe doesn’t fit the other foot. What about our foreign settings, props, costumes, action? In this day of better pictures, of higher aims, of splendid efforts towards the truth and art on the screen, what about a correct atmosphere in our productions when it comes to anything foreign? May not some of our biggest and most praiseworthy efforts and our most costly productions lose a part of their value by inaccurate work along these lines?

Since my return to this country, after many years’ residence abroad, I have had some “wallops in the eye” that recall vividly the impressions of that French attempt to picture us. I have often experienced a real sense of loss when a splendid picture suddenly robs me of all illusion of reality by some careless foreign work. Without mentioning any names, why does a picture to us a castle, the like of which never existed in France or anywhere else in Europe? How came it that kissed his mother on the lips, when the original of the character never did that in his whole life? How could one kneel before the statue of the Virgin Mary without crossing herself? Why should—a war zone refugees look as though they were all dolled up for a Wednesday school picnic?

Why does—a village look as though it must have been constructed by someone who got his European atmosphere standing on the Brooklyn Bridge and watching the ships come in?

These are just a few random instances, but the problem goes far beyond that sort of thing. There seems to be a feeling in some quarters that all the foreign atmosphere that is needed has been secured if the actor knows how to kiss the lady’s hand and occasionally make a sort of jack-knife bow. The real difficulty, however, comes in picturing the action in little, simple things, such as a Bavarian peasant walking across a field. The problem of the English butcher with his uniform and side whiskers is one for the kindergarten class, but it takes more than a good guesser to picture a French workman eating his midday meal.

It must not be forgotten that our country is the melting pot for millions of foreign born, and that our audiences are largely made up of them and their direct descendants. Among those present will also be a scattering of the boys who were “over there,” and there will be some, like myself, who have lived and worked and played long enough abroad to know what’s what from over there. An unreal foreign atmosphere will make many of these feel as though they had a claim at the box office or in the studio for some small portion of the returns. We must not allow this to happen.

The people who become make believe becomes, and the only possible way to rid ourselves of such an intolerable, un-American situation, is to fight, and fight, and refuse to compromise.

Fortunately we can still write a screen story (unless a contrary ruling comes out within the next few days), and thrill our audiences with the gripping mystery of, “Who Slapped Little Rollo on the Wrist?” but, unfortunately, although some fearless producer might take a chance on it, the “dore peepul” won’t pay their hard-earned money to see such mush.

part, Fan Baxter, completes the opposition by swearing Sheldon’s life away.
Andrew Robson and Andrew Arbuckle also appear in correctly handled minor parts.
"Mother O’Mine" is an Associated Producers release.

"FOR THOSE WE LOVE"
California
Another Betty Compson starring vehicle is released locally this week. It is one of the several that she made independently for Goldwyn distribution prior to her Paramount contract, and it was directed by Arthur Rosson. The story, by Perley Poore Sheehan, is a more or less daggery, sentimental chronicle of the misfortunes of a small town family. It is neither cheerful enough for hot weather enjoyment nor sufficiently startling to render its tragedy enthralling.
However, it includes some very artistic photography, although the soft focus may be said to have been a little undone. Unfortunately there is an inexcusable amount of repetition in the subtitles that detracts from the entertainments.
The cast is probably the best thing about "For Those We Love," which, by the way, contains no star part worthy the name. Miss Compson plays a straight ingenue, Berenece Arnold, in the story. The girl has sympathy merely through the fact that her motives are misunderstood and her troubles many. She does nothing very courageous and has no important love interest. Even her footage is no more pronounced than that of several other characters. The part does nothing for Miss Compson; it is not even particularly suitable.
Trix Uller, a "hard boiled," but exceedingly human gambler, is very appealing in Lon Chaney’s hands. This performer’s characterizations never miss, no matter what their natures.
Walter Morosco plays a minor part, Johnny Fletcher, which is nevertheless the juvenile lead. He completely fails to recognize the several opportunities that he is allowed in his action, and insists upon playing incessantly over his left shoulder or rather through it. In exactly three shots did we locate his fully revealed face. Evidently inexperience occasioned this diffidence.
A really clever juvenile heavy is accomplished by Richard Rosson who plays Jimmy Arnold, a weakling. He uses his eyes skillfully and is ever alert for his points.
Harry Duffield in the role of the Arnold father, is well cast, as are Camille Astor in Vida, Frank Campeau as Frank, and Bert Woodruff who does Dr. Ballew. An exceptionally good bit of characterization must be credited to George Cooper, who is seen as Bert, a tramp.
Outside of the cast, "For Those We Love," has little to recommend an enthusiastic reception by the public.

May We Criticise the Critics?

It was recently our extreme misfortune to witness a first night showing of an extraordinarily poor production, the output of, however, one of our foremost picture-making companies. It was a dull, uninteresting effort in the farce direction that failed to produce one general laugh throughout its first performance. It was, therefore, a failure from the audience's standpoint; while, when we reproached them for their careless creation, members of its producing staff openly pronounced it a frightful "miss," the least of which said, the better.

And from the pens of the critics? Ah! That was different. Our various reviewers of the daily and trade press insisted, as is pretty much a habit with them, that our unhappy experience was "full of amusing situations that should prove a good summer attraction," that it was "a refreshing, human, good entertainment," "thoroughly satisfactory," etc. Even a more illustrious journal, which boasts as its slogan Ben Franklin's famous remark, "par- doning the bad is injuring the good," justified this particular UN-pardonable by labeling it "good entertainment" and offering it generously to all exhibitors.

What are we then to think of these discerning lights whose monotonous condemnation guides the poor trusting to their entertainment and grief? There is, indeed, much to think of their capacities, and several phrases of their surrounding limitations to consider before we attempt in justice to place the blame of their stereotyped falsifications.

Of course, it must be realized that the ordinary dramatic critic has the almost impossible to contend with. His employers refuse, in many cases, to allow him free range in his reviews, due to the fact that promiscuous "roasting" is altogether likely to drive out of their paper's columns highly profitable advertising from, in the case of the local newspaper, the theatres presenting the thus favored material, and in the instance of the trade weekly, the distributors of the pictures. General praise is therefore held to be an excellent business policy, no matter what its reaction upon a disillusioned public. The higher ups are willing to gamble, as they have since time immemorial, upon that dear public's tendency to believe implicitly all that it sees in print. And perhaps they are correct, at least, in great measure; for despite disillusionments four out of five of the gullibles return for more, although we can't believe they finish the phrase by "liking it;" besides which, there is always the other one.

Probably a more logical reason why our reviewers get off on the wrong foot, so to speak, with their criticisms, however, is that even if they were always accorded full swing in their departments, only a very small per cent would recognize an inferior picture if it were met face to face. This is proven by the fact that, given one the merit of which is questionable, they will almost invariably commence by worrying its corners or details, and complete the painful process by dodging the issue in a seeming panic at the idea of self-commission. There is much cleverness among our newspaper circles, but it does not follow that the most proficient reporter understands the drama, characterization, or even screen proportion. It might be a timely addition to hazard that neither does the office boy, in whom the authority to judge has been known to have been invested.

Far more stringent requirements for the picture education of the individuals who aspire to these positions should be in existence, for besides the material harm to any paper, resultant of the already mentioned mistrust, even disgust, created at least in some portion of the public's mind by deliberate misstatements, there are, especially with regard to the local situation, other considerations.

If the mediocre and more unworthy hangers on in this industry are to receive equal as much press attention as our sincere artists, the picture business is being injured materially, for due to even such passing influences, we will be longer in ridding our circles of the debris which seems inevitably present in all young institutions, while it is scarcely encouraging to the deserving workers that their reward for effort should be coached in stock phrases setting forth "the same old thing" that anyone might have had.

When our critics are generally reliable and trained in that which they attempt; when they can say with justification, "Your work is good; yours, inexcusable;" an advancement will have taken place which today is scarcely imaginable.—F. R.

"The Three Musketeers"

Mission

The much heralded and long anticipated Douglas Fairbanks screen presentation of Alexandre Dumas' "The Three Musketeers," has arrived for the edification of Los Angeles' entertainment seekers and literary specialists, and it is here to be fairly proclaimed among the year's best, in addition to which it marks the greatest height yet reached by the costume play. Doug's fans will instantly recognize it as incomparably superior to "The Mark of Zorro," which they hailed so enthusiastically a while back, and his professional brothers will see in it a magnificent achievement for which its creator's extreme generosity to his superb cast has been largely responsible.

Edward Knoblock's adaptation of the charming old work is ideal, and we can point to no one who could have accomplished its direction with as much art and grace as has Fred Niblo, whose supreme work it is. Excellent photography by Robert Edeson completes the technical perfection of this masterpiece.

All of the performers judge cleverly the liberties at their disposal in these wonderful old French court characters, and claim them delightfully in a manner which, (Continued on page 15)

NORMA TALMADGE BEGINS "SMILIN' THROUGH"

Norma Talmadge has started production on "Smilin' Through," in which she will play the part which Jane Cowl interpreted on the speaking stage. Sidney A. Franklin is directing Miss Talmadge in this play by Allen Longden Martin, which was picturized by James Ashmore Creelman and Mr. Franklin.

Harrison Ford will be seen in support of the star.

FINIS FOX TO FEATURE LIVINGSTON

Jack Livingston is to be featured by the Finis Fox Productions in a series of five-reel Northwestern stories to be written and directed by Mr. Fox. Ethel Shannon, George Cummings and Kitty Bradbury will have prominent parts in the cast of the first picture.

Associated with Mr. Fox are Jack Livingston, George Cummings, Anthony Kornman and Thomas J. Smeddick.

NEW YORK PRESENTATION FOR FERBER STORY

"No Woman Knows," Tod Browning's Universal-Jewel production of Edna Ferber's novel, "Fanny Herself," is scheduled for a Broadway run, beginning September 4th in the Central Theatre, Broadway and Forty-Seventh Street, and will be followed by "Foolish Wives," the von Stroheim production recently completed at Universal City.

DE MAUPASSANT STORY PATH RELEASE

Pathé has selected Guy de Maupassant's "The Orderly," pictured in France, for release in this country.

Among those playing the leading characters are K. Kolas, Mme. Nathalie Kovanko, Russian artist, and Paul Hubert.

The date of release will be announced shortly.

RAY AGAIN DIRECTING

Charles Ray is personally directing his latest photoplay, "The Deuce of Spades," assisted by Al Ray. This Van Loan story was adapted for the screen by Richard Andres.

PACIFIC FILM CO. NOTES

T. E. Hancock, one of the executive heads of the Pacific Film Co., has arrived at the studios, after an absence of seven months in the east, with a contract which calls for fifty-two single-reel comedies during the year. These are being filmed one each week, with George Ovey and Vernon Dent as the alternating stars. Milton H. Fahnney is directing.

George Silcox, special representative for the Pacific Film Co., is on his way to New York, where he will superintend releases for his producing units.

NEW WESTERNS

Madoc Productions has secured Dixie Bain for its series of twenty-six two-reel westerns.

The first story will be "The Rose of the West," written by Mr. Devere, and which will be directed by Wayne Mack, assisted by Devere.

"Smub" Pollard began production recently on a new comedy as yet untitled.

RAWLINSON STARTS

Herbert Rawlinson will start on his first Universal starring vehicle this week, with Jack Conway directing.

AT LASKY'S

George Melford is engaged in cutting his production, "The Mountain," featuring Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino.

Gloria Swanson is expected to begin work on Clara Beranger's original story, "The Husband's Trademark," which Sam Wood will direct and Thompson Buchanan supervise. Lorna Maro wrote the scenario.

Ethel Clayton is working under Paul Powell's direction in "The Cradle," by Eugene Brieux, which Olga Printzlau arranged for the screen.

Agnes Ayres is preparing to begin work under the direction of Victor Fleming on Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Lane That Had No Turning." This has been adapted to the screen by Sir Gilbert Parker, and Eugene Mullin and Rollin Sturges will supervise.

AT REALART

Mary Miles Minter is working on the opening scenes of her forthcoming picture under the direction of Frank Urson.

Wanda Hawley has started work on a production from a material story that has yet untitled, the scenario of which has been prepared by Percy Heath. Thomas N. Heffron will direct.

AT GOLDWYN

The photography of "Grand Larceny" will be finished presently under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Rowland V. Lee is completing the final scenes of "His Back Against the Wall," featuring Raymond Hatton.

PARAMOUNT ENLARGES STAFF

Latest to desert metropolitan newspaper offices for the motion picture studio are Tom McNamara of Skinny Shaner fame, and Clive Weed, formerly cartoonist of the New York Evening Sun and other papers. McNamara and Weed are now on the staff of Paramount.

TO DISTRIBUTE FOR INDEPENDENTS

That Vitagraph will distribute productions for independent producers is the announcement made by W. S. Smith, general manager of the West Coast studios.

MORE FEATURE PRODUCTIONS FOR BRUNTON

M. C. Levee, vice-president and business manager of the Robert Brunton studios, has left for New York to arrange contracts for feature productions to be made on the Brunton lot.

IRVIN V. WILLAT TO WORK AT GOLDWYN

The new Irvin V. Willat studio at Culver City is closed, Mr. Willat having completed his contract for W. H. Hodkinson.

Goldwyn has engaged Willat to direct a Chinese mystery story from the pen of Gouverneur Morris.

DUNCAN ON NEW ONE

William Duncan and Edith Johnson have completed arrangements for the making of "The Come Back," a J. Raleich Davies story, in which they will co-star.

Willie Mae Carson is playing opposite "Ranger Bill" Miller in his latest Northwest Mounted Police story, nearing completion.

Current Reviews

“FOOTLIGHTS”

Grauman's

Stories of the fairy world of make-believe that are always fascinating things to absorb, whether they be on the printed page or across the silver screen. Because, due to humanity's dramatic instinct, this is a fact, Paramount's screen version of Rita Weiman's "Footlights" is bound to prove more beguiling than several of Essie Ferguson's recent star-studded vehicles. Another point in this production's favor is that by treating of the success of a little New Englander who, after a dream for the lack of appeal with which her star comes, in a moment, as it were, an elaborate foreign artiste, it necessarily provides many legitimate opportunities for the utilization of the emotionalism which is strictly "of" its star. If there ever was an ideal role for an actress to play it must be the actress that she is superb in a denomander that will both amuse and delight the professional probably more than any other. She should do more of such work and she should have often such sensitive directors as John Robertson, the man who guided "Sentimental Tommy" to the celluloid. As might be anticipated, he displays his excellent sense of proportion again in this picture. Without overstepping the drama's bounds, he yet spends unsparring, when and where it is needed, much wholesome comedy. He has watched his production's technique carefully and as a result he has a more than interesting mixture of work to which Ray Overbaugh's photography has added a good finishing touch.

Chief in Ferguson's support is Marc McDermott, who does not, however, play the sympathetic male lead. All of this actor's fineness which we have so long admired goes into his creation of Oswald Kane, a theatrical producer to whom art is the ultimate. Without being played heavily at all, Kane probably controls the opposition. The most in an atmosphere of tenderness, subtlety and world wisdom is won by McDermott for the character.

Probably it is the story arrangement that is to blame for the lack of appeal which surrounds Reginald Denny's juvenile, Brett Page. The young fellow himself neglects nothing that is allowed him but he isn't played up for much sympathy. At that, one half of the audience will never realize its absence and the other half will not require it. One thing, however, which certainly strengthens the opposing forces and completes the list of more important players is Adolph Zukor, present this Easter made Famous Players-Lasky production.

"BEATING THE GAME"

California

Much more successful than his recent comedy sallies in the great campaign for public favor is Paramount's "Beating the Game," a Charles Kenyon photo just released by Goldwyn. Being a story of a hypochondriac who sells himself on the "honesty" idea which he has been preaching to others with an ulterior motive, this is a comedy drama that will entertain the most exacting, while proving a knockout to the average fan. Provided as it is with at least three novel twists, all of which are handled in a cleverly disguised manner that may be depended upon to disclose to very few the outcome of the plot, "Beating the Game" gains commendation for its director, Victor Schertzinger. It holds many a good laugh but its serious thread is stout enough to maintain a genuine interest throughout the unreeling of the play.

Jane Starr

Who is playing Dolly Demere, the vaudeville actress in "Danger Ahead" at the Supraba Theatre. Miss Starr is now under the management of John Lancaster.

"Fancy" Charlie, a nimble-fingered thief, who undertakes an honest man's position for a six month's space only to become exceedingly and different from the "old world"-wise, Hazy Daly, who, as is evident throughout her footage, exerted as much intellect upon this simple role and its comparatively few points as she would have used in dispatching one with three times its weight. There is much in promise for those who give their best uninfluenced to whatever piece of business happens at hand.

Dick Rosson, in another weakening heavy, Ben Fanchette, is a good touch to this story of crooks and others; while De Witt Jennings in C. B. Lawson, the plod's enigma man, is responsible for two or three near-thrills.

"Slipper" Jones, Charlie's literal partner in crime, is competently done by Nick Oggley, as are Jules Fanchette and his wife, by Tom Ricketts and Lydia Knott.

Lydia Yeaman's Titus and William Orlando complete the cast.

"Beating the Game's" very pleasing photography is to the credit of Ernest Miller, who has gotten much of interest into his work here.

Eddie Lyons is making his second situation comedy at the Berwilla studios for Arrow release.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE LAW

Kinema

The Arrow Film Corporation publishes a filmed James Oliver Curwood story entitled "God's Country and the Law" of this time. The statement that this picture is interesting or impressive even in the stereotyped sense is far too much to be quite fair for. On the other hand to say that it were insulting to the intellect of the modern cinema audience might be unfair to the intent of the story producers who produced it, and too much to claim for the masses; therefore, it remains only for us to remark that this is an attempt at the "old time thriller," while achieving no resemblance to any phase of life as it is and a tale which is repulsive in many instances. (The villain's advances upon the feminine members of the cast, for example, are too obvious to be especially delicate.) About its only wholesome content is the effective Northwest scenery that nevertheless can not redeem the "filmed" plot decorated by it. Whatever Chauncey Olcott was doing, with the direction of this film in his hands, we have been unable to say. Nothing can be said, however, that he didn't make much of a picture. The camera work varies dec lies.

By far the most natural performance in the cast is the one offered by Gladys Leslis in the role of Marie, an impetuous, whimsical child-wife who is the forest. Miss Leslie possesses much charm and her character is at least consistent and imaginarily.

The brutal heavy, Dore, a whiskey runner, is scarcely that. He is extravagantly done by William H. Tooker, who even approaches the laughable once or twice with the part.

Another melodramatic but apparently well intentioned performer, Fred Jones, enacts Andre, Marie's hot blooded young husband. He is also capable of being rather funny in places.

Cesare Gravina really appears to be in his element as 'Polian, a French gypsy of the north, and he is convincing in the part as much cannot be claimed for Hope Sutherland who does his half breed daughter. Miss Sutherland is effective but lacks the many affections as she is given footage to display in.

Truly such pictures, if they must be made, should never be reviewed. It is hard on all concerned.

"WITHOUT BENEFIT OF CLERGY"

Symphony

Pathé presents Robert Brunton's production of Rudyard Kipling's East Indian story, "Without Benefit of Clergy," here at this time. This photo play, although a little draggy in spots, and containing subject matter which is heavier than the public will generally enjoy, we believe, is interesting throughout, and includes some very superior performances.

James Young's careful direction has done much improving on the scenario, which starts off a bit incoherently, and Charles Kaufman and Arthur Todd have provided some excellent photography.

Virginia Brown Faire is seen in Ameera, the leading feminine role. She is exceptionally human and fundamentally eastern as the native who ardently loves a white man and their happy bae. Miss Faire gives promise of an unusual screen career.

Eddie Holding is present as lead and king, John Holden, a construction engineer, is also ample, while a truly beautiful piece of characterization is the portrayal of Evelyn Selbie, who portrays the role of (Continued on Page 15)

MENJOU IN SCREEN VERSION OF "A TAILOR MADE MAN"

Adolphe Menjou will enact an important role in "A Tailor Made Man," soon to go under production. Mr. Menjou's recent pictures have been "Queenie," with Shirley Mason; "Through the Back Door," with Mary Pickford; "The Three Musketeers," with Douglas Fairbanks, and George Melford's "The Sheik."

IN FARNUM PICTURE

Evelyn Seebie has been engaged by Fox for an important role in Dustin Farnum's forthcoming production. Miss Seebie may now be seen as the Hindu mother in Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy," playing at the Symphony.

NEW COMEDY INGENUE

Buster Keaton will introduce a new ingénue in his next comedy, Sybil Seely, former bathing girl. Miss Seely will be remembered as the comedian's leading lady on his advent into stardom more than a year ago.

STANDING SUPPORTS TALMADGE

Wynndam Standing has been chosen to enact one of the principal roles in "Smilin' Through," the current Norma Talmadge production.

MARYLAND MORNE JOINS WALSH'S CAST

Art Lee has completed his engagement with the Ferdinand Earle Productions.

Max Linder is giving his new picture, "Be My Wife," another cutting at the Goldwyn studio.

Wade Boteler has been given a part in "His Back Against the Wall," under production at Goldwyn.

William E. Keefe, formerly with Geo. Kern Productions, has moved his offices to the Brunton lot.

Billy Eugene McClellan is at present playing "Jim" in "The Wall Flower," which E. Mason Hopper is directing for Goldwyn.

Starke Patterson is supporting Mary McAvoy in "The Mavis of Marcus," under William Taylor's direction at Lasky's.

Tom Kennedy has been engaged by Hamilton-White Comedies, Inc., to support Lloyd Hamilton in his latest two-reeler for Educational.

Fanny Stockbridge has been added to the cast of "The Wall Flower," in which Elliott Dexter and Claire Windsor have the leading roles.

Gus Leonard, Bert Oppford and William Courtright are among those cast in "The Deuce of Spades," Charles Ray's present production.

INGRAM CAST COMPLETE

With the selection of Betty Allen for a part in "Turn to the Right," Rex Ingram has completed the cast for his new Metro production.

VALLI SIGNS WITH LYTTEL COMPANY

Virginia Valli has been engaged to enact a leading role with Bert Lytell in the Veiller production of "The Right That Failed." Miss Valli has recently finished work in a Goldwyn production.

Lillian Leighton plays a comedy role in "Rent Free," Wally Reid's next starring picture.

Thomas L. McNally is at present photographing the Campbell Comedies on the old Griffith lot.

Mary Huntress has signed to support Herbert Rawlinson in his forthcoming starring vehicle.

Andrew Arbuckle and Lincoln Plumer have been given parts in "The Deuce of Spades," starring Charles Ray.

Lillian Guenther recently completed a course in the Grand Avenue School and is back in pictures again.

Miriam Batiste will play an important part in the forthcoming Norma Talmadge picture entitled "Smilin' Through."

Jack House will play the lead in "The Rose of the West," which Wayne Mac is producing for Madoc Productions.

Henry Herbet has been cast as the heavy in "The Come Back," a forthcoming Vitaphone production co-starring Wm. Duneen and Edith Johnson.

Sidney D'Albrook is at present playing Archie Warner, the juvenile lead, in Peter B. Kyne's "Motion to Adjourn," a Ben Wilson production.

Marjorie Prevost has been engaged to enact one of the principal roles in Charles Ray's forthcoming picture entitled "The Deuce of Spades."

Rush Hugh, Dana Todd and Emily Rait are cast in "The Wall Flower," the Rupert Hughes story which E. Mason Hopper is directing for Goldwyn.

Frank E. Berier, Xavier Muchado, Paul Dellefow and Flora Smith are artists associated with Mr. Earle in the filming of his "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

Joan Melville, Eva Lewis, Ernest Butterworth and Jack House are among those cast in the untitled two-reel Western being filmed by the Madoc Productions at Keen's Camp.

William Christy Cabanne, Robertson-Cole director, is working in the East on "The Barricade," from the novel by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, author of "The Wonder Man."

Bebe Daniels gave an informal dinner dance recently for Nina Wilcox Pumnun, authoress. Among those present were Harold Lloyd, Lida Lee, May Allison, Adela Rogers St. John and Edward Martindale.

Three-year-old Muriel Frances Dana, "Cupid" in "Mother O' Mine," and who appeared in person recently at the Kinema Theatre, has been chosen for an important part in "White Hands," a Max Graf production being filmed in San Francisco.
How Come?

A one-act play adapted from the notorious work entitled: "Watcha Done to My Story?"

(The curtain rises disclosing a studio editor's office. As usual it is set with a battered, wooden table, soap-box seats and a receptacle on the floor containing sawdust. A faint odor of mingled chewing tobacco and cloves is to be detected. A medley of reading and editing persons, both male and otherwise, hang around limply and sporadically, awaiting the arrival of the Big Chief.)

Bingem (He of the horn-rim glasses): "Well, what are we here for? The boss sure done a fine job pulling me away from my continuity when I only got a month to grind it out. Gee! How can a gink with my temperament do good work when I'm interrupted all the time?"

Alys (It was "Alice" when she was a school teacher): "And my reading! O dear! It does break into one's higher thought to be forced to lay down one's story, just as one's visualization is at its height."

Rumble (he always does): "You two certainly have been handled rough. I agree that you should not have been sent for."

Bingem and Alys (simultaneously): "Just what do you mean by that?"

Rumble (grinning): "Nothing; merely nothing."

(They are interrupted as the Big Chief crawls in at a side window, well out of breath. He has made a sneaky exit from his auto in the back alley, has scaled the studio fence and wormed his way by devious routes to his office, in order to escape the gate man, shine boy, janitor, extras, actors and others who are laying for him with their daily scenarios.)

Big Chief (panting): "Well, let us get down to business. Miss Smyth, read the story we are to consider today."

Alys (It used to be Smith): "You told me to write a brief synopsis."

Chief: "Well, let's hear it."

Alys (rustling herself and paper a little): "John Mitchell, King of Wall street, enters library—finds safe open—dead man lying in front safe—calls Bryce, detective, and they look at body—it is long-absent, wayward son of Mitchell—boy, on downward path, has sneaked in, opened safe—found it was his own father's—streak of manhood flares and son kills himself to propitiate the honor of the family name."

Chief: "Well; proceed."

Alys (a little indignant): "That's all."

Rumble: "Haw! Haw!"

Chief (sharply): "Why the merriment, Mr. Rumble? Miss Smyth's synopsis is quite satisfactory."

Rumble (still laughing): "I meant no offense to Miss Smyth. I was just wondering what his head wrote this ancient, trite, dyspeptic—"

Alys (interrupting scornfully): "I want you to understand, Mr. Rumble, that the story was the work of one of our most eminent authors."

Bingem (recovering from his daze): "Why, after we did that story in the old Blo, although there was more meat to it. We put it on in one reel. Motorman wrote it, as I remember."

Bingem (Rumble): "What will be all. This is the story we are going to do. It is one of the Ten best stories of the year, selected by a national committee of note."

Alys (rather said): "Anyway, the author's name ought to put it over. Now come on with your suggestions."

Alys (who has sat up most of the night to dope it out): "It has just occurred to me that we might open it with a gorgeous sunrise in the high Rockies. The silent places, you know; God's own altar and all of that, representing the dawn of life; purity."

Bingem (excitedly): "I got it! I got it! We'll open it up fast and furious. Iris in with the Kid—old man's son, you know—in the rocks, wearing mask, silhouetted as it were, working two fast Celts against a posse. That is the stuff the people want now."

Chief (trying to work out a think himself): "It seems to me—"

Rumble (interrupting): "If you'll excuse me, Chief, I wish to make a suggestion. Let's make the Wall street king a lumberjack and let his erring son return just in time to save the judge's daughter from the break of a log-jam. You see the judge would put the kid on probation and the girl would conclude his regeneration."

Alys (nose getting red): "I thought I was called away from my very important work to have a part in this conference."

Bingem (without noticing): "If we could adopt Rumble's suggestion, but switch the father to the role of a Gypsy chief, I know some of the good stuff the motorman put in his story. It was—"

Chief: "Never mind the motorman's story, Mr. Bingem. We are considering fixation written by a very famous author now. Miss Smyth, I will ask for your suggestions."

Alys: "I cannot agree with you men at all. I think we should begin with the girl we are going to put in the story. Let her come from a convent, all unsophisticated, and meet up with some big, strong man who causes her to be afraid. In the end let her grow into the masterful role while the man—representing all mankind."

Rumble: "Haw! Haw! Excuse me, I was thinking of a funny story that Elmer Harris told me yesterday."

Chief (showing sudden interest): "That so? Let's—that is, I think we have discussed the synopsis sufficiently. I will now excuse you, Miss Smyth."

(Alys rises, dabs some powder on her nose, feels of her back hair and exits.)

Chief (eagerly): "Well, come on with the story."

(Rumble begins the story to sneaky music and a slow curtain)

AND WHEN

When the story is ready for filming, it is announced under the title of "He Loved Her So" adapted from the famous novel, "The Storm."

The story now runs somewhat after this fashion:

A wood chopper and his wife have a beautiful daughter. She is the one rare beautiful flower amid the rough people of that mountainous section. None but the chopper and his wife know that the girl is not their daughter, but was left in the hollow of a tree, when an infant, to be taken home by the honest toiler.

It has been their life worry that someone might come to deprive them of the darling they have learned to love. A youthful woodchopper, named Tom King, a handsome, stalwart youth, loves the girl.

But, one day, a whirling is heard on the breezes and a beautiful airplane slips from the sky and alights near the cabin.

Of course a handsome city youth steps from the plane. Then he and the beautiful bird-maiden are confronting each other. Besides these characters, the story also carries two aunts, a gruff, eccentric uncle, a Chinaman comedy relief, a villain and 48 extras.

Such trifles in the original story as the Wall street king; the wayward son; the busted safe; the heroic suicide, have been cut out.

Has it ever happened to you?

Well, mustn't let little things like that disturb you.

WIFE AGAINST WIFE RELEASED

Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announces that it has bought the distribution right and will release on September 12th, Whitman Bennett's personally supervised production, "Wife Against Wife," adapted to the screen from George Broadhurst's stage play, "The Price," in which Pauline Stark, Percy Marmont, and Emily Fitzroy play the leading roles.

"Wife Against Wife" was secured by Dorothy Farnum and photographed by Ernest Haller.
CLIFFORD ROBERTSON OPENS INDEPENDENT CASTING OFFICE

Clifford Robertson, after four years as casting director for Goldwyn, has tendered his resignation to that organization, which same will take effect at the expiration of his contract on September first. Mr. Robertson will assume similar duties with the newly organized firm of Robertson & Webb, in which he is partner with Eugene Webb, Jr., president of the Culver City Commercial and Savings Bank. Clarke Irvine, publicity director, is also associated with the new company.

This new outfit will do casting directly for studios and independent producers, both here and in New York, transferring players east and west as needed. In addition, management of stars and directors, representation for authors, extensive exploitation, and general film management will be undertaken.

AFFILIATED PICTURE INTERESTS PLAN GET-TOGETHER DINNERS

Prominent clergyman, business and professional men will be invited to foregather at a series of dinners planned for a better mutual understanding, through a move made by the Board of Directors of the Affiliated Picture Interests of the Los Angeles Athletic Club recently.

Arrangements for the first of the dinners were placed in the hands of a committee, of which Glenn Harper and Ted Taylor are members. Further details will be announced soon.

GOLDWYN FOSTERS SCENARIO CONTEST

The Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, in cooperation with a Chicago daily newspaper, has inaugurated a moving picture scenario contest, national in its scope, at the close of which will be awarded $30,000 in prizes to the writers of the thirty-one best scenarios entered.

Goldwyn will produce the prize winning scenario as a big special production. The contest will close November 1st.

The judges will be Samuel Goldwyn, D. W. Griffith, Charles Chaplin, Norma Talmadge, Max Reinhardt, Rupert Hughes, Gertrude Atherton, Gouverneur Morris and Amy Leslie.

ARBUCKLE'S LATEST FOR GRAUMAN'S ANNUAL PARAMOUNT WEEK

In honor of the fourth annual Paramount week, beginning September 5th, Sid Grauman will present Boscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle in the national premiere of "Gasoline Gus," adapted from the Saturday Evening Post stories, "Trycheck Charlie" and "Gasoline Gus," by George Patullo.

Lila Lee, who has appeared opposite Mr. Arbuckle in his two last Paramount pictures, "The Dollar a Year Man" and "Crazy to Marry," will be seen in a like position in this picture.

IN PREPARATION

Clara Beranger leaves for New York presently where she will prepare William De Mille's next production following the one now in work, after which she will return to the Lasky studio.

Max David Kirkland has written the screen version of Myrtle Reed's story, "The Sign of the Jack o' Lantern," which Lloyd Ingraham will direct as a forthcoming feature.

STAGE ENGAGEMENT FOR SALISBURY

Monroe Salisbury, before he starts his second independent production, will play a short stage engagement in San Francisco.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

HELENE CAVELRY

Helene Cavelry commenced her dramatic career with the Crescent Stock Company in Brooklyn, with which organization she played ingenues for several years. Her picture debut occurred on our coast in a Loisy picture, which was followed by several for that concern.

This actress, who later played with May Allison in 'Extravagance,' and Bill Hart in 'Travelin' On,' is now supporting Mary Philbin in a Universal production.

There is always room in this business for clever newcomers.

CHAPLIN, FAIRBANKS AND PICKFORD ON LONDON TRIP

Charlie Chaplin's much-talked-about pleasure trip to his native England will be shared by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, who will join him in New York.

CERCLE FRANCAISE

The French actors and actresses in studios releasing through First National have organized a Cercle Francaise, of which Mrs. Mauer, of the R. A. Walsh company, George Rizard, Charles Ray's cameraman, and Gaston Glass, of the John M. Stahl "The Song of Life" company, are members.

NEW POLICY FOR CLUNE'S

W. H. Clune will inaugurate a new policy in connection with his Clune's Broadway Theater, starting September 3rd, when he will offer Neil Shipman's latest production, "The Girl from Vermont." Under the new program, arrangements have also been made whereby Mr. Clune will secure first release of the F. B. Warren productions, which include screen plays directed by Lois Weber, Reginald Barker, Victor Schertzinger, Lambert Hillyer, and others.

"Hamilton-White Night" will be celebrated at the Venice Ballroom September 9th, in honor of the company's bathing girls, who won first and second prizes in the annual bathing suit parade held at the beach city recently. The hall will be appropriately decorated, and a program is being arranged by the beach management.

Mrs. Ben Hopkins, of Denver, is at the Hollywood Hotel for a short stay.

Erie Williams has returned from a two weeks' sojourn at Catalina. Mr. Williams recently finished production of "Lucky Carson."

Lois Zeliner has completed the continuity of Jackie Coogan's "My Boy," and is preparing an original screen story soon to be filmed.

Frank Smith, assistant manager of Vitagraph, and his brother, Steve Smith, cameramen, have returned from a hunting trip in Northern California.

"The Vagrant" and "For Land's Sake," Mermaid Comedies, are scheduled for an early showing at the Kinetra, this theater having contracted for the entire series.

Virginia Adair is playing opposite Big Boy Williams in "The Curse of the Timberland," the third production of the Charles F. Seelinger Productions, Inc., to be released thru the Aywon Film Corp. of New York City.
Production Notes

"MY LADY O' THE PINES," NEW HOL-MAN DAY TWO-REEL DRAMA.

"My Lady o' the Pines" is the latest of the Holman Day stories of the Maine woods to reach the screen, and has been scheduled for release by Pathe September 11th. Mr. Day supervised the production which was directed by Philip Carle. The title role is played by Mary Astor, winner of a recent beauty contest; and Huntley Gordon plays the leading masculine role.

ROACH SHIPMENTS

KINEMA THEATRE ANNOUNCES NEW POLICY

The West Coast Theatres, Inc., states that their first-run house, the Kinema Theatre, will not hereafter confine its screen presentations to the First National program alone, but will run the output of various other distributors. Among these bookings are the W. K. Ziegfeld feature, "The Black Panther's Cub," starring Florence Reed, and the Warner Bros.' release, "Schooldays," featuring Wesley Barry.

JOHN Bowers Enters Yacht Race

Arrangements are being made for the race around Catalina Island for the Commodore Cup Series, the Newport Yacht Club. Among the contestants will be John Bowers, Goldwyn leading man, owner of the Una-cas.

ONLY ONE UNIVERSAL STARRING PICTURE

Len Chaney, of "The Miracle Man," "The Penalty," "Outside the Law," etc., denies the report that he is to star in a series of pictures for the Universal Company. Mr. Chaney has been engaged by that company for one picture only, owing to the fact that he is arranging to appear in other productions, and is also considering proposals to head his own company.

EASTERN TRIP

Ray L. Manker, Vice-President of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, left recently for Chicago and New York, where he will confer with national book and magazine publishers—and complete arrangements for branch offices.

"PINCHED," RE-ISSUED HAROLD LLOYD COMEDY

"Pinched" is the latest re-issued one-reel Harold Lloyd comedy which has been selected by Pathe for release presently. Bebe Daniels plays opposite Lloyd, and "Snub" Pollard, featured in Hal Roach comedies, is his running mate in the offering.

NEW "U" SALES HEAD

Charles Rosenweig, heretofore sales manager for Jewel and features in the Big "U" (New York) branch exchange of the Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., has been made General Sales Manager, and hereafter will have complete charge of the Universal sales force in the New York territory.

STEWART DIRECTOR UNANNOUNCED

Anita Stewart will return to Los Angeles around October 1st, to begin "Rose O' the Sea," for First National. Miss Stewart's director has not yet been chosen.

Otto Fries

ACTORS DISCARDING DERBY BonNET IN AUTO

"The automobile is blamed for the downfall of the derby lid. Formally when the driver of a car wore a derby it was apt to be denied when his machine hit the bumps. Also, when getting in or out of the car he was apt to lose his derby bonnet in the doorway. Furthermore, if a man pulled his derby over his ears in a high wind he might have to soak his head or use a shoe horn to remove it. So the fedora and the golf cap gradually took the place of the derby. The automobile has been of some service, after all."—From Muller Bros. House Organ.

JUANITA HANSEN ON PANTAGES CIRCUIT

Juanita Hansen, the serial star, has signed a contract to play fourteen weeks in vaudeville on the Pantages circuit. She is appearing in a single turn, devised by herself.

"The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry"

INDUSTRY'S DECISION TO ENTER POLITICAL COMES LIKE BOMB TO NEW YORK ASSEMBLY

From Moving Picture World

Announcement that every candidate for the New York State Assembly this fall will be required to go on record as to whether or not he favors censorship of motion pictures, came like a bomb to the assemblymen and others about the State Capitol. Albany the past week, and caused considerable consternation among those who would much prefer to "straddle the fence" rather than to openly commit themselves up or down on a subject which probably before an election which even this early gives every promise of being warmly contested. Several of the joint legislative committees, popularly known as the "censorship committees," are meeting these days at irregular intervals at the State Capitol, with the result that bills are littering the Assembly floor.

There is no question but that there will be many changes in the make-up of the New York State Assembly next January. It was in this body that the Clayton censorship bill originated, although later on Senator Clayton and R. Lusk, leader in the upper house, assumed an interest in the measure, at least to the extent that it was later on known as the Lusk bill. Anyhow, Assemblyman Walter Clayton and nearly 150 other men are on the way not in stone unturned in their various districts to assure a return to the Assembly next November.

In some districts, such as that from which Theodore Roosevelt comes, and where resignations have occurred, there will be new candidates to fill seats vacated by old hands. Through out the state there will be hostile contested primary elections.

The fact that the industry is to take an active part this fall in New York State politics in an effort to do away with omnibus censorship, is an item of much interest to members of the film industry and to the great power of the screen. It will be remembered that the censorship bill was only passed in the Assembly last April during the closing hours of the final day, and then only after the hardest sort of a struggle, during which several hours were spent in vain attempts to get the final "power that be" in a position to trust matters to a show-down in the way of a vote.

Had it not been that the censorship bill was one of Governor Miller's priorities—at least at that time—-it would never have passed. Since the legislature closed, there has been much talk in the New York film界 which has come out openly and declared that he was sorry that he had ever voted for the measure. It is whispered that H. Edmund Machold, an assemblyman, and who will again be in a position to rule next winter, has been heard to remark that the bill was a foolish one. His opinion the governor has since been sorry that it was passed. The very delay that characterized the state chief executive in signing the bill 14 days after its passage, goes far toward substantiating the allegations on the part of Mr. Machold.

At any rate, the motion picture industry is getting off with a smart start, something which was lacking last year and which might have been powerful enough to have killed the bill had a Coalition government, goes far toward substantiating the allegations on the part of Mr. Machold.

The three candidates for the Capitol will start, something which was lacking last year and which might have been powerful enough to have killed the bill had a Coalition government, goes far toward substantiating the allegations on the part of Mr. Machold.

The three candidates for the Capitol will start, something which was lacking last year and which might have been powerful enough to have killed the bill had a Coalition government, goes far toward substantiating the allegations on the part of Mr. Machold.

Some of the legislators back at the Capitol last week made no bones in saying that the New York State Motion Picture Commission was altogether too exacting in demanding an elimination of the bathing girls in the Pathé News. In fact, these legislators declared that when they voted for the bill last April, it was with the understanding that news weeklies would not only be banned from carrying any of the burlesque pieces in which the commission has seen fit to impose, following a ruling that it is claimed has been made by the attorney general himself.

If the film industry is successful in securing a written declaration from each candidate as to their viewpoint on motion picture censorship, and then backing those who are opposed to censorship, a big point will be gained before the ballots are cast, and the attitude of the entire body will be virtually known, and it will be a comparatively easy matter to either amend the present censorship law or introduce and pass a bill which will bring about the abolition of the commission next July.

In accordance with Governor Miller's plan of economy, the Board of Estimate and Control is now using a force of eight investigators in better ascertaining just exactly why and where so much money is spent. It may be possible that one of these investigators will attach himself to the Motion Picture Commission for a few days in making inquiry as to what salaries are paid to this or that one, their qualifications for the job, and if not this labor justifies the amounts which are being paid, and which, it is rumored, are said to be rather above the ordinary, due not so much to inefficiency as shown upon political preference.

The coming campaign for the assembly- mates, is expected to be one of the hottest on record. In the meantime, as well as during the months to come, the industry will be in a position to do its share toward bringing about the abolition of the commission. Former Senator George H. Cobb, chairman of the commission, in an interview a few days ago declared that the censorship shears were already becoming obsolete, that with pictures so clean that censorship is unnecessary, Governor Miller and the legislature will leave the industry unhindered by censorship, confident that there will be no further need of chastisement, which has already run into thousands of dollars and which has not benefited anyone in particular, except perhaps the three commissioners at $7,500 per, and a rather expensive office force.

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITORS, INC. AND ASSOCIATE PRODUCERS JOIN FORCES FOR THREE YEARS

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—A $50,000,000 agreement among moving picture interests which has held the cinema industry and mean better pictures, was announced here today.

The agreement provides for amalgamation for a period of three years, controlling many stars of the Associated Producers' corporation and the Associated First National Pictures Corporation, controlling 3500 movie theaters in the United States.

Announcement of the agreement was made by Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, representing the producers, and Osa Lawrence Price, representative of the First National.

Edward L. Mortlock is responsible for the titles in Larry Sempe's latest complications comedy, "The Fall Guy."

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERA-MAN TO HIS NEPHEW
By John Leezer

Glen Cedar Ranch,
Burbank, Calif.

My dear Nephew:
Your welcome-as-usual letter received, and contents noted. You suggest enough copy for about five reels if I should answer all at once, so I will try about two reels.
It is a wonderful thing to be able to make beautiful things, particularly beautiful pictures. In what better way can we in departing leave behind us footprints on the sands of time? And in making my pictures I would prefer a lens to a brush. There are some who would deny the lens a place in the line of progress on the ground that it is mechanical. However, it is not. True it will reproduce what it sees; but what it sees in the hands of one worker is vastly different from what it would see in the hands of another. There are masterpieces all about us, but it requires an artist to show them to his lens. An artist sees a beautiful scene early in the morning. Another sees the same setting in the light and shadow of the evening, so another and perhaps more beautiful picture is made. I don’t believe there is anyone who has not at some time been deeply stirred by a beautiful picture, though he may consider it a weakness to enthuse over anything artistic.
If our picture is of an interior, we can get more atmosphere or softness by using a combination of natural and artificial light. Strong light and deep shadow in itself is not beautiful, but may depict character both as to set and figure. The set you mentioned appeared harsh on the screen because of insufficient light or because the source of light was too close to the characters. To prevent harshness use more light but diffuse it. A combination of sunlight and artificial light, as I have said, gives the best diffusion. Cooper-Hewitt is the next best to sunlight for diffusion, and barring Cooper-Hewitt, the arc lamp at the proper distance from objects will give something near the result desired. But diffusion is essential. And of course the source of light must come from certain angles. If the double regular number of lamps are used, simply to play safe, you get in bed with the electrical department, and that’s an awful mistake.

You will find quite a difference of opinion as to alternating and direct current in picture making. Personally I am of the opinion that three phase alternating current has more snap and brilliancy than direct, but in making trick stuff the latter will give results free from shutter synchronism. I think we are safe in saying that direct current is the surest all the way around, for the balance on three phase alternating, is a hard proposition for a good many so-called electricians to handle.

Before leaving this subject of lighting, I want to point out, and with some pride too, that a lot of portrait photographers have been learning something on lighting from the despised “movie crank-turner.” I don’t want you to get the impression, however, that I begrudge them this a bit. There was a time when brotherhood among photographers was unheard of. They were as jealous of each other as Joe Martin and Snookie. If you run your own cabinet you may be getting to be as jealous of the subject as Snookie was of Joe Martin. I believe it is healthy for the public and the art itself to have this kind of rivalry.

Lillian Guenther’s Notes

As I have been in the picture game a short time it would take quite a big book to tell of what I have not done. Although I have never worked with Miss Pickford, I had the extreme pleasure of sitting on Mr. Douglas Fairbanks lap. It was while I was being “page” in “The Three Musketeers.”

That is something to tell my grandchildren. I wish Mr. Doug needed a “page” every day, for he is certainly O. K.

The Story Idea
that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it.
Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

The Director's Place in the Sun

Time was and not so long since as years are reckoned when the motion picture industry, being then in its infancy, had, as is the way of all undertakings in that period, many abuses to contend with, at least one of which was the immediate result of the autocratic power exercised by the director of each and every producing company. In those days his word was law; the actor merely his medium of expression. You see the industry was young.

Of course there may have been in the beginning a very reasonable excuse for the director's occupation of such a situation. Certainly when learning its first lessons in profitable existence, some one had to guide the progress of that awkward and unluckily offspring of the theatre, which, nevertheless, threatened to become, with the proper amount of time and effort to its credit, one of the arts before whose shrill the world was destined to worship. Indeed in many instances the director was a wise leader, in a word, a capable gentleman.

There were, however, less pleasant impressions having to do with the injustices of his tyranny that were indelibly imprinted upon the consciousness of those who were then filling more modest positions in the studios or picture camps, the men and women who daily experienced, perhaps for a vision, or perhaps for their livings, the dictation of a slave driver. They were silent to his insconsiderations, even his insults, but they remembered them, so that it was little to be wondered when the wheel of progress rolled on carrying picture creation out of the retarding rut sunken by his bigoted self-conceit, after the actor, having served his apprenticeship and having received recognition as an artist by both his profession and the public, had strayed into a managerial or maybe a big star position, that the ordinary old school director, finding himself lined up before his one time subject for inspection and consideration, was known to feel discomfiture. He deserved to. He learned, however, with the rest of them, and has lived down distasteful first records with new and creditable ones. That is, he has so done if he is yet with us. We have the utmost respect for the breadth that the last generation of motion directors has developed.

It is about some of the successors of these able men that this article is inscribed, for with the late months come those who are not so wise, young devotees of the megaphone who, partly out of the self love that so often accompanies talented inexperience, bid fair to assist history in odious repetition. Particularly is this true of those members of the greener stock who have been so fortunate as to have been engaged during the depression through which we have just passed.

The recent financial readjustment of the industry necessitated much discomfort, as such processes invariably do, by throwing perhaps sixty-five per cent of our workers into idleness. Some of the screen's greatest artists numbered among the unemployed. There resulted, quite naturally, many applications for each engagement open, especially in the acting class. Then it was that the young director, whose memory could not include a previous happening of this kind, began to feel his self-importance and to deal high-handedly with performers who could teach him picture technique for several years without beginning to exhaust their knowledge of the subject. This he failed to recognize, seemingly, for a representative of the class referred to calmly confided to us not a week since that he "could have at his beck and call any actor in the business and most of them at his own price." It was another case of "take off your hat and turn around." We pity such ignorance a little, and on account of the way we have set down the above that he may mark the end of the story which he is "redoing."

History has never, so it tells us itself, been partial in its repetitions. Again the film producing business is opening with what promises to be a boom. Once more our performers are going to enjoy the old time prosperity earned by willing labor, and then the director whose disrespect has been so much resented of late will be face to face with the same unhappy circumstances which nearly overcame his professional predecessors years ago. One should consider much the vicissitudes of one's chosen line of endeavor. Their causes should be traced and marked well. Injustice and undue conceit must be barred in all art. They inevitably eliminate. F.R.

"The Queen of Sheba"

Philharmonic Auditorium

William Fox's elaborate spectacle, "The Queen of Sheba," which has its first Pacific Coast presentation this week, backs up its exploitation by being indeed a tremendous production, embellished, as might be anticipated, with mammoth sets, enormous crowds and all of the much-sung splendor of the ancient courts; consequently it is sure to delight all who lean toward the pageant.

That great care was expended throughout the filming of this picture in regard to detail accuracy is continuously apparent, a fact which speaks commendably for the diligence of its technical staff; but our historical students are due to receive several jolts if they approach this Virginia Tracey version of Sheba's and Solomon's life histories with the idea that it is a faultless chronicle of the little that we know of the fair and wise rulers. However, that this is more or less an imaginative revision of several of their biographical chapters will mean little to those who are content to look upon "The Queen of Sheba" as an unusual entertainment in the romantic costume line, and nothing to the thousands who possess no memorable knowledge of the famous beauty and sage, anyway.

ASSOCIATED FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Four producing organizations releasing their photos, through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., are busy making pictures here.

Duster Keaton is at work on his third comedy, Eddie Cline directing.

R. A. Walsh is in his fourth week of production on his dramatization of Peter B. Kyne's novel, "Kindred of the Dust," featuring Miriam Cooper and Ralph Graves.

Charles Ray is nearing the end of "The Deuce of Spades," a Charles E. Van Loan story.

The following productions have recently been completed for release this fall:

Duster Keaton's "The Playhouse" and "The Blacksmith," the former directed by Eddie Cline and the latter by Mal St. Clair. Marshall Neilan's "Bits of Life," an episodic drama innovation by four authors.

Charles Chaplin's "The Idle Class." Anita Stewart's "The Invisible Fear," "Her Mad Bargain" and "A Question of Honor," all of which were made under the direction of Edwin Carewe.

Charles Ray's "Two Minutes to Go," "R. S. V. P." "The Burntstormer," and "Gas, Oil and Water."

Katherine MacDonald's "Her Social Value," "The Woman's Side" and "Peacot."

Directed by Hope's "My Lady Friends." Oliver Morosco's western drama, "The Half Breed" and "Slippery McGee."

John M. Stahl's "The Song of Life."

The following productions have been acquired for release this autumn:

METRO EXECUTIVES CONFER

Joseph Engel, general manager of Metro's West Coast studios, is in New York confering with President Richard Rowland and other officials of the company concerning production activities at the company's Hollywood studios.

Under the supervision of Milton Hoffman, general manager of productions, thirty-two pictures will be made during the coming year.

The picture schedule adopted during the recent convention of Metro sales chiefs in New York calls for seven special productions each for Bert Lytell, Viola Dana, Alice Lake and Garrett Hughes, as well as four special productions soon to be released. All of these pictures will be made at the West Coast studios.

The forthcoming Lester Cuneo picture, formerly entitled "Behind the Mask," has been changed to "Fat of Paradise."
“THE GIRL FROM GOD’S COUNTRY”

Clune’s

Clune’s Broadway Theatre re-opens this week with a F. B. Warren release, “The Girl from God’s Country,” starring Neil Shipman. The story, written as well as played by Miss Shipman, is a very complicated melodrama which, is singularly enough, kept remarkably lucid in the scenario. It is altogether safe to state that we have never witnessed a thriller packed more full of breath-taking action and general dexterity requiring the utilization of everything from wild animal stunts above the briny deep than is this production, contrasting the Canadian wilds and California civilization. As might be expected it is a rather wildly imaginative tale which couldn’t possibly occur, but then neither could “Go and Get It,” and a great portion of Griffith’s melodramas which is nevertheless “eaten up” by the multitudes. Recklessness in this type of thing injures its impression upon only the comparatively few film fans who are ultra practical. Even they will recognize that in this instance Bert Van Tuyle’s capable direction does much to humanize the story by handling its more important characters as consistently as possible under the sometimes forced circumstances.

Some truly exquisite shots are the accomplishment for “The Girl from God’s Country” of cinematographer J. B. Walker, who has assisted much of the aerial work to effectiveness with his excellent judgment of angles, etc.

Two well executed contrasting roles are the work of the star in this production. Partly, this is clever, however, is her characterization of Neeka Le Mort, the primitive little French woodswoman, who carries the plot’s main interest. Neeka’s guilelessness, her extreme capabilities for loving and hating, and her sincere repentance of the wrong she commits in her savage anger, were more diverse in the manner than were the countless moments of daring accomplishment in which her interpreter displays skill and courage possessed by few film celebrities of either sex. There is a doubt but that the average audience will disagree with us on this score and vote in favor of the more sensational work of this refreshing young woman. It ordinarily does.

Miss Shipman also portrays Marion Carls- take, an affected representative of modern society, whose relationship to the little French girl is the chief problem to be puzzled over by the audience and cast throughout almost the entire length of the play. It is difficult to always classify this role, which is unfortunate. Mostly it is surrounded by unsympathetic circumstances; now and again it is a martyr. However, Neeka is the important interpretation of Miss Shipman in this picture. The latter means little save as opposing complication.

An exceedingly appealing part, Jean Coulter, the mate whose name as the war’s greatest purchase until his eyesight, is done by Boyd Irwin. This is one of the most interesting things in which he has attempted, who is more than competent to care for it. Owen Glendon, a romantic juvenile, is the effort of Edward Burns, who makes him mayhem in a proof of his maturing versatility, for which we wish personally to thank the actor. The old time showbusiness gagarly as a requisite of those males who would seem anything but vicious villains is becoming a bit passé. Anything that tends toward truth in our fiction is advancement.

Al Filson is appropriately situated in and amply handles the heavy, J. Randall Cars- take, the kidnaper of another man’s brain children. Walt Whitman, who artistically enacts Carlsake’s brother, a demented inventor, is the star. This time she appears in the role of Sally Jo Banty, a simple child of the vil- lage, unwary and innocent. To, sober, un- abed Gus lends her considerable sympathy. We begin to think that Miss Lee has “located” at last.

Cluck Chronicle and Brother Newberry, the scheming crooks who do so much to “ball things up” generally, are very well done by Theodore Lorch and Charles Ogle. There they are, a great idea.

Fred Huntley makes a regular small town editor of Don Rayburn, and Wilton Taylor plays equally as well Judge Shorttredge, the typical village crank.

Kutie Erickson completes the cast as Scrap Iron Swenson.

“THE SIGN ON THE DOOR”

Kinema

Channing Pollock’s murder drama, “The Sign on the Door,” sensational, is Joseph Schenck’s latest presentation through First National, starring Norma Talmadge. The adaptation of the play is excellent and the Harrison Brown direction which is an im- mense improvement over “The Passion Flower,” his previous recent attempt with the emotional star. Very good photography and carefully handled technicals in addition to some excellent performances will probably rescue this production from the “punning” that some portions of its stereotyped story deserve. The plot, how- ever, is of the type and consistency to rivet the attention throughout, which is probably the main consideration, and the expected climax, in which the almost inevitable trial is mercifully omitted, is more than a relief.

Certainly Miss Talmadge is afforded a wide range for a dramatic interpretation by the circumstances in which Ann Regan, her vivid role, finds itself. She has not lately done more strikingly shaded acting than is her credit here as the woman who would assume a murder committed by her husband rather than to live in safety without his love.

Charles Richman is the exact type to play Lafayette Regan, her uncompromising hus- band, one of those stringent ideals any woman might stand a little in awe of.

Once again after several years traversing foreign shores, Lew Cody is at home in Frank Devereaux’s setting heavy in this picture drama. He enacts the part with his well remembered suavity right through to his murder by a just man. Cody means much more to any production in such a capacity than he does as the star.

Hal MacAllister plays cleverly the Dis- trict Attorney in charge of the Devereaux murder and Helen Weir is seen as Helen, Regan’s very young, rather indiscernit daughter. This youngster’s personality is particularly pleasing but she is sufficient here.

David Proctor completes the list of play- ers as Col. Gaunt.

Some day we want to see Norma Tal- mage, the screen’s most popular emotion- alist, in a really big vehicle. It would mean much to her at this time.

TO ARRANGE EXPLOITATION PROGRAM

R. G. Hammond of the Hammond Export and Import Co., 83 Beresford Ave., New York. Mr. Hammond while in Los Angeles will be engaged in the exploitation of pic- tures here and abroad.

LE BERTHON TO HANDLE THE FORUM

We wish to announce that, commencing with the next issue of Camera! the Screen Writers' Forum will be conducted by Ted Le Berthon, editor of the Photodramatist magazine. Mr. Le Berthon merely intends to edit and arrange a vast amount of material which he has access to, and present to the readers of Camera! articles dealing with current movements in the film industry which in any way affect the screen writer; as well as boiled down technical articles and comment upon photoplays.

Le Berthon succeeds William E. Wing as editor of the Screen Writers' Forum. Mr. Wing is about to undertake some new duties which considerably increase the scope of his work and make it necessary for him to discontinue his present and fruitful association with Camera!

Mr. Le Berthon is well known in local film, theatrical and newspaper realms. It will be his endeavor to write for Camera! only such material as shall be of sound, valid and immediate use to screen writers.

TEN MINUTES WITH OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Whether or not we agree with the following extracts from our prompt communications received at our editorial offices, their writers must be credited with thinking in lines that we could advantageously consider:

Dear Editor:

I warn you, before you read further, that this is going to be a long and wordy tale. If you read to the end—I hope that you will let others read it too—it may be a relief to them, as I know many who are of the same opinion.

In the first place, I am a very busy person, and am not able to go to the "movies" as often as I should like to. When I do go I try to see the features. Last night I saw three, "Dream Street," "The Great Moment," and "The Conquering Power." This is the real beginning of the fall. May I ask in the vernacular, "How do they get that way" when it comes to boasting of D. W. Griffith?

Of the first, "Junk" in the form of a story, "Dream Street" is it. The director has his people acting as if they were afflicted with St. Vitus dance. It would be impossible for any actress, even one with the charm and versatility of Carol Dempster, to win any sympathy for Ginger, the central figure of the play. The idiotic, jerky movements—all reminiscent of Lillian Gish—the everlasting stepping and twisting, the insane and inane repetition of action, the grimaces and the ferocious snatching of teeth—which totally destroyed the otherwise splendid acting of the younger brother. (If there were not so tragic) pugilistic prancing of the unboxer-like boxer; and last, but not least, the smug, artificial and stagy Chisholm, was the last hat.

I have seen only three of the great (?) D. W. Griffith "masterpieces," and I hope the last one, "The Love Flower," is not the last weeks ago, and only then fully realized the power of the press, and the truth of the slogan, "It pays to advertise."

In the case of D. W. Griffith—I'll say it with howery.

After "Dream Street" I stepped in next door and saw El vono's "The Great Moment." I happened to go in when Gloria Swanson was on the screen scene with her father. The subtitle informed us that it was morning, in fact, Gloria had just finished breakfast. She had a wild and woolly night the night before—naturally the should have been the "morning after," you know the sort of thing, ruzzy head and furry tongue, not that I wish to indicate that you have had that feeling, but, you, as I, have read about it. Savvy?

Gloria is a great girl, she can get up to breakfast, and not only that, but can stick her hair full of cartwheels, to the dread ful things she had sticking in her hair it looked like two wheels off a child's go cart.

HEADACHE! Not at all.

Just as soon as I got a glimpse of Gloria, I relaxed, and enjoyed the show, very much interested in the remarks of a little girl, sitting next to me with her mother. The child was about nine years of age, and as you are an imaginative person, I am sure you will understand the questions asked, and the subsequent embarrassment of the mother.

Result of the hour's entertainment—to me! Complete rest and relaxation—but would have liked twenty-five cents of my fifty-five back.

Now for "The Conquering Power." A classic, but why have Charlie Chaplin in it, when they have such a capable and splendid actor as Rudolph Valentino? I wonder if Rex Ingram ever met an educated Frenchman twenty-seven years old—or, in fact, a young man of any nationality—that did not know when he was getting the trumpet was for.

When Charles dropped his arm into the ear trumpet, he, to me, faded right out of the picture, and Charlie Chaplin took his place. That, and the candle in the BOTTLE were the two things that were slips in the technique of the director, otherwise the picture was wonderfully well done; June Mathis, Rex Ingram, and all his company deserve all praise. Long may they reign!

If you have got this far, you may as well use the whole sheet. I saw "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and I think that it is the most perfect picture I have ever seen. Unfortunately, our family lost all their menfolk in the first year of the war, and the very sight of a uniform brings it all home. There is one particular one, and many others, stayed away from the first showing of the "Horsemen." Still, it is the picture "Supreme."

HYPHER-CRITIC

Editor, The Camera:

Nolan in his article in Saturday's Camera! on foreign atmosphere certainly said a mouthful, and as I have been somewhat of a globetrotter myself, I entirely agree with him. Of course, the average movie fan who fervently believes that every race or creed, yes, and even the angels in heaven, think, act, and dress, will swallow anything, as he does not know any better. But to one who has seen the real thing, such pitiful attempts on the part of our fillings from Podunk Center, male and female alike, to portray some foreign character of whose language and customs they know next to nothing, is an experienced person a mixture of the ridiculous and tragic, mostly ridiculous. To cite one instance: Some time ago I viewed a picture where a none too well-groomed fellow tried to make the audience believe that, with her cold and meaningless, in fact, downright clumsy, foreign accent, her arms, she was correctly interpreting an oriental dancer. Now, I ask every intelligent reader, how can a European, especially an Anglo-Saxon, whose physical composition is ninety-five per cent ice, and the other five per cent glass, be capable of acting something that can't feel? If you never have an opportunity to watch a real oriental dancer, not the half-starved and tired-out slaves who perform before the enormous-seekers tourists in the coffee houses of Constantinople, I mean the real oriental who dances on the desert sand before an audience of traders and adventurers on their way to the steers clear of the "Queen of Sheba" and Mr. Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy," for I know it in advance it is impossible for the audience to think and feel the emotions of another race; they simply are not capable of interpreting correctly how an oriental feels, the only expression that comes to your mind and lips is "Oh! h—-", and you leave the theater in disgust.

Yes, some will say, human emotions are all alike, no matter what race or creed; but are they? You may as well say that steel is alike, but how finely tempered is some and how common other grades could be any better? The producer, if you want true artistic effects get a Latin for a Latin character, and an Asiatic or Oriental for an Asiatic or Oriental character. As for myself, I am going to steer clear of the "Queen of Sheba" and Mr. Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy," for I know in advance it is impossible for the actors to think and feel the emotions of another race; they simply are not capable of interpreting correctly how an oriental feels, the only expression that comes to your mind and lips is "Oh! h—-," and you leave the theater in disgust.

Correan Kirkham has recently recovered from an attack of pneumonia.

Constance Blaney is completing her first production for Realet, under the direction of Major Campbell.

Charles Meredith is playing opposite Freida Inke in "The Cradle."

Another actor working at the Pacific Studio at San Mateo, Calif., is Elinor Fair, Robert McKim and Freeman Woods.

Walter Long is cast as the heavy in the forthcoming Mary Miles Minter Realet production, as yet untitled.
BASIL KING IN LOS ANGELES

Basil King, Goldwyn eminent author, has arrived in Los Angeles to confer with Vice-President Abraham Lehr and Paul Bern, scenario editor, regarding a new screen story. Mr. King recently completed three books. His latest, “The Dust Flower,” to be published serially, is being adapted to the screen by Charles Kenyon in collaboration with the author.

CHILD ACTOR IN SWIMMING EXHIBITION

Richard Heedrick, child actor in the Mayer-Stahl production, “The Child Thou Gavest Me,” recently appeared at Wilkin-son’s natatorium in a swimming and diving exhibition. Little Richard holds the juvenile championship of the Pacific Coast and is the possessor of the quarter-mile and hundred-yard water events.

JOSEPHINE QUIRK IN NEW YORK

Josephine Quirk, scenario writer at the Louis B. Mayer studio, has left for New York to attend the opening of a Rita Wie-mann play. Upon her return she will re-turn work on the script of “The Woman He Married,” a Herbert Boshard play in which Anita Stewart will be starred.

SAN GABRIEL MISSION IN “SLIPPY Mcgee”

The interior of the historic church at San Gabriel Mission, “the mother of Los Angeles,” has been photographed. The sacred landmark is to be shown with its settings in the Oliver Morosco production, “Slippy Mcgee,” made recently for Associated First National release.

KEATON ON LOCATION

Buster Keaton and his company are located at Balboa Beach, where they are filming scenes for Keaton’s third two-reel comedy for Joseph M. Schenck, to be re-leased through Associated First National. Sybil Sealy plays opposite the star in this photoplay, which has been titled “The Boat.”

GOLDWYN LEAVES FOR NEW YORK

Samuel Goldwyn, President of the Gold-wyn Pictures Corporation, left for New York after spending two months at the Culver City studio in conference with Abraham Lehr, vice-president in charge of production. Mr. Goldwyn expects to have eight or ten companies working at the Culver City plant by December.

LYTELL STARTS WORK

Bert Lytell has returned to work on his newest production, “The Right That Failed,” after a three weeks’ vacation in the deer country of Northern California.

WILSON CONTRACTS SIGNED

Ben Wilson, President and Supervising Director of the Berwilla Studios, has secured contracts for fourteen feature productions and a serial for the coming season.

“Experience,” starring Richard Barthel-messen, based on the stage play of that name and directed by George Fitzmaurice, will be given its Western premiere at Grauman’s Chinese Theatre on Sunday, Sept. 11th.

PREPARING FOR CHAPLIN’S ARRIVAL

An ovation is being planned for Charlie Chaplin by his old-time friends and school-mates upon his arrival in London.

RECENT ARRIVALS FROM NEW YORK

Among those who arrived from the East lately are Hobart Henley, who recently finished directing Hope Hampton in “Star Dust” at his Fort Lee studios; Pauline Stark, star of Whitman Bennett’s “Salva-tion Bell,” which will soon be exhibited under the First National banner; and Chet Withey, who directed Constance Talmadge in “Wedding Bells” and “Lessons in Love.” “Wedding Bells” is the next First National-Constance Talmadge picture which Los Angeles will see.

CINEMA PLAYERS IN COMEDY

MILLER COMPANY RETURNS FROM LOCATION

The Ranger Bill Miller Company has re-turned from the San Jacinto mountains, where it has been on location making exteriors for its present picture, a Northwest Mounted Police story, featuring W. J. Ranger Bill” Miller. This is the third of a series of twelve pictures that this company is making for release through the Clmart, Inc., releasing organization of this city.

“ZULULAND” COMPLETED

A comedy, entitled “Zululand,” which George Rowe, cross-eyed comedian, “Sunshine Sammy,” Mark Jones and Eheo Broadhurst appear in the principal roles, has been completed at the Hal E. Roach Studios. Bob Kerr directed, assisted by Jimmy Parrott.

PREPARING FOR SECOND

Richard Barthelemy, having finished “Tol’ble David,” filmed in the mountains of West Virginia, has returned to New York.

“The Civet Cat” is the latest of the new series of “Adventures of Bill and Bob,” which Pathé has scheduled for release the week of September 18th.

Beulah Livingstone, who went abroad last June, in the interests of Jos. M. Schenck, and the Misses Norma and Con-stance Talmadge, has returned and is again in charge of publicity at the Talmadge Studios in New York.

“The Great Impersonation,” based on E. Phillips Oppenheim’s story and directed by George Melford, opens at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre Monday, Sept. 12th. James Kirwood is the featured player, with Ann Forrest interpreting the leading femin-ine role.

“Skirt Shy” is announced as the final title of the Roscoe Arbuckle picture originally produced as “Should a Man Marry?” and later changed to “This Is So Sudden.” James Cruze directed this picture.

Shirley Vance Martin has been especially engaged by George W. Stout, producer-manager for the Jackie Coogan Productions, to photograph Jackie in the Coogan pic-ture, “My Boy,” which Victor Heerman is directing.

WESTERN PICTURES TO HAVE TWENTY COMPANIES

Western Pictures Exploitation Company will presently have a minimum of twenty independent companies at work producing features for release via the state rights market. This company recently signed a contract with the Sterling Super-Art Feature Film Company for a series of twelve five-reel prairie stories, locations for which have already been selected in Southern California and Wyoming. John W. Dobie represented the producing company in this transaction.

Western Pictures Exploitation Company is at present preparing prints on a novelty series of three-reel each, entitled "The Missions of California."

EXCHANGES ACQUIRE GUINAN SERIES

Among the exchanges which have recently closed contracts on the first Texas Guinan Western series are the Quality Film Corporation of Pittsburgh, the Lande Film Distributing Company of Cleveland and Cincinnati, the Metro Film Exchange of Philadelphia, Merit Film, Inc., of Detroit, Favorite Players Film Corporation of Chicago and the Merit Film Corporation of Minneapolis.

The first subject of the first series of twelve will be released to the exchanges on October 1st.

AT LASKY'S

"Saturday Night," an original story by Jeanie MacPherson, will be produced by Cecil B. De Mille as his next special. An all-star cast, which includes Leatrice Joy and Edith Roberts, will present this story.

Roocey Arquette is scheduled to start work shortly on "The Melancholy Spirit," under the direction of James Cruze. Lila Lee, who has supported the comedian in his recent pictures, will again have the feminine lead.

"Moran of the Lady Letty" is announced as the next George Melford production, work on which will start shortly. The screen adaptation of this Frank Norris story was arranged by Monte Katterjohn.

Jack Holt is engaged on interior scenes for his first stellar vehicle, "The Call of the North," which Joseph Henabery is directing.

IN LINZER CAST

Max Linzer's newest comedy, "He My Wife," about to be released by Goldwyn, includes in its cast Alta Allen, who plays opposite the star; Carolyn Rankin, Lincoln Stedman, Rose Dione, Charles MacHugh, and Arthur Clayton.

LASKY ENGAGES HACKATHORNE

George Hackathorne has been cast as Holly Compton's leading man in "The Little Minister," a Penrhyn Stanlaws production, adapted to the screen by E. A. Bingham.

William MacHattin will enact a part in the forthcoming Jackie Coogan picture entitled
"My Boy."

Jack Okey, technical director of the Robert Brunton studios, is vacationing in the northern part of the state.

Carl Gerard has been selected to play an important role in support of Alice Lake in "The Hole in the Wall," her new Metro picture.

Announcement

Mrs. Wm. Vaughn Moody witnessed two performances of Dan Crimmings' role in Ridgely Torrence's playlet, "The Rider of Dreams," at the Community Theatre, Hollywood, last season, and offered to negotiate for the rights—resulting in a signed contract giving Dan Crimmings exclusive vaudeville rights to the playlet.

Mr. Monroe Lathrop, of the Los Angeles
Express, said: "The success of Ridgely Torrence's "The Rider of Dreams" is largely due to the fine character acting of Dan Crimmins, who's virtuosity overshadows the good work of the cast. On the whole his work was splendid in detail and rich in general results."

Crimmins & Gore Company have played the colored folk playlet, and Western managers have placed their OK's on it.

Crimmins and Gore wish to thank the many directors that have had such pleasing association with during their stay here, and extend sincerest wishes for a big successful future to everybody con-ected with pictures in Los Angeles.

Crimmins and Gore will lease their beautiful home at 401 Brent Street during their absence.

"THE QUEEN OF SHEBA"

J. Gordon Edwards has, everything considered, accomplished a remarkable piece of direction in this production, for the much that his story tells is always perfectly understandable and well balanced. Particularly well handled and sensational are the chariot races, which are fully worthy to challenge all that "Ben Hur" has to offer in the way of effectiveness. They not only provide great beauty but some of the photo-play's most thrilling suspense. Excellent photography of them and indeed of the entire action by John Boyle is invaluable to this story, whose picturesqueness is its keynote. Both the subtitles and art titles should have received different treatment for entire satisfaction.

The solo dances included in the wedding festival sequence, and the arrangement of the chorus work, are by Frederic Ko Vert, while Margaret Whistler is responsible for the costuming, some of which appears more rare than practical.

In the title role, Betty Blythe probably is given her biggest opportunity to date, of which in the second part of the production she takes more complete advantage than she does previously, when her regal bearing is not entirely convincing. Once well into her part, however, and a few more garments than are allowed her as the virgin queen, she comes to the fore and is every inch of the poised parent ruler in every attitude. Her renunciation love for Solomon lends the part considerable sympathy.

Fritz Leiber, in the role of the all-wise Jewish king, is possibly not so well cast to our minds as he is capable to handle—anything. His action seems a bit inconsistent with the famous Biblical character's disposition; but for that, of course, the actor cannot be held responsible. Nevertheless, we maintain that Solomon usually obtained the woman that he desired. To have done so in Sheba's case, however, would have ruined the pathetic note in Miss Tracy's carefully constructed romance.

Pat Moore unquestionably possesses the greatest appeal in the story; and more than that, he gives one of the cleverest child performances recently shown, as the Prince of Sheba, whose unknown father is Solomon himself. Little Pat lives every foot of the part, giving us his best work yet.

A better type of ancient usurper than George Seigmann would be hard to imagine. He is vivid enough for anyone enough in King Armud, Sheba's bestial but mercifully short-lived king.

G. Raymond Nye and Nell Craig conduct most of the villainy through the footage as Adonijah, Solomon's brother, and Princess Vashti, an ambitious resident of the court. They are both satisfactory, while Hershall Mayall is exceptionally good as Mentor, the Minister of State.

Herbert Heyes, George Nichols, Genevieve Illin, Joan Gordon, Claire de Luraz, William Handy, John Coografe, Paul Case- neve, Al Freumont and Karl Crane execute the remaining roles ably.

With proper advertising "The Queen of Sheba" should prove a tremendous drawing card.

NEW MERMAID COMEDY

Jack White will begin presently on the fifth Hamilton-White Mermaid comedy for Educational release. His latest picture, "For Land's Sake," recently completed, will have its premiere at the Kinema at an early date. This two-reeler presents Hige Conley, Mar- vel Rae, Earl Montgomery, Frank Coleman and others in the cast.

Doris Baker has returned from a six months' trip in the East.

The Story Idea
that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay generally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

Market conditions in New York are taking a new lease on life. There is a good demand for features but little call for comedies. Just a tip to the Westcoaster. There is not one company making comedies here in New York. All that were making them were either "gyped" out of the money due them or went bankrupt. This is no place to make laugh-getters, and no place to sell them either, save on a percentage basis, and then you're in tough luck.

"Zit" is back once more with the Hearst organization. He was formerly General Manager, and returns to the publicity department to head that branch. Zit cannot be held in one position for long. He is some active gentleman and knows the game. Tom Terriss, we learn, has left Cosmopolitan Productions, for which company he made two pictures. George Walsh will make some for First National, it is said.

The new censor board here is not so bad as it has been painted. Taken altogether, it has been very nice to all pictures submitted. A new weekly started here called "CameraScope" is made up like a newspaper. Dr. Lamberger is editor. The paper as yet carries no advertising matter. It is six pages.

Fox has three theatres on Broadway. One houses "Shame," another "The Virgin Paradise," and "The Thundertbolt." "Over the Hill" is cleaning up, so is Harry Myers in "A Connecticut Yankee." Harry is pulling especially hard.

Frank Bacon is president of the Green Room Club.

Oscar Lund is back from Sweden.

Burton King in directing "Houndini." Albert Cappelani makes four a year for Hearst.

Eddie Dillon is making "The Beauty Shop" with Hitchy.

Louise Fazenda is here looking over the big city. Yep, with Hearst's movie outfit. Edgar Selden will make his own features. The U. S. Photoplay Corporation who spent a little shy of a cold million on "Determination," expects to have it completed soon. The same people have bought the stock, while Loew, Goldwyn and Famous Players have a hard time selling theirs. You can tell, Hector. Loew's State Theatre will open in a blaze of glory by the time you read this.

The Hippodrome is playing a Clyde Cook Comedy weekly in conjunction with its regular show. This is something radically new.

William Faversham is advertised as a Selznick star in "Justice." Now we learn he never made a scene, nor is he going to play for Selznick.

"The Three Musketeers" opened here last week. Great box-office sale. Also great reissuing of former makes of same picture. All will make money.

Lorna Moon is the latest addition to Realart's authorial staff. Miss Moon is responsible for the article just submitted which Wanda Hawley has just commenced.

B. B. Hampton will start shortly on a new production for Robert Brunton studios, in which Robert McKim, Claire Adams and Carl Ganvoort will play the leading roles.

LILIAN GENTHER'S NOTES
Another thing I have to my credit is working for Reginald Barker in "The Old Nest," I did not have a principal role. But appeared in the unimportant parts, and did well. They have used a dummy, only the said dummy had too much expression. I am sure Mr. Barker is a great director, and in later life I can say that I worked under Reginald Barker in "The Old Nest" and tell the truth.

Another Jolt

Once more the motion picture industry has been horrified by a bolt of terrible misfortune that has come crashing down from the apparently peaceful heavens into its paralyzed midst. Once again the world, from as many viewpoints as it may claim possession of, shakes its head dubiously, revengefully or disappointedly in our direction, while inevitably placing another mental black mark beside our name in its Book of Public Favor. And why? Because one of our oldest and most popular representatives has been indicted for a hideous crime, brought about under unspeakable conditions; because several formerly well thought of picture men and women were party to the disgraceful orgy that occasioned whatever vileness really took place; and because unsavory, even disgusting, records of the individuals in question have been brought to light, shattering all faith that may ever have been held in them.

We haven't the slightest idea as to whether or not Roscoe Arbuckle killed Virginia Rappe unintentionally or otherwise; but we have several unpleasant ones concerning the loathsome debauchery that could bring about any such circumstances as those which attended this sensational tragedy. We have nothing but the deepest scorn, not only for the participants in this degrading "booze party" about which the entire hemisphere is talking, but for every male and female in the motion picture business who so lowers himself or herself ever as to regard a high salary, popularity or even achievement as a license to act in a manner that would not be a commendable pattern for any private citizen to follow.

The sooner that every drunkard, dope addict and degenerate is thrown out of the studios into the gutter where they all belong, the better it will be for each serious minded, self-respecting worker in our enterprise. Art can never excuse rottenness anywhere, and the profession is at last fully awake to that fact, for there is no keener bitterness felt over the entire affair in any section of the country than there is in the Hollywood film colony today. The hundreds of decent actors about whom the world has so little opportunity to hear, who are happily married, home-loving, honest-to-goodness people, are finally on their feet to eradicate the filth that causes resentment to be directed toward their perfectly legitimate activities. They are the fathers and mothers of little children whose heritage is as clean and chances as rosy as any other babies' in the world. They must see to it that these innocent souls do not pay for their parents' art with any demonstration of disrespect from the prejudiced offspring of those who are too earthy to understand, to differentiate; and see to it they will, according to dozens of vehement expressions that have come to our attention this week.

We are justly proud of these people and their worthy new determinations which if carried out, will make it pretty hot for the deliberate sinners about us.

Perhaps, after all, this nightmarish experience with dirt and drags will lead to a housecleaning that will sweep the unworthy far over our doorstep. In any event, it should be made thus to profit us.

For all of the indiscretions and errors which she could have committed Virginia Rappe has paid the greatest price known to man. Roscoe Arbuckle must now settle, is settling, in fact, his accounts. No matter what he may have done his greatest injury has been to humanity. Humanity will exact full repayment.

Meanwhile if such a painful lesson was needed by us in our extreme tolerance of conditions, let us receive it as philosophically as possible, while realizing that we must guard against the necessity for another. Hereafter it is imperative that all the entrances to our highly desirable circle be closed save the one that is only to be reached through unquestionable merit, artistic and moral.

Only upon an uncompromising foundation of this kind can our structure stand. It has to stand!

F. R.

A Few Statistics

The Exhibitors' Herald furnishes us with the following statistics:

"In the fiscal year ending June 30 the government collected $6,008,108 on the five per cent film rental tax. For the preceding year the same source yielded only $4,381,276. These figures reveal that for the year preceding June 30 the amount of domestic film rentals was $120,162,160, and for the preceding year, $87,625,520—meaning an increase for the year ending with the past theatrical season of $32,536,640.

"There doubtless is no set of figures available at this time which more graphically depicts the tremendous commercial development of the industry during the past season. The exhibiting branch of the industry can admit without hesitation that during the period in question it witnessed its period of greatest commercial gain, yet it contributed more than thirty-two million dollars additional for film rental over the preceding year."

"The government statistics have placed the amount of film rentals at a figure which is from ten to fifteen million dollars greater than the average estimate of grade experts—a matter which is both surprising and encouraging."

Lester Cuneo, of Doubleday Productions, will make a Spanish story for his next film production. Leo Meehan and Henry McCarthy are responsible for "Blue Blazes" and "Pat of Paradise." Cuneo's two previous pictures, which will soon be released.

Irving M. Lesser and Mike Rosenberg of the Western Pictures Exploitation company are distributing the Cuneo pictures, eight of which have been contracted for this season.

TO MAKE DISTRIBUTION ARRANGEMENTS

Marshall Nellan left recently for a trip to New York to consult with Associated First National Pictures in connection with a distribution plan for "Penrod," starring Wesley Barry, whereby the picture may be shown in every city simultaneously. Mr. Nellan expects to be back here shortly when work on the Booth Tarkington story and photoplay will be started immediately.

CONFERS WITH KANE

Cyrus J. Williams, producer of the Tom Santachi Western series and the "Adventures of Bill and Bob," pictures, is en route to New York for consultation with Arthur S. Kane in connection with his producing interests. Upon his return Mr. Williams expects to start his fall production schedule at his Brentwood studios with three units making features.

JACKIE'S NEW PICTURE IN SIXTH WEEK

It is expected that six more weeks will complete "My Boy," starring Jackie Coogan, which is in its sixth week of production at the liunton studio.

ANOTHER EPISODE

Bob Bradbury and his twin sons, Bill and Bob, returned from their trip to Tahtatay Peak of the San Jacinto range. The film record of the expedition is in the laboratory and will appear on the screen as an episode in the Cyrus J. Williams series of the "Adventures of Bill and Bob" for Pathe.

CINART SIGNS NEW COMEDY CO.

The Weeby Bird Film Company has signed with Cinart Company to make a series of two-reel comedies, completing two a month. The first two have already been finished and shipped East for release.

FIRST GUINAN PICTURE UNDER WAY

Texas Guinan has arrived here from her New York home and the work of filming her first story has already begun at the West Coast studio. General Manager Jesse J. Goldberg is in general charge of production work.

SIGNS RELEASE CONTRACT

Webster Cullison has recently returned from New York, where he closed a contract for the release of the Philo Gubb Series, as well as securing a contract for 13 two-reel westerns.

AT ASKYS

Production on Cecil B. de Mille's latest Paramount offering, "Saturday Night," starts this week. The story is an original by Jeanne MacPherson.

Gloria Swanson, home from a trip to New York, has started on her newest picture, "The Husband's Testament," a Clara Beranger story, which Sam Wood is directing and Thompson Buchanan supervising. Lorna Mckenna wrote the story.

Ethel Clayton is still at work on "The Cradle," adapted by Olga Frintzau from Eugene Brioux's drama. Paul Powell is directing and Julia Crawford Ivers is supervising.

Victor Fleming is busily engaged making ready for his debut as a Paramount director. He will handle the megaphone on Agnes Ayres' first star picture, an adaptation by Sir Gilbert Parker and Eugene Meinin from the former's novel, "The Lane That Had No Turning." Mahlon Hamilton will play opposite the star. Rollin Sturgeon will supervise.

Wallace Reid has finished "Rent Free," under the direction of Howard Higgin, and will next make "The Champion," under the direction of Chester Willey, who has recently been signed by Paramount. This picture was adapted for the screen by J. E. Nash, from the three-act comedy by Thomas Louden and A. E. Thomas. Thompson Buchanan will supervise.

Thomas Meighan has completed "A Prince There Was," under Tom Forman's direction, and will begin work shortly on "If You Believe It, It's So," scenarized by Waldemar Young from Perley Poore Sheehan's successful story. Tom Forman will again direct.

AT GOLDWYN

Work will begin shortly on "The Octave of Claudius," a melodrama by Barry Pain, under the direction of Wallace Worsley. The continuity for the story was written by J. G. Hawks.

Rowland Y. Lee, who recently finished the serial, "His Back Against the Wall," has been assigned to direct "What Ho—the Cook," a Chinese story by Gouverneur Morris.

Anzio Vezierska's "Hungry Hearts" will go into production this week with E. Mason Hopper directing.

AT THE ROACH STUDIO

Work began this week on the fifteen and last episode of the Ruthe Roland serial, "White Eagle," and Miss Roland has received the script of the serial which she will make following the completion of this present production.

Jimmy Parrott, who has been co-directing, is now being featured in a beach comedy, production on which started recently, under the direction of R. Gray, assisted by R. J. Ceder.

Harold Lloyd comedy reissues are being released weekly. The latest is "Over the Fence."

BRUDAHUGES PRODUCTIONS

Vida Bruda, author, has taken over the Logan interest of the Loganhuages Film Co., operating at El Paso, Texas, and the company will henceforth be known as the Brudahuges Productions. Work started this week on the five-reel production, "Desert Rose," featuring Adelia Sambrano, with Roy C. Hughes directing.

realizing her relationship to the woman whose identity she assumes, it is merely a chain of stereotyped situations strung together upon a sentimental line of philosophy concerning heredity's place in character formation.

There are countless errors in Emile Chautard's direction of the picture, while the cutting eliminates all possibilities for transition. The photography varies and is mostly exceedingly poor.

Florence Reed is the starred member of the cast. She plays dramatically both Faustine and her child Mary Maudsley. Her poise is always interesting, but her material here is rather nil, while her make-up as the enlivened Black Panther at first is hideously unreal. Miss Reed is not popular enough with the film public to get away with such general unpleasantness.

Norman Treasurer, a finished character actor, plays the uncomplicated masculine lead, Sir Marling.

The production's heavy work is the joint effort of Earle Fox, William Roselle and Tyroene Power, who enact Jack Maudsley, Hampton Graham and Count Boris. None of it impresses particularly.

Grauman's

E. Phillips Oppenheim's widely read mystery story of the world war, entitled "The Great Impersonation," as dramatized by Monte Katterjohn and celluloided by George Melford for Paramount release, may be seen at this time. It is a carefully handled subject dealing with mixed identities and German spies in an attention holding manner that makes exceptional entertainment.

Perhaps because the plot material is heavier than some, the cumberlessness that marks so much of the work of this production's director is not noticeable. A surprise finish is invaluable to the picture, the development of which is deliberate enough to provide suspense and yet not dilatory to the point of tediousness. Well dressed sets, good cutting and pleasing photography by William Marshall assist the picture to further success.

"THE IMPERSONATION"

As it filmed "Everywoman" two years ago, Lasky has prepared for the screen that drama's allegorical twin, "Experience," which Paramount releases in Los Angeles for the first time now; and perhaps peculiarly enough, as was true in the case of its predecessor, although this George V. Hobart play has been given an elaborate production and has been kept fairly true to the original stage idea in Waldemar Young's scenario, it misses in considerable degree and therefore falls a little tasteless upon our carefully trained, modern palates. This is probably further proof that the allegory, as we have known it, is not for the celluloid, for certainly George Fitzmaurice handles his subject with good understanding, making it a fairly consistent adaptation that, theoretically speaking, in view of the play's first popularity, should have contained complete satisfaction. It is to be regretted that this cannot be said of it.

The dramatic matter in the script not only draws in several sequences to he strung haphazardly together, but the cast is merely inferred to even the one that took "Experience" out upon the road.

In Young's immortal role we see for example, Dick Barthelmess, whose artistic work as the Chink is "Broken Blossoms" the theatre-going world will long remember. Because, however, this young actor is functionally gifted for the accomplishment of character work—and for the further reason that he lacks much of the buoyancy, the spontaneity which we have come to demand in our histrionic youths, he scarcely even echoes that which Conrad Nagel did for the same part when he interpreted it upon the boards several years back. Even so, Barthelmess gets considerable eagerness into this position, and had we never previously witnessed the part we might have more to favorably report here, but then we did—several times—in company, it is necessary to remember, with other thousands, who will make it just this once more.

Love, Young's sweetheart, is played more sincerely than Marjorie Daw usually manages serious work with her sympathetically, and it is generously said with only a lead in the feminine lead is more than adequate.

John Miltenor and E. J. Ratcliffe contrast with considerable effectiveness as Experience and his son, a capably valuable trait of whom Young brings back to his home valley with him.

Kate Bruce is good as his mother.

Betty Carpenter, Lilian Tushan, R. Senior, Joe Smiley, Fred Hadley, Harry Lane, Helen Ray, Jed Prouty, J. Pursey, Charlie Stenson, Edna Wheaton, Yvonne Routon, Ned Hay, Sybil Carmen, Robert Schable, Nita Naldi, Frank Evans, Frank McCormack, L. R. Wolheim, Agnes Maro, Mrs. Florence Finan, Ina Barnes and Leslie King occupy the numerous symbolic positions which do so much for the story development.

The technical effects, including the art titles are quite superior.

"Experience" will pull through the box office on its title alone.

"THE BLACK PANTHER'S CUB"

Kinema

Ziegfeld Cinema Corporation's presentation of Swinhurne's "Faustine," revised and prepared by Phillip Bartram, is a dreary affair that is too mordid for general satisfaction. Being a story of the Black Panther, a notorious queen of Parisian night life, and of her daughter, who fills her place twenty-five years after the end of the mother's sensational reign without
ON THE BOARDS

Clara Kimball Young has embarked on a vaudeville tour, via the Pantages circuit. Among the filmers now appearing on two-a-day are Juanita Hansen, who opened recently in Minneapolis, and Bessee Love, who will appear here presently in an act written especially for her.

Other photolovers actively engaged in legitimate theatres are Frances X. Bushman and his wife, Beverly Bayne; June Elvidge, Carlyle Blackwell, Lew Cody, Bessee Eytion, Belle Bennett, H. B. Warner, Mac Marsh and Vivian Martin.

WITH BELASCO

Belle Bennett, who shares stellar honors with Walter Ringham, the English actor, in "The Atheist," produced by the United States Moving Pictures Corporation, has been engaged for an important part in a stage play, which David Belasco will produce this fall.

ON BROADWAY, NEW YORK

Rockcliffe Fellowes has forsaken the sunlight arcs for the foot-lights. He will be seen in Kilburn Gordon's stage play, "Pot Luck," on Broadway about mid-October.

BEADINE WITH GOLDYN

William Beadine, recently with Christie Comedies, has been signed to direct "The City Feller," an original screen story by Julian Josephson, which will go into production shortly at the Goldwyn studio.

IN CABANNE PICTURE

SUPPORTS DUPONT

Mary Philbin is playing in support of Miss Dupont in her forthcoming Universal starring picture entitled "Ropes."

IN VAUDVILLE

 Included in the cast of "Fearless Dick," featuring Dick Hatton, are Catherine Craig, Henry J. Hebert, Dick La Reno and Otto Ledever.

Pat O'Malley and Lloyd Whitlock are respectively hero and heavy in "Ropes," starring Miss Dupont, which Paul Scardon is directing for Universal.

William H. Tooker will have the featured role in "The Power Within," just produced by Len Kennedy for the Uplift Film Company at the Hog Island shipyards near Philadelphia.

Mildred Moore, who recently joined the ranks of screen ingenues from the legitimate, has been engaged for a role in the series of two-reelers, which Herbert Blache is directing for Trafalgar.

IN SUPPORT OF MARION DAVIES

Forrest Stanley is playing opposite Marion Davies in her latest playofor Cosmopolitan entitled "Beauty's Worth."

TO MAKE EDUCATIONAL COMEDIES

Bob Kerr, until recently associated with the Hal Roach studios, has been engaged by W. W. Dwyer, general manager of Hamilton-White Comedies, to direct the company's latest two-reel comedy for Educational, production on which started this week with the initial scenes being shot in the Sierra Madre mountains. Park Reis is handling the photography.

LASKY ENGAGES VALENTINO

Rudolph Valentino has been selected to enact the leading masculine role in "Moran of the Lady Letty," George Melford's newest production for Paramount.

SIGNS WITH NEW FIRM

Raymond Hatton has just signed a contract with Robertson and Webb, casting directors, thereby appointing them his future business representatives.

Mr. Hatton will be remembered for his characterization in Cecil B. De Mille's production, "The Whispering Chorus."

He is at present enjoying a brief vacation at the seashore.

J. P. Lockney plays a part in "The Deuce of Spades," Charles Ray's current production.

Ida Darling will soon be seen in Constance Talmadge's "Wedding Bells," about to be released.

Otto C. Kottka has been signed by Realart to play a part in support of Mary Miles Minter.

Hal Cookey is supporting Marion Davies in "Beauty's Worth," under the direction of Robert Vignola.

Grace Wilcox, a member of the news force at Universal City, has resigned, and Caroline Moore has been added to the staff.

Ethel Broadhurst, George Rowe, and "Sunshine Sammy" are supporting Jimmy Parrott in his initial Hal E. Roach comedy.

Lydia Yeamans Titus has returned from Del Monte, where she has been on location with the Cosmopolitan Film Company.

Raymond Cannon will enact a principal part in Goldwyn's all-star production of Julian Josephson's "The City Feller."

Beverly Travers and Edyth Chapman may be seen in Louis Gasnier's "A Wife's Awakening," about to be released by Robertson-Cole.

Anita Davis and Oliver Jones have been engaged by Bob Horner for his forthcoming production for the Western Classic Film Co., as yet untitled.

William A. Strauss and Katherine Spencer are cast in the forthcoming Robertson-Cole Eastern-made, all-star production entitled, "The Barrieade."

Joe and Vera White, William Gillespie, Leo Willis, Mark Jones and Sam Brooks are among those cast in the newest Harry "Snub" Pollard comedy, recently completed at the Hal E. Roach studio.

The Screen Writers’ Forum

Peggy Blackwood

Some said it was due to the mistake in shooting off from the star system, these experts pronounced Americans a nation of hero-worshippers, and opined that the story was purely incidental. What a charge to level at American intelligence! What a blow to our concept of or sensitivity to art! When actual facts prove that the great majority of “stars” were absolutely dead as doorknobs after suffering three successive “weak” stories, it would surely seem that the star system was on a sandy foundation—and that the strength or weakness of the story was the thermometer of every commercial success, laying aside all artistic considerations.

However, Sydney Cohn, president of the association, indicated the present movie output on the grounds of its unhumaness. He deplored the rigid pageantry of our historically panoramic spectacles, and predicted a bang-up smash-up for the M. P. industry unless the producers went back to the real stories of modern life, love and romance—sans thrills, acrobatics, freak settings, and other artificial stimuli. The head of the movie industry in Sweden expressed a belief that the American movie industry was being ruthlessly sacrificed upon the altar of “the happy ending.” He believes that real suspense is impossible whenever and whenever audiences know for a certainty that all’s bound to be well at the final clinch-up.

Photodramatists who have any artistic ideals aching for expression will revel in the Swedish magnate’s spunky truth-telling; surely, the cinema leaf needs levelling if stage plays and short stories and novels, transcribed to the screen, fail to elicit the nation’s patronage or approbation, in what obvious direction lies the salvage of “cinematization”? Perhaps the harvest moon will soon shed its mellowing glow upon the workers in the fertile fields of “the original screen stories,” while a not far distant springtime will find the erstwhile fledgling industry a truly individual art.

THE UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

Those engaged in making super-features, short-reel releases and serials for Universal's program, for its exhibitors are Harry Carey and Priscilla Dean, specializing on Universal-Jewel productions; Gladys Walton, Frank Mayo, Marie Prevost, Hoot Gibson, Max du Pont and Herbert Wilinson, producing Universal special attractions, and Eddie Polo, Eileen Sedgwick and Art Acord making chapter screen narratives, with Lee Moran and Bert Roach making short-reel feature comedies.

MOHAMMEDAN RITE MOTION-PICTURED

Baron and Baroness Von Bissing, their two children, Commander A. G. Foote (re-tired) of the Royal Navy, Charles Wakefield Cadman and Louis Gottschalk, were spectators recently at the screening in three sections of the religious procession of Mohammedans for the "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," by Ferdinand Earle.

IN PROLOGUE

Marie Prevost and King Daggott are working on a prologue in which they will appear personally at the premiere of Miss Prevost's recent Universal feature, "Moonlight Fellows," which opens at Tally's Theatre on Monday, September 19th.

SPEAKS ON CENSORSHIP

Relative to the agitation for and against film censorship John Griffin Wray recently addressed a Los Angeles woman's club on the subject.

ANNA Q. NILSSON IN SWEDISH ADAPTATION OF IBSEN PLAYS

Only recently back from a visit to her native Sweden, Anna Q. Nilsson expects to return there to be starred in a series of Ibsen plays.

ELINOR GLYN WRITES ANOTHER FOR GLORIA SWANSON

Elinor Glyn is writing another story for Gloria Swanson. It will be called "Beyond the Rocks."

NEW DEVELOPING DEPARTMENT

The new Hal E. Roach laboratories are now in operation and future Roach productions will be developed on the studio lot.

JOSEPHSON SAYS

Julien Josephson, scenario writer and author of "The City Feller," a forthcoming William Beaudine production for Goldwyn, is vacationing, having recently completed the continuity for Arza Vezierska's story, "Hungry Hearts."

HAROLD OLIVER "IN DUTCH"

Harold J. Oliver, designer and constructor of the Willist Studio in Culver City, has recently contracted to put up fifty Windmill stores for the Andale Kanup chain of bakeries.

Jose El Sanchez, representative of Madrid and Mexico City publications, has visited the Robert Brunton studios and interviewed Jackie Coogan for a series of stories.

Dexter to Vacation Abroad

After finishing his role in "Grand Larceny," at the Goldwyn studios, Mr. Dexter will join the motion picture star exodus abroad.

A. P. I. AGAINST PICTURE REGULATION

Enumerating six fundamental reasons, the Affiliated Picture Interests of California has handed to the city council of Los Angeles a communication urging the repeal of an ordinance "regulating the public exhibition of moving and motion pictures and creating the office of Commissioner of Films."

The Affiliated Picture Interests represents producers, exhibitors, distributors, directors, actors, authors, artisans and others.

"Affairs of Anatol" Soon at Rialto

"The Affairs of Anatol," a Cecil B. De Mille production, will follow "Experience" at Grauman's Rialto. Truly an all-star cast will interpret the characters of the play; namely: Wallace Reid, Elliott Dexter, Marjorie Main, Theodore Roberts, Theodore Kosloff, Raymond Hatton, Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels, Wanda Hawley and Agnes Ayres. Jeanie MacPherson wrote the story, suggested by Arthur Schnitzler's play of the same name, also the subtitles for this production.

Blanche Rose has a part in Charles Ray's current photoplay.

Fannie Ward is at present in Italy with her husband, Jack Dean.

Helen Holmes will soon be seen in a new photodrama, "A Girl's Decision."

Harry Kerr, assistant general manager of the "U." is seriously ill at his home in Hollywood.

Anna Heloise, pupil of Ernest Belcher, danced in three numbers at a Jonathan Club dinner-dance, recently.

Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis were dinner guests recently of Captain Sexton on the U. S. S. Frederick.

Kate Lester, of the Goldwyn stock players, has returned from Yosemite, where she spent her vacation.

Antrim Short and Thomas Jefferson will enact important parts in "Beauty's Worth," the current Marion Davies production.

Vitagraph will entertain a number of men from the Ninety First Division, a reunion of which is to be held in Los Angeles, September 24th and 25th.

Andrew Arbuckle is supporting Charles Ray in the latter's dramatization of "The Deuce of Spades," the Charles E. Van Loan story.

Sir Gilbert Parker, English novelist, has left for his home in England after a year among the picture colonists. Sir Gilbert will return next season to do more screen writing.

Hal E. Roach has recently returned from a business trip to New York, where he plans to increase production at his Culver City plant, taking on several additional companies in October.

Robertson-Cole announces that September 25th is the release date for "A Wife's Awakening," a Louis Gasnier production. Fritz Brunette and William P. Carlton characterize the principal roles in this original story by Jack Cunningham.
INCE AND SENNETT TO START PRESENTLY

At the Thomas H. Ince studio the following stars, directors and writers have recently completed plays and are about to begin new productions: Hobart Bosworth, King Vidor, Florence Vidor, Douglas MacLean, Lloyd Hughes, Madge Bellamy, C. Gardner Sullivan and John Griffith Wray.

The first comedy production on Mr. Ince’s new producing program is to be “The Hottentot,” William Collier’s recent stage success, written by Victor Mapes and Collier. A cast of star and character players will be signed by the time the story is ready for production.

Mack Sennett’s studio is about to commence productions featuring Mabel Normand, Ben Turpin, Phyllis Haver and Billy Bevan. Among the well-known Sennett players who will be seen are Harriet Hammond, Kathryn McGuire and Mildred June.

AL GREEN COMMENCES JACK PICKFORD STORY

Al. Green, who, with Jack Pickford, directed Mary Pickford in “Little Lord Fauntleroy,” has completed the cutting of that picture at the Robert Brunton studios. Mr. Green left recently for New York, where he will direct Jack Pickford in “The Tailor-Made Man.” The exteriors of this picture will be taken in and around New York and upon the completion of this work Mr. Green will bring his company back here, where the picture will be finished at the Brunton studios.

CHILD STAR

Little Rita Rogan, the six-year-old actress of “The Wild Goose,” “The Inside of the Cup,” “The Atheist,” and other recent screen releases, is to be featured in a series of productions written especially for her. George Rogan, her father, a New York newspaper man, will collaborate with several screen writers in preparing them for production and the United States Moving Pictures Corporation will picturize them.

"THE DUMB-BELL" COMPLETED

W. W. Rarity, general manager of Hamilton-White Comedies, Inc., announces the completion of Lloyd Hamilton’s fourth two-reel comedy for Educational, entitled “The Dumb-bell,” directed by Hugh Fay. Irene Dalton has the leading feminine role opposite the star.

COSMOPOLITAN STAR WORKING HERE

Marion Davies, the Cosmopolitan star, is here from New York, and production has started at the Hollywood studios on her forthcoming picture, entitled “Beauty’s Worth,” directed by Robert Vignola.

H. C. WITWER SERIES

“The Leather Pushers,” by H. C. Witwer, is to be made into a series of two-reel dramas. H. L. Messmore and Harry Pollard will produce them.

MAKING NEW ONE

The Ann Little Company, filming “Nanette of the North” for Ben Wilson Productions, is at Palm Springs working on a new episode.

The Vitagraph production, “The Son of Wallingford,” has received its final editing and cutting and is ready for release.

NEW YORK PREMIERE

“Bits of Life,” a recently completed Marshall Neilan production, will have its premiere at the Strand Theatre, New York City.

AT UNIVERSAL

Harry Carey will start presently on his forthcoming feature, “Man to Man,” which Stuart Paton will direct.

Frank Mayo is using the Children’s Hospital for the opening of the “Dr. Jim,” the photodrama upon which production recently started.

Gladys Walton, with Jack Perrin in her support, has started work on “The Gun-Sniper.”

Edward Laemmle is making the ninth episode of “Winners of the West,” starring Art Acord. Myrtle Lind plays opposite the star.

The cast is being assembled for “The Cradle of the Geronimo,” in which Eileen Sedgwick is to be starred, under the direction of Edward Kull. The narrative was written by George Plympton.

ARLIS IN NEW PRODUCTION

George Arliss is to star in a screen version of “Idle Hands,” by Earl Derr Biggers, author of “Seven Keys to Baldpate.” Forrest Halsey and Henry Kolker, who respectively wrote and directed the picturization of “Diareel” for Mr. Arlis, will act in a similar capacity in this new production.

ANOTHER REX BEACH STORY COMPLETED

R. William Neill is completing “The Iron Trail,” the Rex Beach story which United Artists will release as an R. William Neill production.

On the east are Wyndham Standing, Thurston Hall, Reginald Denny, Alma Tell and Betty Carpenter. Ernest Haller is doing the camera work. Bert Seibel is assisting Mr. Neill.

CINART TO RELEASE BORDER FEATURE FILMS

The Border Feature Film Corporation, of Bisbee, Ariz., has signed a contract with Cinart Company for a series of seventeen two-reel Western pictures and Grant Merrill, five of which have already been completed.

HOXIE STARTS

Jack Hoxie, star of Ben Wilson Features, returned recently from his transcontinental personal appearance tour and left at once for Yuma, Arizona, to commence work on the opening scenes for his forthcoming production entitled “Hare-Flisted.”

The filming of “The Daughter of Brahma,” the J. W. Frothingham production from the pen of L. A. Wylie, will probably be completed this week.

“Wild Fire,” a book by Zane Grey, will be the next picture to be made by R. H. Hampton. Claire Adams, Robert McKim and Carl Cantvooort will enact the principal roles.

The Dixie Bayne Company, under the direction of Wayne Mack, is at Keen Camp and Hemet, where its second story is under production, the title of which is “The Rose of the West.”

PREPARING STUART VEHICLE

Madge Tyrone, who edited the John M. Stahl production, “The Child Thou Gavest Me,” is at present writing a screen version of Countess Baryczynska’s “Rose o’ the Sea” as a future Anita Stewart vehicle for Associated First National.

back on behalf of instruction and culture may be as aimless as a cigarette butt on the bosom of the Atlantic ocean.

There is nothing to warrant a belief that great photodramatists will be made-over novelists and playwrights. The old adage about "there are as many good fish in the sea as ever were caught" still holds true. In another generation—perhaps before—we will have men and women writing exclusively for the screen who are the peers of not only Cohant and Fitch and Augustus Thomas, but of Hauptmann and Moliere—and let me hasten humbly to add, Eugene O'Neill.

The Eternal Controversy

Tolstoi once wrote a most Christian essay under the caption of "What is Art?" in which he set out to prove that all conceptions of art were purely arbitrary, and that it was impossible to give Art a fixed definition. The typical average American is simply not concerned with the subject; he is not an analyst, and prefers to wander blissfully, child-like through life—laughing, crying, stumbling—in an objective universe. Ask him: "Is the motion picture an art?" and he'll think you're getting silly, as though you'd asked him: "How high is up?" But inquire as to his favorite movie star, and he'll regale you with eulogistic remarks concerning the Fairbanks smile or the Swanson coiffure.

We are for the most part a nation of success-worshippers; most Americans like Fairbanks or Ray or Hart or Mary Pickford through a wish to be like those successful people. They resolve the motion picture around a few personalities, and attend De Mille or Griffith photoplays because they anticipate a certain color and sentimental reaction. They know instinctively that they will see an interesting screen story, subconsciously realizing that these eminent directors are discriminate in their story selection—but they also want to see the story because of the distinct personal flavor with which these directors liberally saturate it, and because the story ends happily and poetically.

When one considers the immense popularity of such magazines as The American, The Saturday Evening Post, The New Success—and the popular interpretation and usage of such widespread ethical movements as Christian Science and New Thought—it is quickly seen that what the American is primarily interested in is health and wealth.

Read the advertisements in the popular magazines, realize the tremendous vogue of Dr. Frank Crane, Orison Swett Marden—and the answer is written crystal clear: the average American is not interested in Art, which connotes a study of Life, but in struggle and achievement. He prefers being an actor to a spectator. He would rather be a poet than write one—a poem of material success. And success must never be tinged with naughtiness or unhappiness.

In the Los Angeles Examiner there recently appeared an article under the caption "The Poor Producer," in which the writer was pictured as manouevring his frail cargo of scenarios between the censors and the public, with a result that only six of the thirty-six primary situations were left—the other thirty being naughty or unhappy and therefore subject to taboo. The ancient Greeks were pictured as laughing in their graves at the censors, for they—the Greeks—"thought it more important to have ideas than censors." Can you imagine one of the early Greek intellectuals sitting through "Pollyanna"? He would feel his mentality insulted in a world where "everything turned out happily," and would promptly gulp the fatal hemlock to force an unhappy ending on literature.

But the ancient Greeks lived before the age of Gene Stratton Porter, Harold Bell Wright, or even E. F. Rose. The pagan conception of Art and Beauty transcends considerations of so-called good and evil, refusing to limit the view of life to a window on the right side of the house.

What is Art? Is it to be perceived by that grotesque mental gyration which prompts H. L. Mencken to attribute higher worth to a single chapter in Conrad's "Heart of Darkness" than to all the children born in Iowa since the Civil War—or is it to be perceived through the faithful exercise of the modern version of Christian virtue?

The question will never be decided. In the meantime, it will behove photodramatists to write from their hearts—and evolution will take care of the whole art problem, recording progress (or change) through the line-ups in front of the box offices.

Censorship

Censorship will affect the writer considerably, despite the rather surface considerations of the matter indulged in recently by one of our film stars of "the deadlier sex." She carelessly disposed of the subject by stating that the directors would be affected, not the writers. Her conclusions were based on the assumption that it is never the story itself, but the interpretations and naught interpretations of the directors that make the story subject to the censors' scissors. Perhaps she is partly correct. However, the issue is really deeper rooted. There are two factors in this country which are at each other's throats continually—those whose natural conservatism leads them to respect traditions and customs, and (Continued on page 17)

“Determination,” the big screen production which took more than a year in the making, will be put out as a super-special this fall.

Allen Holubar has left for New York to confer with First National executives concerning the scenario on which Mr. Holubar will commence production shortly.

The Charles R. Seeling Company has returned from Mt. Shasta where exteriors were filmed for “The Curse of the Timberlands,” featuring “Bigboy” Williams.

Bob Horner, directing for the western Classic Film Company, has left for mountain locations with his cast, including Bill Patton, Tom Pickford, Edith Rush and Fred Hirons.

June Elvidge, Lydia Yeaman, Titus, Alleen Manning and Martha Mattox are among those cast in the Cosmopolitan production, “Beauty’s Worth,” starring Marion Davies.

R. A. Walsh is engaged in filming waterfront scenes for his photoplay version of Peter B. Kyne’s novel, “Kindred of the Dust.”
Furthermore logging camp scenes will be made in Northern California.

Grace Davison, whose picture, “Love, Hate and a Woman,” has just been released, is at work on a second feature production under the direction of Charles T. Horan. It is tentatively titled, “The Girl That Came
and those who are trying to change the social, economic, and political order of things. It is the first group who are favoring censorship, paradoxically enough, because the American motion picture has for the most part adhered to the codes of Polyanna and Horatio Alger; however, the World War and ensuing events have made them panicily, distrustful, wary. The other group has perhaps a too militant minority for its own good; it has scornfully derided monogamous love, and advocated a modus of living and thinking that is free an air and as unrestrained; it laughs at what it terms the Puritanism and insularity of the American consciousness; far from wanting motion pictures censored, this group has singled out such film productions as “Way Down East” and subjected them to the barbs of wit and irony, branding them as stillingly conventional, and false to life.

It is not my purpose to champion either group; there is unquestionably a middle path to follow. However, I do say that if the conservatives enforce censorship a death-blow will be struck at American art, for they will not stop at the photoplay, but will in all probability advance against letters, sculpture, and other arts. They represent for the most part a moderate living, stolid citizenry, who in the past have contributed much to the sturdiness and business enterprise of the race, but theirs is not the poetic or dramatic conception of life. To them all art must subserv a moral end, i.e., moral according to a definition of morality as an arbitrary code of ethics.

The other group adheres more to the Greecian ideal of Beauty as the only morality; it is from this genus that Shelley, Byron, Keats, Shakespeare, Moliere, Wagner, Chopin have sprung. The photodramatist who shares any of the liberal thought of the day will find every avenue of expression closed to him if censorship is enforced—with the concurrent release into the stupidity of the Middle Ages, for the very nature of Conservatism precludes creative art. Our Epworth Leaguers cannot paint life in bright hues, nor the drama of love and death in convincing perspective.

If censorship is defeated, the public itself by its attendance will always proclaim its sympathies; probably neither group will totally enforce its philosophy and psychology. Moreover, those who have faith in the Master Adjustor do not want censorship; for in the last analysis only that which is essential survives. The photodramatist must write a story that will meet with public approval if he wishes to continue selling his stories to the studio editors. But if hemmed in by the numerous “don’ts” of censorship he won’t achieve artistic results—and he won’t please anybody.

Evolution is Slow

In its infancy, music borrowed much from the literary and painting arts for its sustaining framework; history today repeats itself, with the cinema borrowing from literature and the drama. The early art of drama and music is forgotten; just some day, will the formative period of the photoplay be dimmed by Time. The photoplay has taken root in the soil of literature and the stage, but its topmost branches will flower with the new art of the photodramatist. When the motion picture is an art “on its own”—say a decade from now—the film plays of that day will surpass our own as far as those of today outsoar the efforts following upon the cinema’s inception. The photodramatist who has a few unsold scripts in his desk may soon dispose of them at a bigger price than he expected, just as does the owner of land who has held on until a boon period. Those not so sanguine should study their Darwin more thoroughly, realize the stages all forms of life pass through in attaining individuality—then closely analyze the history of the motion picture to date. The motion picture, like the individual in the processes of nature, must get before giving. It must build itself into many favorable elements, all of which will blend into a new and different thing, a new art—which will then commence to give the world new sensations of beauty out of its own fulness; then the song of the new and true photoplay will be sung by the photodramatist.

GOLDWYN STAFF ADDITIONS

Additions to the Goldwyn scenario staff include: Agnes Smith, former motion picture critic, who will write sub-titles; Emile Forst, linguist and photoplaywright, who has been engaged as an expert in foreign literature; Hope Loring and Mrs. E. Magnus Ingelton, continuity writers, who will adapt stories to the screen.

PANTHEON PICTURES ENGAGES FRENCH AVIATRIX

Mile. Andree Peyre, aviatrix and French screen star, has been engaged for the principal feminine role by Pantheon Pictures Corp. in their next feature production, as yet unnamed. The story and scenario has been written by George Dubois Proctor.

“TRISTAN AND ISOLDE” PICTURIZED

Grand opera will again be on the screen for “Tristan and Isolde” has been picturized by Louis Nalpas and a French company of players, and will shortly be shown in this country as a special. The music score will be based on the famous Wagner opera.

EXECUTIVE ON SCREEN

W. S. Smith, general manager of Western Vitagraph, recently appeared as a judge in “The Come Back,” William Duncan’s forthcoming picture.

S. E. V. Taylor is to produce a Jack London story, with an Indian girl as the star.

Theodore Kosloff will handle a principal character role in “The Lane That Had No Turning,” starring Agnes Ayres.

Dorothy Dalton will be the featured player in “Moran of the Lady Letty,” George Melford’s forthcoming Lasky production.

A Few Statistics

“This huge increase is due directly to higher rentals—a condition which increased production costs required and which greater patronage at higher admission prices permitted.

“When statistics for the current year are available it will be found that the producers’ revenue has been lowered materially. Even if conditions during the coming Fall and Winter permitted of a return to the old order, the record of the past two months is such that the mark of last year will be missed by many millions.

“The government’s record during the fiscal year ending June 30 last doubtlessly will stand for some time as the high-water mark of distributors’ receipts. And it is with this thought in mind that operations for the coming season must be carried on.”

Pictures for Los Angeles' Unfortunates

We, of the cinema producing business, are accustomed to speak often and at great length upon the motion picture’s extensive influence for good, both from the standpoints of general education and diversion. This, we point out proudly as a natural result of the fact that our audiences, whose various desires and needs are always so carefully considered by us, contain representatives of every phase and stage of life. You see there is much to be said upon the subject of our assistance to struggling humanity, and we are wont to say it all, for we derive much gratification therefrom. But, as we talk, do we stop to realize the full extent of our following and our responsibilities to at least one division of it? Some of us have done; many of us probably never will.

A small group of the former class some years ago decided that if the photoplay was the healthy juvenile’s most popular form of entertainment, it should prove doubly enthralling and broadening to the unfortunate hospital children whose long days of dreary existence were so inadequately filled. Then developed plans for the advent of projecting machines and suitable screen material in the Los Angeles Childrens’ Hospital. All funds were privately contributed and the good work commenced and progressed. Its success and expansion into other types of institution may be read below in a recently received letter from Mr. George E. Pelton, whose interest and industry has engineered without recompense the project of increasing our scope in this city. Mr. Pelton’s field is exceedingly wide and must have constant care in consequence of which he will continually be in need of funds to keep it covered. Here is an excellent opportunity for some of us to back up our favorite theory and conversational topic with an experiment as to just how much our accomplishments actually benefit the work-a-day, suffering world.

Those who have it in their hearts to help a good thing along, a thing peculiarly our own, may communicate with Mrs. Fisher, Superintendent of the Los Angeles Orphans Home.

Mr. Pelton’s letter should serve as inspiration to the many big hearts for which our profession is famous.

“My Dear Mr. Cannon: On the first of August, 1919, I began showing motion pictures to the children at the Children’s Hospital. Weekly since then about 9:30 each Sunday morning, I have shown them pictures. Through your assistance and the assistance of your friends of the Griffith company, and a small contribution from myself, I was enabled to buy equipment for the shows at the Children’s Hospital.

In the early days I paid my own expenses and used my own equipment to also show pictures regularly twice a week at the County Hospital and at the Barlow Sanatorium. Mr. Jesse Lasky very generously paid for a new machine for this Sanatorium and has for a long time defrayed all of the expenses in connection with the semi-weekly shows and has furnished all of the films used, entirely at his own expense. He has given hundreds and hundreds of tuberculosis patients much joy.

For about a year and a half there have been weekly shows for the people at the County Farm and for the past six months there have also been weekly shows for some of the mental cases at the Farm.

Also pictures are shown from time to time by Mr. Haring, of the County Hospital organization, at the sanatorium for tuberculosis patients at Olive View. It is our hope to get these shows on a weekly basis and to have permanent equipment installed at the sanatorium.

Mr. Lloyd R. Macy, of Pasadena, has given the greatest assistance in making the shows permanent. He has enlisted the interest of his friends and is in charge of the funds which maintain the shows.

Just recently we have begun showing pictures at the Los Angeles Orphans’ Home on El Centro in Hollywood, and with the co-operation of Mr. Bert Lytell, of the Metro Studio, and Mr. William Keefe of the Brunton organization, each of whom has agreed to help pay for the machine needed, it is going to be possible to make this show a permanent feature of the Orphanage.

The various film companies through their distributing offices, have furnished their best films without one cent of compensation and I feel deeply indebted to them for their co-operation.

Eight machines are in use each week, upon my schedule, showing pictures to sick and helpless people who otherwise would not have this mental diversion, which they so greatly need and which helps them to forget their pain. If well people with many daily interests get joy from the pictures at the theatres, how much more must
COLVIN IN ROME IN ULTRA INTERESTS

William G. Colvin for four years acting in an advisory capacity to Ernest Shipman and associates of Ultra Productions and exploitations is en route for Rome.

While abroad Mr. Colvin will confer with Pina Menichelli concerning her future productions; also with Enrico Guazzoni, the director of "Quo Vadis," who is about to embark upon other productions for American exploitation.

HOSIER PRODUCTIONS AT BRUNTON

Paul Hosier Productions has signed to produce H. H. Van Loan's comedy-drama of five-reel titled "Mile. Dorette," which will start presently at the Brunton Studios.

Willie Mae Carson will enact the feminine lead and George Streeter whose last work was with the all-star feature, "The Glory of Youth," just released through First National, will play the male lead.

A. P. COMPLETING TRANSFER PLANS

E. B. Johnson, head of the legal department of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is expected to arrive here presently.

Mr. Johnson has been in San Francisco for several days supervising the transfer of the Associated Producers exchange into the First National offices. He will perform a like transfer here, and also confer with John McCormick, western representative of First National, regarding future distribution policies and plans.

NEW SHIRLEY MASON PICTURE

Shirley Mason, Fox star, has started production on "Little Aliens," under the direction of Jack Ford. Miss Mason recently returned from Catalina Island, where she spent a vacation upon the completion of "Jackie."

"Little Aliens" is a production of the Fox scenario department.

PREPARING SECOND

"The Curse of the Timberland," and will start presently on a new picture, "In Arizona," again featuring "Big Boy" Williams.

Mr. Seeling accompanied by Mr. Williams has left for Arizona to select locations for this forthcoming production.

SCHWARTZ PRODUCTIONS LEASES ASTRA STUDIOS

E. Schwartz, Manager of the Schwartz Productions, has leased the Astra Studio from Louis Gasnier and is now filming the first of a series of eight-five reel Westerns with an all-star cast.

Mr. M. J. Lynch is at the camera. The stories are being written and directed by Fred Caldwell.

AT GOLDwyn

Irvin Willat started last week on "Gouverneur Morris" story, "Yellow Men and Gold." Cullen Landis is busy on "The City Feller," by Julian Josephson, which William Beaudine is directing.

Bert Offord and J. P. Lockney are included in the cast of Charles Ray's current production.

Western Pictures Exploitation company will give out the releasing dates presently of the series of two reel pictures known as "The Missions of California," made by Charles W. Seeling.

AT REALART

Constance Binney is scheduled to start next week upon an original story by Harvey Thew. The Wanda Hawley company has left for Laguna Beach to film a sequence of water scenes. This story in which Miss Hawley is supported by T. Roy Barnes will be a February release.

Bebe Daniels is nearing the completion of her current picture which Chester M. Franklin is directing. Douglas Doty wrote the scenario based on an original story by Katherine Pinkerton and Grace Drew.

AT METRO

Alice Lake is busy on her current picture entitled "The Hole in the Wall" being produced by Maxwell Karger.

"Seeing's Believing," written for Viola Dana by R. C. Taylor, will be produced as the star's next picture. Harry Beaumont, who directed Miss Dana's two latest pictures, will begin work on the new production within a few days.

Bert Lytell recently completed the fight episode in "Keep off the Grass," his current photoplay. Virginia Valli plays opposite the star.

AT VITAGRAPH

Larry Senon and members of his comedy company returned this week from Lake Hume where most of the scenes of his latest comedy, "The Saw Mill," were filmed.

The first three episodes of the serial, "Breaking Through," in which Carmel Myers and Wallace MacDonald co-star, were recently released.

Earle Williams is on a motor trip through the northern part of the state following the completion for Vitagraph of "Lucky Carson."

AT UNIVERSAL

George L. Cox, recently signed by Irving G. Thalberg, general manager, will direct Marie Prevost in her next picture "Princess Virtue," about to start production.

Work is progressing on "Ropes," in which Miss du Pont is starring under the direction of Paul Scardon.

AT CHRISTIE

Dobby Vernon recently completed "Fresh from the Farm," a rural comedy and has started on another comedy under the direction of Harold Beaudine.

Viera Daniel is at work in her fourth comedy after a restful spell of four weeks. Miss Daniel's recent pictures are "Let Me Explain," "Un for Life," and "A Pair of Sexes," the second-named being now ready for release, while a "A Pair of Sexes" will be released in October.

HAMILTON-WHITE COMEDIES

The latest all-star comedy will be completed presently under the direction of Jack White. This picture, as yet untitled, is the fifth of the new series for Educational.

The new Lloyd Hamilton production is scheduled to commence this week. Hugh Fay will direct and Irene Dalton will appear in the leading feminine role.

D. & M. Productions will release its first all star picture, recently completed, through Clark Commeilus, Inc., of New York.

Current Reviews

"CAPPY RICKS"

Grauman's

Peter B. Kyne's brisk sea story, "Cappy Ricks," which has been made into an exhilarating movie by Paramount stars Thomas Meighan in a more vigorous and far more pleasing role than he has held down for some time. The flavor of the briny deep, for the picturing of which Kyne is noted, has been caught from his original and interpreted into the celluloid with all of the freshness which should attend its satisfaction. Tom Fornam's direction leaves nothing undone and the photography is very good.

Meighan's personality, as has been suggested, could have few better opportunities than it has in the virile Matt Peasey, mate on one of Cappy Ricks' ships, who gains for himself a captivity. In this position he is well supplied with romantic love interest, fists encounters and the to-be-expected rescue sequence. Altogether Peasey is most likable.

Many appropriately handled feminine leads on the order of Florris Ricks have won for Agnes Ayres more deserved stardom than several that the Lasky-Zukor combination has seen fit to effect in the past year or two. Miss Ayres is typically charming and easy in the part.

Charles Abbe cleverly creates a pepppy old character for the fussy title role. Cappy himself, while Hugh Cameron very effectively values his with his excellent comedy partner Murphy, Peasey's loyally admiring aide kick.

Bull Montana had best look to his laurels if he wishes to retain them for a new contestant upon the order of his, set however over what must surely be seven feet of solid framework, has appeared abroad, or rather upon the silversheet. We have not this eccentric individual's cognomen, but he plays ex-Cappy well the Swede captain who would dispossess Matt of his newly acquired authority. He is a good touch.

Several such offerings as this will mean much for its star at this time, for he has been slumping a bit.

"THE CHILD THOU GAVEST ME"

Kinema

Louis B. Mayer's production, "The Child Thou Gavest Me," is that type of heavy problem play which is at present quite out of date. However, Perry N. Vercruff presents in his story several new angles that may justify its picturization to some. The unusually involved plot is too very coincidental to convince the more incredulous and too vague in some of its explanations to be clear to the less imaginary. Other weak points are unnecessary repetition in the subtitles and a dragged out suspense that loses a great deal in the process.

John M. Stahl's intent is not always perceptible in the direction, but this work is a powerful improvement over his previous "The Woman in His House" and other of his work that we have observed.

Little Richard Headrick in the name part is a credible impression of Mr. Stahl's previous "Bobby," his offering, is shamelessly padded is really an excellent thing in that it is the one entertaining, happy piece of action in the play. Little Richard is exceptionally competent and has a real future ahead.

Barbara Castleon as Norma Berkeley, the married mother of the illegitimate child, has some beautiful dramatic acting to her credit. She always does a great deal with such work.

"MOONLIGHT FOLLIES"

Tally's

Marie Prevost's initial starring production for Universal is "Moonlight Follies," a "Peril-Val Wilder story scenarized by A. P. Younger. This jolly little romance of a flip little flapper contains no apparent reasonableness and by far more light entertainment than wholesome. Without coming under the classification of "farece" it "kicks" all of the seriousness of life which is not especially wise, but it is bound to prove more than pleasing to the thinner calibre of audience.

King Baggoit has treated the consequent subject fittingly in his direction and with real foresight he keeps things progressing evenly to the end.

Miss Prevost's characterization of Nan Rutledge is comparatively consistent and always animated. The fact that just such a girl as the new star portrays here doesn't run at large often or long is of little import and not her fault, anyway. Miss Prevost is an able comedienne and will speedily collect an admirable following.

Clyde Fillmore in our mind is far too valuable to waste upon such a role as Tony Griswold, the male lead. However, Tony is an aggressive asset to the list of characters in the story, and Fillmore's personality bears him easily through his situations.

George Fisher in Irene Smith, one of his unusual "unnecessary" heavies is even more amusing than usual. Perhaps his "crying jack" calls forth more "serious" mirth than any other part of his work.

Clasca Hallock's, Nan's sympathetic divvorcee friend is pleasingly done by Marie Crisp, who could not be better cast.

Irene and Fruen's diabolically rendered blustering father, Rutledge, Sr., completes the list of players.

Doré Glennon photographed, "Moonlight Follies" with an uneven result, i.e., some of the camera work is above average; again it is quite unsatisfactory.

"ACTION"

Superba

A speedy western romance which, although cut out upon the old, old order, relieves itself somewhat by utilizing a goodly amount of anadulterated comedy. Its story development is "Action," Hoot Gibson's first five-reel Universal starring picture. Jack Ford has handled this comedy as well as several very realistic thrills in the scenario to very good advantage and altogether has done a great deal with the J. Allen Dunn story. It is unfortunate that so much Universal cutting shows a more careless for often, as in this case, it forces that organization's work out of the technically correct channel.

Gibson is a very agreeable cowboy to watch and his work as Sandy Brouke, the agile hero in this story, is more than sufficient. He is a thoroughly likable comedian and has a solid sense of humor. Although he is essentially a western comedian, he is also a good actor and is quite able to carry the roles of J. Plimso, the inevitable saloon proprietor and Mirandy Meekin, a town busy body. They are both excellent.

Charles Newton, Jim Corey, Ed Jones and Byron Munson do minor parts.

There isn't a doubt but that "Action" will attract and please those who yet lean toward its type of photoplay.

NEW CHRISTIE FOREIGN CONTRACTS

Christie Film Sales, Ltd. of London, England, announces the renewal of Christie contracts with the Gaumont Film Company for the release of Christie two-reel comedies in Great Britain. Gaumont is already using the first series of 24 Christie two-reel comedies distributed by Educational in America.

BOB HORNOR STARTS NEW ONE

Bob Hornor, who is directing a series of western dramas for the Western Classic Film Company, has completed his current subject and has started production on "The Heart of Texas Pat," featuring Tom Pickford and Mary Pickford.

Mabel Normand is expected to return to the Bennett lot early in October to begin work on a successor to "Molly O."

Members of the Photoplaywrights enjoyed a picnic at Orange County Park recently, to celebrate the merger between the Photoplaywrights and the Palmer Students Club.

NEW HORIZONS

In the average play or photoplay, the problem or problems confronting the characters are sometimes solved within the initial curtain. In this way the audience is enabled to depart at the end of the performance or presentation without taking away any measure of perplexity.

The photoplay dealing with the utterly obvious, with all its elements sharply defined, and with a "satisfactory" which is a complete solution, may be relished by the majority of people, but I have a sneaking hunch that a few screen tales a la "The Lady or the Tiger?" might successfully woo a populace essentially changeable and capricious.

Of course, as far as artistic qualifications go, the bigger type of photoplay will be the one wherein no attempt is made to solve any problems; where the very ending is vague and insipid; where dainty, irritatingly! Consider the feelings of an audience after witnessing a photoplay which terminates with a young man and a young woman on a moonlit precipice, in an entanglement which allows of no extrication—except—and here the most faintest breath of hope could be allowed to lightly stir within them—reflected in their eyes or in a sudden gesture, as the scene fades into the word "Finis."

What could be possible around family firesides! Such a photoplay would be as Life itself, always unfinished, always incomplete. It would linger in people's memories, it would invite discussion, and provoke wide comment and wider attendance. The problem has been transferred from the shoulders of the characters on the screen to the audience. It is theirs to ponder, to wonder if—

In all great works of art there are blurry depths, horizons beyond horizons, some strange, remote element that does not exhaust interest at one seeing or hearing. I have yet to see the photoplay capable of arousing the uneasiness of spirit which results from a reading of certain books in which there is a shadowy feel and movement towards the unknowable—or even the unthinkable! In anything obvious one is consciously aware of the finite hemming-in. In a work of art where the vein of thought remains constant, there is always a dimly suggested beyondness, in realms of raveled beauty—or ugliness.

I am thinking of two short stories I read during Marshall's plan in the inception of "Horse Life." Both of them could be transcribed to the screen. There might not be any material in either of them for five-reel photodramas, but what astounding, revolutionary two-reeler could be made from them. The stories I speak of are "The Leaky Plow" by Theodore Dreiser and "The Plumber of Malata," by Joseph Conrad.

In the third and final episode of "While New York Slept," which Fox produced, there was the terrific figure of a paralytic—a choked and smouldering volcano, suggesting sinister possibilities—possibilities in the most literal sense, generating that everlasting artistic glory of that celluloid fragment of Life. But the old man was ever an inscrutable, potential force—his voice, his manner and the potent throb of his intense presence constituting a nervous, sustained suspense. Here was the life of Eugene in a senseless, visionary setting, always on the brink of a miracle, but which was all too often baffled, an inopportunet insect in a seething immensity.

Let us hope that the idea originated by Marshall—a plan in the inception of "Horse Life"—that of introducing one strange, unusual or tragic story in a chain of five dis-tinct stories, the other four representing romance, comedy, adventure, melodrama—will spread, opening up an endless vista of subtler art expression for screen writers whose imaginations seek new horizons. And some day, in future distant centuries, there will arise from this germ the screen writer who will abolish—all horizons.

TRASH

Every photodramatist should by all means see "God's Country and the Law"—in fact, should be forced to see it, in order that he may leave the theatre cursing inwardly, and somehow chastened: the more he turns this photoplay over in his mind, the more will he be determined to never, never, never write anything like it. After the American photodrama has been partially won over to photoplays, after witnessing "The Kid" and "The Four Horsemen" and "Broken Blossoms," along may be this here "God's Country and the Law" of aspiration. If it had been intended as a half whimsical, half grotesque comedy, it might have "popped by" but... well, what's the use?

With educational institutions from coast to coast offering courses in photoplay writing—conspicuously Columbia and the University of Southern California—and many of the young idea studying the same through correspondence, there should be a law passed against such earnest students being in any way intimidated to believe that "God's Country and the Law" is the kind of story to write. For such a photoplay reduces Life itself to an absurdity.

Mr. Curwood or the scenarist wasted no time in "subtle art" when brewing this bad tasting concoction: a typical Mack Sennetish villain with Mack Swain mustaches and Hank Mann eyes, is introduced as the one "snake" whose wriggling shadow darkens the bright sunshine of God's own country. God's good taste and choice of peoples has been questioned often, but I am inclined to absolve the Deity in this case by believing that he has been unable to give Western Canada and its inhabitants to anyone, so has made another of His customary sacrifi-ces and kept the country for himself.

Now, for the story. A young married woman—very, very sixteenish and very, very innocent—has been seen abandon through beautiful groves and on the marge of a woodland lake. Her apparel is very abbreviated, displaying to considerable advantage her marvelously bare legs; this little married elf's flimsy bit of dress is of postage stamp proportions, perhaps covering slightly more of her anatomy than a one-piece bathing suit would have covered. She has a gay, cheerful, wholesome young French-Canadian husband.

Surely it is a travesty to depict such a man, even through Canada, and have never encountered a young lady so utterly despicable as the heroine of "God's Country and the Law." There are many times I would have liked to have encountered such a one, but I never had the good fortune to run across enough delineated type, of the hot flitted over cool trails attire so delectably. Once, right here in our own Sierra Madres, I stumbled across The Norma Gould dance-er at the end of a trail, and there they were practising and didn't actually live in the mountain fastness in which I chanced upon them.

The "snake" entered this modern Eden, and was welcomed to the shanty of the happy young couple; while wholesome hubby snored, the "snake" told the girl about "the great city," she almost weakened, but just then hubby woke up, so the "snake" posted his sinister intentions. Another day dinner was laid, while, in the course of their breakfast, we see wifey coquettishly whisking her abbreviated skirt, much to the visible astonishment of the stranger—i. e. "snake." She stands on a chair, a much taller thing, disclosing much more of her delightfully formed limbs; the stranger's significant glances at this point leave little doubt as to what he is thinking of.

Inevitably, she pounces upon her—but his fell design is never accomplished, due to Fate, the mounted police and her husband. Now, here are a few of the discords struck; no gal as beautiful as this little Northwood's flower, would have ever given a second glance, despite remarks pertaining to the great city, as already so obviously hideous as the "snake;" no virtle man, since Time and this sad world began, could have failed to be mysteriously disturbed by the witty and alluring young woman. Why blame the villain for the automatic workings of Nature? Of course, there are always a few highly developed men in any community gifted with a sense of humor; this type of man would have molested our heroine, but his holding off would simply be a habit, growing up from the not wishing to become entangled with any feeble-minded woman.

False psychology is ever a distichinating mark of trash. Trash, that is. The "God's Country and the Law" is the kind of photoplay that causes the fun to be poked at all photoplays. Its appeal is essentially sen-sual, especially in the scene where the heroine is poised on the chair. The significant glances of the villain are, and are meant to be, carnal. They are also—ridiculous.

Herein is revealed the damnable stupidity of censorship; such a photoplay is passed intact—probably because of virtue of its triumphant battle! I am told upon a story dealing with passion and romance outside of wedlock, no matter how exciting and circumstances, or enlightened, no matter "get by" the censors. Neither will most honest, dignified stories which happen to do with

OPENING PROGRAM

The Hollywood Community Theatre opens its fifth season on Sept. 26th, with a hit which includes "Ropes" by Daniel Wilbur. Steel; "The Royal Fandango Pantomime" by Gustavo Morales; "In 1939" by Wm. de Mille and "Crums that Fall" by Philip Hubbard.

"Ropes," the film rights of which have been acquired by Universal, has been cast with Mary Alden, Herbert Hayes, and May Giraci. "The Royal Fandango," dance pantomime which includes in its cast Margaret Lounis, Ramon Sumaniegos, Manuel Perez, Jaqiel Lance, Lucy Hummel, Starke Patterson, Jackson Reed and others.

Peggy May and Alma Francis will be seen in "In 1939," the de Mille contribution, and John T. Prince, Theodore von Eitz, Wade Boteler, Wheeler Dryden and Philip Hubbard will appear in "Crums that Fall," the Hubbard playlet.

PLANS REPERTOIRE COMPANY

Hedwiga Reicher, who lately finished a role in "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," announces that she is forming an international repertoire company and is perfecting her plans in Oakland, California.

Miss Reicher staged a production of Matherhuck's "Monna Vanna" in Los Angeles, her first solo producing venture. She also brought Iaen's "The Lady from the Sea" and Giocosa's "The Stronger" to English audiences.

ARRANGING ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAMS

Harry Myers has been "adopted" by some two hundred California orphans. Recently he entertained them with a showing at the orphanages of "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court." Once a week Mr. Myers will sponsor a program which he and various fellow actors will arrange for the youngsters' entertainment.

BEAUMONT VACATIONS

Harry Beaumont has completed the production of "Glass Houses," starring Viola Dana and will vacation two weeks before beginning on "Simplicity Believing." Miss Dana's forthcoming vehicle.

CHIEFS PICNIC AT SEAL BEACH

Universal City's department chiefs recently held their first annual inter-departmental picnic at Seal Beach, Calif. A baseball game was the feature of the day.

The Hon. Marc Peter, United States Minister from Switzerland, was a recent visitor at Universal. The diplomat was accompanied by Maurice Rathban, publicity-director of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

H. M. Walker, title writer at the Hal E. Roach Studios, is spending his vacation at Palm Beach and New Orleans.

Glen Cavender, who was seriously burned while on a recent camping trip, is recovering and expects to be working again presently.

"Clay," originally called "The Wind along the Waste," by Maud Ansley, which J. Grubb Alexander is arranging for the screen, will serve as MaxDupont's next starring vehicle for Universal.

COLLEEN MOORE IN NEXT HUGHES STORY

Rupert Hughes is at work writing another story for Goldwyn in which Colleen Moore will play the leading role.

BABY MAXINE TABANIC

Little Maxine Tabanic, whose portrait appears upon the front cover of this magazine, commenced her motion picture career at the age of two years and nine months, when she filled an engagement with the National Picture Publishing Corporation of St. Louis, with which organization she made several films for the National Safety Council.

Since arriving on the Coast, Maxine has supported Katherine McDonald in "The Woman," Darrol Marsh in Paramount's "Crazy to Marry," and Hurd Mitchell drama for Fox. This diminutive actress is now to be seen at the Superba, where she enacts "Mital" in Tod Browning's Universal production "No Woman Knows." Baby Maxine will continue her picture sojourn here where she is receiving special instruction in dancing. It has been predicted that she will soon join our cleverest kiddie class.

TEXAS GUinan LEASES FINE ARTS STUDIO

The Texas Guinan Productions have taken over the Fine Arts Studio for the production of the new series of twelve two-reel Western and Northwestern dramas in which Miss Guinan will star under the direction of Jay Hunt. The first six stories to be released are given as follows:

"Texas of the Mounted," by Charles A. Short.
"The Vengeance of Texas Grey," by Mildred Moreno Sledge.
"The Soul of Texas," by Mildred Moreno Sledge.

Richard Dix has purchased a home in the Beverly Hills section of Los Angeles.

Mildred Davis, who has been ill with tonsillitis, has resumed her work at the Hal E. Roach Studios.

Ralph Graves, in anticipation of his forthcoming marriage to an eastern star, has purchased a home in Beverly Hills.

Harry Lorraine is enacting a principle role in "The Inflad," Katherine MacDonald's current picture, which James Young is directing.

Bob Woods, formerly scenic artist for Charlie Chaplin, has been engaged by the Century Film Corporation to head its scenic art department.

William Carroll, Joe King and Goro Kino are playing parts in "Yellow Men and Gold," the Goldwyn production which Irvin Wiltz is directing.

Anita Loos returned to New York the other day after a week's visit to Ohio with the family of her husband, John Emerson, director and playwright.

Vanita Thomas, recent winner of a beauty contest conducted by a newspaper in Des Moines, has been chosen for a minor role in "Smiling Through," the current Nor- ma Talmadge picture.
DICK CURRIER at the Roach studio

Dick Currier, film editor of the Ruth Roland company, is at present cutting episodes of the radio series "White Eagle," which have just been completed. Twelve episodes have already been shipped to New York.

Otto Lederer, "Gray Wolf" in Ruth Roland's serial, "White Eagle," which will direct a two-reeler between pictures to be shipped to China. California will form the background.

T. J. Crizer, head of the cutting and assembly department, is cutting Harold Lloyd's "A Sailor-Made Man," now under production. This comedy will be a three-reeler. Jean Haver, scenario writer for Lloyd, is at work on the next comedy in that star which will be in readiness when "A Sailor-Made Man" is completed.

Jack Roach, who is shooting for Pathé, is at the Rinse this week where he is making pictures of some of the industries there as a phase of an industrial film he is making.

"The Joy Rider," a Harry "Stubb" Pollard comedy, was previewed recently and sent to New York. Mr. Pollard was supported by Marie Mosquini, Noah Young and others. Charles Parrott, directing. Mr. Pollard is at present busy engaged on his current comedy in which Miss Mosquini again enact the leading feminine role.

MOROSCO NOTES

Avery Hopgood, playwright, is finishing the screen version of "Linger Longer Letty" which will be the next picture of Oliver Morosco Productions for First National release starring Charlotte Greenwood. Miss Greenwood is now closing her tour in the stage "Linger Longer Letty" which has provided her a vehicle for the last two years.

With plans completed in New York for increased Morosco production it is probable that a second unit will start at the Mayer Studio next month on the picturization of another of the Morosco stage successes.

AT BRUNTON

Director Sloman of the J. L. Frothingham production, "The Daughter of Drahma," expects to complete the shooting of that picture within the next week.

Julian Lamotte, continuity writer, has been detailed by Robert Brunton to work on a special production in which the development of Los Angeles and Southern California will be portrayed.

Camera work is about half completed on "My Boy," Jackie Coogan's new starring picture which Victor Heerman is directing.

SCATTERGOOD STORIES ABOUT TO BE RELEASED

The silver sheet will shortly present series of two reel dramatic comedies, the Edna Schley series of "Scattergood" stories which have been adapted to the screen from the works of Clarence Budington Kelland.

William H. Brown plays the role of Scattergood Baines in the film versions. The series is being directed by Al McKimson and the entire twelve reel productions are being produced by Mrs. Schley for distribution by the Western Pictures exploitation Company.

WANTS SCREEN STORIES

The Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, in collaboration with a Chicago newspaper, is offering prizes totalling $30,000 for thirty-one good stories for the screen.

The first prize is $10,000. The second prize consists of ten $1,000 prizes, and the third prize of twenty $500 prizes.

ROBINSON CRUSOE PICTURIZED

Robert W. Fox is preparing to make a picture of "Robinson Crusoe." An attempt will be made to portray the beloved character of story book fame. Good for Universal!

PREPARING NEXT

Charles Ray's next picture for First National release will be "Smudge," a story by Rob Wagner who wrote "R. S. V. P." for Mr. Ray.

Ora Carewe will play the principal role opposite the star. Miss Carewe has appeared in Universal and Goldwyn productions.

BUSY TITLING

Henry Rattenbury, Joel Day and Louis J. O'Connell have been added to the cast of "The City Feller" under production at Goldwyn.

Dwight Crittenden, whose portrayal of Dr. Anthon in "The Old Nest," will be remembered, received a blue ribbon award at the California Apple Society's recent show of early fall varieties.

Robert Wilcox, Marine De Mes, Claude Gilbert, Gilbert Clayton, Jean Riley and Aubrey Bever have been cast in the first of a series of Westerns which Fred Caldwell is directing for Schwartz Productions.

Eugene Lockhart will enact one of the leading character roles in "Simmnin' Through" starring Norma Talmadge. Mr. Lockhart will shortly follow his debut in the movies with a vaudeville act of original pinafores and monologues.

Alou Childers, who recently returned from a trip to New York, has appointed Robertson and Webb, her exclusive business representatives.

Miss Childers will be remembered for her characterization of the young widow in Basil King's Goldwyn production, "Earth-Bound."

At present Miss Childers is enjoying a vacation in the country.

AT LASKY'S

"If You Believe It, It's So," with Thomas Meighan starred, and Tom Forman directing, will be started at the West Coast Studio October 3rd. This is a novel by Perley Poore Sheehan which was purchased from the estate of the late George Loane Tucker. The cast has not yet been selected.

Jack Holt and the remainder of the company -making "The Call of the North," returned from location at Mammoth Mountain, and are now engaged on interior scenes. Midge Bellamy has the feminine lead.

that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incurr no obligation, of course.

Palmer Photoplay Corporation, Department of Education, 570-90 L. W. Hellman Bldg., Los Angeles, California.

Please send me, without cost or obligation on my part, your questionnaire. I will answer the questions in it and return it to you for analysis. If I pass the test I am to receive further information about your Course and Service to authors.

fundamental motivation, or reveal those elements of life which influence the individual career.

The screen writer who has sold several intelligently conceived “originals” for small sums, must often wonder, must often be completely flabbergasted—even crushed, when he reads of producers paying huge prices for the screen rights to trashy novels.

OLLIE SELLERS PRODUCTIONS

Featuring Olgy Brockwell, Ollie Sellers Productions has put into motion pictures “Double Stakes,” the Saturday Evening Post story, by Wm. R. Leighton, which will be released October 15 by the Pacific Film Company. The cast includes Jack Curtiss, Earl Schwenek, Al Hart, Geo. Hernandez and Hazel Dunning.

This is the first of a series of six five-ree features to be produced by Ollie Sellers Productions for release by the Pacific Film Company. Casting has started for the second picture, as yet unnamed, and production is expected to begin around October 1st. Subsequent pictures of the series will be made at the same studio, all being directed by Sellers. Present plans are to release one every six weeks, in connection with a single reel “Folly Comedy” weekly.

the shows mean to those who are for years bedridden, or little children who are crippled or deaf or deformed. Always we are reaching the people who portray these problems in the Children’s Hospital every Sunday many see them from their beds.

I have the greatest feeling of gratitude for the courtesies extended to me in my work by the motion picture companies and by the members of the organizations of the different Hollywood Studios.

Thanking you, I remain,

Yours very respectfully,

(Signed) G. E. PELTON.

Lillian Guenther’s Notes:

You remember I said I was not the only one from Arkansas in the picture game; the Talmadge Sisters, I understand, are from Ft. Smith, Ark., Pauline Frederick, Jonesboro, Ark., Betty Francisco, Little Rock, Ark., Barbara Castleton from some part of the State. The men there are so busy raising crops and families they do not get far from home; two managed to get away and got into the picture game, Mr. Will Rogers from Rogers, Ark., and William Anderson (Bronco Billy) from Pine Bluff, the same city I selected for my birthplace.

A Gentleman Expresses Himself

One Dr. C. A. Briegeleb, a local preacher and president of the Ministerial Union, has this week aroused the most general, and certainly the most justified indignation ever felt or expressed by the motion picture profession with his vicious stand upon the Los Angeles censorship question, a subject which his organization is quite naturally and for many perfectly obvious reasons agitating at this time as a follow-up of Mayor Cryer’s recent much publicized attempt to resurrect a forgotten statute providing for a City Commissioner or Censor of Films.

This resentment has not been occasioned by the fact that Briegeleb is either sincerely or selfishly our adversary, but because he has attacked not only the work of our brains but our characters, our outlooks, and our motives, with what we can only take to be the most willfully malicious as well as senseless untruths.

In the extracts from his ridiculous speech at Monday’s meeting of the Union to consider its campaign for the accomplishment of art strangulation, as condensed for us by the Record, he takes upon himself the responsibility for statements which we would enjoy seeing him forced to either prove or retract. It will be noticed that one of these wild thrusts is to the effect that the motion picture is “a greater menace to American childhood than the legalized liquor traffic,” which latter he so proudly claims to have been “successfully stamped out.” It may be that Dear Doctor Briegeleb has not all of his faculties of observation or it may be that his line of vision extends far above the common herd, but in either case his ignorance upon the liquor situation in America eliminates the advisability of hagging promiscuous references to it even in his most spirited discourses. It is to laugh! Still greater amusement may be produced, however, by his gentle remark concerning the alleged instances in which children recognize photographs of screen criminals, while failing to do the same for those of Christ, which suggests the possibility that photography may have advanced in the past nineteen hundred and twenty-one years, and therefore has become more attractive and so conducive to more concentrated study.

Again Briegeleb asserts with picturesque abandon that there has been no repudiation by the profession of Roscoe Arbuckle’s notorious and repellent Labor Day “boozing” party, which latter he seems to put forth triumphantly as conclusive proof that immediate censorship of Los Angeles-showed photoplays is imperative. Besides becoming incongruous at this juncture, the self-appointed and energetic reformer over-reaches himself, for not only the entire film colony, but scores of disinterested parties have condemned his deliberate lie, the nature of which loses for itself all propaganda value. It is not possible that eight trade paper editorials in addition to the various published actions taken by picture organizations against the principals in the Rappe tragedy and the almost unanimous horror expressed by the theatrical world over the unhappy affair, have been “missed” by this man who is apparently that type of intolerant upon whom democracies have come to be a danger to normal humanity.

To our knowledge no one has upheld Arbuckle or his associates, but let us now go on record for criminals of any class, in stating that their injuries to civilization have rarely taken on the proportions assumed by the blunders of such bigoted combinations of perverted religion and artistic illiteracy.

That Briegeleb and his ilk are to accomplish their ends at all costs has continually pointed to the idea that their interests are overy affected in the matter, which is further borne out by the fact that they suggest to the City Council not one but a board of seven censors, the chairman of which is to receive fifty dollars a week compensation for his “valuable” services to the general populace.

Yes, the situation is both simple and complicated according to one’s vantage point, but it is liable to become unexpectedly involved for all those who slander indiscriminately and too much.

We are greatly gratified by the several refutations of Briegeleb’s irrational columnists, among which numbers an excellent one by Wm. C. de Mille. We will also appreciate those which are to come, and we would recommend them to the haughty president for the improvement of his soul and particularly his mentality. It is evident from the following that he is in sore need of some such stimulation to worthier efforts.

“Amid great applause, Dr. Briegeleb vehemently denounced motion pictures as a greater menace to American childhood than the legalized liquor traffic, which has been so successfully stamped out.”

“After quoting statistics, which he said proved that motion pictures were a menace, Dr. Briegeleb told the gathered ministers that he knew of instances where a photograph of the Christ was held up before children and went unrecognized by them, but that these same children immediately recognized the faces of various motion picture stars.

“Dr. Briegeleb called upon every minister to be present this morning at 10:30 o’clock in the council chamber.

“I’m not afraid of the motion picture people,” he cried, “but I am afraid of a weak-kneed preacher’s trying to carry water on both shoulders, so it is the business of you everyone to be present in the council chambers tomorrow morning and protest against any evasion of duty with respect to censorship.”

“What we hold against the motion picture industry because of the Arbuckle incident in San Francisco,” declared Dr. Briegeleb, “is that there has been no repudiation of him or his type by the motion picture people. But let a minister go wrong and in twenty-four hours the en-
THOMAS INCE STARTS KING STORY

A drama from the pen of Bradley King will be the first special to be produced by Thomas H. Ince on the Associated First National program. The production is entitled, "Jim," and will include an all-star cast. Florence Vidor and John Bowery have already been signed for two of the leading roles.

John Griffith Wray, who recently completed "Hail the Woman," will direct and production will start shortly.

Del Andrews is to handle the megaphone for the forthcoming lace comedy special entitled, "The Hottentot," which will feature Douglas MacLean. Mr. Andrews will have as his assistants Ray Enright and Ross Lederman.

MOODY COMPANY AT BISBEE

Director Harry G. Moody producing "Branded," a five-reel Western, has left with his company for Bisbee, Arizona, where he will remain three weeks on location.

The picture co-features George Wagner, who recently completed the juvenile in Lasky's, "The Shiek," and Fritzie Ridgeway.

Mr. Moody and J. C. Cook, the company photographer, own and control this organization.

WHISENANT PRODUCTIONS START SERIES

J. Barney Whisenant Productions, a new organization, has leased space at the Her- mant Studios in Santa Monica for the production of eighteen two-reel westerns, which have been contracted for with a releasing organization.

Nick Gatzert will direct the pictures in which Bob Nelan and Patricia Palmer will be co-featured.

Barry Straulh is business manager and Felix Schoedsack has been engaged as chief cinematographer.

WHITE-GOODMAN PRODUCING UNITS

Associated Artists filming "Mountain Hearts," the first of the Joe Moore series of outdoor stories will be ready for release November 5th.

The Morante unit has shipped "The Re- coil," their third feature, and the release date is set for November 1st. The filming of J. Inman Kane's widely read book, "A Prince of the Plains," featuring George Chesnobe, is scheduled to start presently.

D. & M. Productions will release in October "The White Rider," featuring Denver Dixon and Alma Rayford. The company is now working on a sea story, not yet announced. J. L. Productions has completed "Going Sone," a western drama starring Helen Gibson, the release date of which is November 15th.

Van Curen Productions' latest completed feature, "The Glory of Youth," has been released and the DeCourcy picture, "Fighting for Justice," is scheduled for release December 1st.

AT VITAGRAPH

Antonio Moreno started work this week in "Thou Art the Man," with Betty Francisco as leading woman. David Smith is directing.

William Duncan is completing his latest picture, the working title of which has been "The Come-Back."

LINDER TO FILM BURLESQUE

Another burlesque on "The Three Musketeers" is being made by Max Linder, the French comedian. It will be a three-reel subject released by Goldwyn.

AT UNIVERSAL

Jack Perrin is being featured in a series of short reel navy stories written by Robert Dillon under the supervision of William Lord Wright. William Craft is directing the series. Lieut. Colonel Sven, U. S. N., has been assigned by Captain Amion Bronson, commanding the submarine base at San Pedro, to facilitate the working of this Universal unit in the filming of its short-reel naval features the first of which is entitled, "Bob of the U. S. N."

Herbert Rawlinson has finished his premier starring vehicle entitled, "The Millionaire."

Edward Laemmle, who is directing Art Acord in "Winners of the West," has completed the exterior shots for this historical serial and is engaged in shooting interiors.

Reaves Eason is gathering a staff in preparation for Root Gibson's next starring picture entitled, "The Badge of the Fighting Hearts." The story was written by Ralph Cummings while Harvey Gates wrote the scenario.

AT REALART

Constance Binney will begin on a new production the latter part of the week. The offering is an original story by Harvey Theye, a member of the Realart scenario staff. Major Maurice Campbell will direct.

Alice Eyton has written the scenario for the next Mary Miles Minter production, not yet titled. It is intended for early spring release.

An adaptation of two Saturday Evening Post stories by Samuel Merwin will be the next Bebe Daniels starring vehicle, scheduled to start next week. Douglas Doty has written the scenario, while Chester M. Franklin will direct.

Concluding scenes of the current Wanda Hawley and Mary Miles Minter photographs are being filmed.

An original story by John Blackwood, with scenario by Violet Clark, will serve as Miss Hawley's next production, due to start presently. Thomas Heffron will direct. The star's present picture now being completed is her third production of the season.

ROACH STUDIO NOTES

It is expected that Harold Lloyd's current comedy entitled, "A Sailor-Made Man," will be finished in about ten days. "Don't Weaken," Mr. Lloyd's recently completed comedy, is shortly to be released. It is his thirteenth two-reeler.

Production on Ruth Roland's new serial commenced this week with Bruce Gordon playing opposite the star. Fred W. Jack- man is handling the direction while Frank Hampton is production manager of the company.

Harry "Snub" Pollard commences work presently on "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," which Charles Parrott will direct.

Jimmy Parrott finished a comedy this week and will commence another presently with Ethel Broadhurst playing opposite him. R. Grey and R. J. Ceder will handle the direction.

Recent re-issue releases include Harold Lloyd's "Bashful" and Harry "Snub" Pollard's "Late Lodgers."

Herbert Claborne has returned from an Eastern trip and is about to re-enter pictures on this coast.

“NO WOMAN KNOWS”

Superba

Outside of retitling the screen play, miscasting and re-doing two-thirds of the character, murdering the fine points and omitting lovely details in their scenario of Edna Ferber’s story, Universal and Rod Browning haven’t done a thing to “Fanny Herself.” It would seem that much was sufficient. However, by the above we do not intend to imply that the performances in “No Woman Knows” are not in the majority of cases most superior, or even that the production which attends the rather unmeaning title is not a very fair drama with an entertaining theme and some emotional moments. It is all of that, but unhappily Ferber’s rare breath and keen visualization have been drained out of it, and “No Woman Knows” will never be that sublimely told story of a noble, sensitive, Hebrew girl that is “Fanny Herself.” It is rather, an unusually diverting production by Mr. Browning and George Yohalem which Universal has seen fit to pay a popular author’s price for. That, of course, is not our business; only our disappointment.

The general technique of the picture is commendable; Browning’s direction is well handled and the photography by William Pliddle is good.

Mabel Julienne Scott offers us some surprising work as Fanchen Brandeis, the predominating spirit in the story. Although this, the title role, is played somewhat weaker than her creator pictured her, and even though some of the best opportunities for characterization in the part are not provided the featured player, still she deserves all credit for capably interpreting a pleasing screen personality.

It is, regrettably, impossible to say the same for Earle Schenck who is seen opposite Miss Scott in the position of Clarence Hyle. In the first place his original business as a leading man is discovered; in the second he robs what remains of anything that might attract with a stuff unconvincing manner which never gains an ounce of sympathy clear through to the end. Two equally finished ronditions, however, are accomplished by Stuart Holmes and John Davidson, who enact respectively Fencer, the opposition and Theodore Brandeis, the complication. A performance by either of these men will very nearly redeem any picture.

Grace Marvin, a Vers Gordon type of Jewish character, plays effectively Molly Brandeis, the woman who meets with sacrifice the toil of genius. Miss Marvin is excellent as is Max Davidson in his few scenes as Papa Brandeis.

Other enjoyable characterization are Baur, a country music teacher and Shabblitz, a “great” violinist. These situations are gold mines for Smitz Edwards and Josef Swiccard.

A very expressive piece of work is also done by Bernice Radom, who is seen as Fanny ten years. The little girl has good disposition and absolutely lacks any measure of self-consciousness.

Raymond Lee is ample as Little Ted while Joseph Stearns “gets over” in a very little fooling. Miss Spivins can’t help but shave off the Hyle youngster.

Baby Maxine Tabanic as Mirzi, Fannie’s delightful little niece, E. A. Warren, Dick Cummings and Danny Hoy complete the large cast.

Even yet we wish that this were the story we thought it was to be. Oh, well! What’s the use?

“WEDDING BELLS”

Kinoea

The comedienne Talmadge is with us again in another of her airy presentations by Joseph Schenck entitled, “Wedding Bells.” This moderately amusing farce is an adaptation of Zelda Crosby’s play by the same name and it is a Charles Whibley production. Its star’s fans will find nothing radically new or startling in this latest vehicle of the celluloid’s most precious feminine decoration, but the story will sell several times pay for itself because it has a certain degree of merit, because its star would attract in far less, and because “face publishers” aren’t generally over particular anyway.

Constance as Rosalie Wayne an unreason-some young Palm Beach charmer is, well — Constance in action as usual, the occasion for the entire effort. It is something to please thousands by one’s mere presence.

The masculine lead opposite the bobbed one, is, after an absence from his old position for many months, no less an one than Harrison Ford, Miss Talmadge’s able leader of other and just as happy days. The well remembered team will invoke pleasant exclamations from many. Ford is seen to advantage in Reggie Carter, Rosalie’s strange, young divorced husband.

Emily Chichester does considerable with the odious Miss Marcia Hunter, chief disturber of Rosalie’s “dog in the manger” peace of mind; while James Harrison and William Roselli undertake to everyone’s satisfaction more minor roles.

An exceedingly amusing figure is cut by Dallas Weford who plays Jackson, Carter’s pain-tfully scarpulorous butler.

Ida Darling, Polly Vann and Frank Honda end the list of players.

From a technical standpoint as is to be expected in Schenck offerings, there are no complaints to register. First National releases “Wedding Bells.”

“THE INVISIBLE POWER”

California

“The Old Next,” after a three weeks’ run has finally made room upon Goldwyn’s local releasing program for “The Invisible Power.” Charles Kenyon’s drama of a woman who loved a crook. Since it is very full of heart interest and possesses much well placed suspense, this Frank Lloyd production escapes the criticism McLean’s never meto- dramatic, which it might otherwise receive.

The various roles of Schenck and Peters are co-featured in this story and let it be stated that they make a suitable and thoroughly pleasing team. Paralleling the pathetic story is the work of Miss Rich who fills the role of Laura Chadwick, a simple village school teacher, whose love although powerful enough to conquer an ex-convict cannot protect him or their child from the menacing influence of old adversaries. The predominant thing about this actress’ personality is her fail- ing with that pleasant young man quite at home. It is altogether worthy of his high standard.

The heavy work of the play is the very excellent effort of Dewitt Jennings, with characterization of Mark Shadwell, the typical “ambitious” plainclothesman who could scarcely have been improved upon. Even the exaggerated action is so managed as to carry complete conviction.

Another praiseworthy role is accomplished by Sydney Ainsworth in Bob Drake, a criminal whose appeal lies in his loyalty and misfortune.

Others in the cast are: William Friend, Gertrude Claire, Lydia Yeaman’s Titus and Jessie de Jannette.

“PASSIN’ THRU”

Grumman’s

A vivacious mixture of the serious and ridiculous that ruthlessly sacrifices reason and even comedy logic to gain novelty of effects is Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.’s newest Thomas Ince screen release, “Passin’ thru.”

At that, the story by Agnes Christine Johnston although a rather original one, has no ability to kick through the walls of a building and a steel safe is in spots lucid enough to serve the great majority of our entertainment seeker’s outlooks and agile enough to please generally. The subtleties are especially good laugh getters, while one or two of the situations are unadulterated farce.

In the position of Billy Burton, an inevit- able “goat” in any situation, McLean is ex- ceedingly comfortable and is customary comic result of his efforts is Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. in the role of the crook. He proceeds briskly through his action, pausing now and then to send over a rather weak gag line, which nevertheless gathers effect with repetition. Dog must watch out for too much sameness in his performances. A pretty, big-eyed little ingenue, by name Madge Bellamy, is far and away the star as Spivins, a child of the rustics. She may be said to do nothing remarkably well.

Otto Hoffman as Spivins, Sr., town cele- brity and tightwad, is a great type as is Willis Roberts for Silas Harlow, Spivins’ bitterest enemy.

The opposition is largely centered in Fred Kingston, a young man with circular tendencies. The part is filled by Louis Nathan who “gets by” with it.

Two More Players Rise to Stardom

Maryon Aye and Bob Reeves are to be co-starred according to the terms of an agreement which was this week closed between Irving M. L. Lesser and Michael Rosenberg of Western Pictures Exploitation company. It is further announced that Albert Rogell will produce and direct the series of eight Western productions, which are to introduce Mr. Reeves and Maryon Aye in star positions.

Work on the first of the series starts this week.

Former Lasky Director to work on "Penrod"

Marshall Neilan’s first engagement for the picturization of "Penrod," is that of Frank O'Connor, Lasky director, who will collaborate with Mr. Neilan on its direction. Mr. O'Connor’s most recent work on the Lasky lot was the direction of three May McAvoy films, "Everything for Sale," "A Virginia Courtship," and "The Happy Ending."

Valentino Continues With Lasky

Rudolph Valentino has been signed by Lasky to be featured in a second production, "Moran of the Lady Letty." Mr. Valentino recently completed "The Sheik" and has been attending the premier of "Camille" in New York with Nazimova.

Washburn in Goldwyn Play

Bryant Washburn has been signed by Goldwyn to play the lead in Anzila Yeszierska’s story, "Hungry Hearts," under the direction of E. Mason Hopper.

Metro Signs Allan Forrest

Allen Forrest again has been selected to play a leading role in a Metro production. This time he will be seen opposite Viola Dana in "Seeing's Believing," the star’s newest picture which will be a Harry Beaumont production.

Lackteen Again with Roach

Frank Lackteen has been signed by Hal E. Roach for the forthcoming Ruth Roland serial, the working title of which is "The Timber Queen." This will be Mr. Lackteen’s third successive appearance in the serial star’s company.

Wynn Signs Long Term Contract

Mary Wynn, who enacts one of the principal roles in "A Bride of the Gods," lately completed Frothingham picture, recently signed a long term contract to appear in motion pictures under the management of producer J. L. Frothingham.

Comedy Lead

Joey McCreery has been engaged by Hamilton-White Comedies, Inc. to play the leading feminine role in the company’s latest two-reeler.

Will Rogers in Lasky Comedy

Will Rogers has been signed by Lasky to enact the leading male role in "Ek," under the direction of James Cruze.

Diminutive Star

Baby Peggy, little-two-year-old actress in Century Comedies, has been elevated to stardom by Julius Stern, president of the Century Film Corporation.

Nigel de Brulier

Who’s Where on Los Angeles Screens

New Pantages

Director Becomes Leading Man

Forsaking the megaphone for the silent drama, Robert Ellis recently directing for the Selznick enterprises, is at present playing opposite Katherine Macdonald in "The Infidel" now under production at the Ambassador Studio for Associated First National release.

Frothingham Publicist at Bruntun

Sam W. B. Cohn, former advertising manager for Associated Producers, Inc., of New York, has taken offices at the Robert Bruntun Studios and is now in charge of publicity for the J. L. Frothingham productions. Mr. Cohn was at one time director of publicity for the chain of Allen Theatre enterprises of Canada.

Universal Appoints Film Censor

Universal has established a precedent in appointing W. F. Willis, formerly of the Chicago Board of Censors, to censor its film output.

On the Spoken Stage

Jackie Saunders has deserted the film colony for the New York stage and will appear on Broadway in a play sponsored by A. H. Woods.

Opposite Guinan

David E. Townsend is leading man for Texas Guinan in her series of two-reel Western features, the first of which has already been completed.

Harry Weston has joined the Roach studio forces as art director.

Noah Beery has been engaged to play an important part in support of Priscilla Dean in "Wild Honey."

Beatrice Burnham will support Iloot Gibson in "The Badge of the Fighting Heart," which Reaves Eason is directing.

George Periolat and Bertram Grassby have been chosen to play important parts in "Princess Virtue," Marie Prevost’s newest starring vehicle for Universal.

James Morrison essay the role of "David Hurst" in J. L. Frothingham’s "A Bride of the Gods," soon to be released by Associated First National.

Those enacting roles in "A Barnyard Cavalier," which Harold Beaudine is directing for Christie, are Viora Daniel, Ward Caulfield, Victor Rodman, and Henry Murdock.

Boris Karloff, Charles A. Smiley, Barbara Tennant, Loyola O’Connor and Alta Ottis will play in support of Katherine Macdonald in her current photoplay entitled, "The Infidel."

Zella Ingram, Carrie Clark Ward and Lottie Williams, are cast in "The Slim of the Jack O’Lantern," which Lloyd Ingraham is making at the Mayer studio.

George Cummings, who recently finished a vaudeville tour and who will be remembered in Helen Holmes pictures, is playing the heavy in "Bruce of the Royal Mounted," the current Finis Fox Production.
The Screen Writers' Forum

The Orient

Any half way observant person must be cognizant of the gradual introduction into our national life of things Oriental; the mysticism of the East has a tremendous pull upon even the average American, although his objective philosophy may render him immune to a sympathetic understanding of it, or even a willingness to read it. Many of the newer homes in metropolitan centers are being designed with an Oriental touch or flourish here or there; almost every home today has its incense burners, its Japanese prints, its Buddha statues. Few songs are more popular than Finde's Indian Love Lyrics, based on Laurence Hope's themselves immensely popular in even the table lands of culture. In popular music, much is composed on Oriental themes, such as Oliver Wallace's famous "Hindustan," the sensation of two years ago. In literature, the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam is perhaps more popular than any poem of length antan: Sir Edwin Arnold's "The Light of Asia" is immensely popular in cultural circles.

Today two film companies are making versions of "The Rubaiyat," and many of our best known plays and photoplays of the past two years have been based on Oriental themes or laid in Oriental locales. Thomas H. Ince recently released "The Bronze Bell"; Pathé just released a screen version of "Without Benefit of Clergy"; we have had "Broken Blossoms," "The Eyes of Youth," and others too numerous to mention. Photoplays based on the activities of white people in India, Japan, China, Persia, Russia, or Si— written intelligently and sympathetically—should find a market.

Few Screen Writers

A wild chimera is frisking about in certain dulled noodles to the effect that all the way from thirty thousand to a hundred thousand on the North American continent are plying their pens and talents in writing scenarios. Newspaper reporters and editors, and imaginative individuals have printed very fantastic, extravagant statements along these lines; where they obtain these hints of guess work and misinformation is a question.

The fact is that recent statistics compiled by an individual who was given access to the files of the scenario departments at leading studios, show that slightly over ten thousand persons have submitted screen stories to these representative studios during the past three years.

True, one organization received about thirteen thousand scenarios during the year 1920, but these consisted of many stories which had been sent to other studios; and many individuals submitted from two to around two dozen scenarios in the course of the year.

When it is realized that—conservatively—one hundred thousand people are signing their names to stories, poems, essays, and editorial and news matter in our newspapers and periodicals, it will be seen that the real problem is not the shortage of talent but the gaining of more intelligent writers for the screen.

It is evident that the great difficulty lies in interesting ten times the many people in screen writing—and at the same time interesting primarily those whose mental and emotional attitudes are least normally developed. There is more money in writing for the screen than there is in writing for the magazines, eventually wider fame, but there are too few people attempting to write photo-plays to enable the producers to depend on them for their stories. The producer is sure of a large weekly magazine output.

There is just as big a percentage of stories rejected by magazines as there are scenarios rejected by the studios. Of the greater number of people choosing the printed word by coercing the conscience of men. The course of Christ is proving to be the greatest magnet in the world, but use it as a club, and it will become a colossal failure.

"Killed professionally, yes. But, frankly, I would rather be a man than a minister; Character is greater than profession."

"I would just as soon believe that the perfume of the rose comes from the petal as to believe that the spirit of the blue laws comes from God."

"All the proposed Sunday legislation is simply a human attempt to whitewash what God designed to wash white. To condemn movies because some things may be objectionable is like refusing to eat fish because it contains bones."

When human passion is subdued, when the turbulent tide ebbs, we see that the big thing that lies at the bottom of the opposition of theatre opening on Sunday, is simply bigotry."

"It is a wonder to me how many bad things good people see in the movies; fortunately, if you are so disposed, you need never be disappointed. The product of a legal religion has ever been and ever will be either hypocrisy or persecution."

Congratulations, Mr. Lehr

It is a fact that many of the country's leading universities and universities of every class of playwriting, notably New York University and Columbia. Now Temple University, Philadelphia, comes forward with a course in all branches of motion picture production.

The institution in the City of Brotherly Love is to have the cooperation of the Goldwyn Studios, according to Vice-President Lehr, who has already complied with their request for photographs of all branches of the magnificent Goldwyn Studio. They will be made into lantern slides and will be used at the university to illustrate lectures.

In the Goldwyn news bulletin for July 9th, Ralph Block, in charge of Goldwyn's New York scenario department, says: "The Goldwyn Company is now looking for aid in its search for material of high entertainment value from the thousands of men throughout the country, who, with a little effort, could find the screen a profitable profession to follow. The Goldwyn editors are on the lookout for talented men and women to write and submit screen stories of imagination to shape their paths in its direction."

This statement by Mr. Block makes Abraham Lehr's expression of good will and cooperation towards the university quite significant.

Mr. Lehr has pointed the path. He unquestionably has the big vision, and is to be generously commended for his intelligent initiative.

B. Irwin Boyd

The Reverend D. H. Jones resigned as pastor of the Huntington Park Baptist Church because of the fanatical stand taken by most of his flock in demanding the Sunday closing of motion picture theatres in Huntington Park, which is a suburb of Los Angeles. Following his action, steps were taken toward expelling him from the Baptist Church. Here are some of Pastor Jones' epi-grams, run on the screen of the Huntington Park Theatre, which caused all the trouble: "I prefer to dwell with the worldling and be true to my inner self than to live with the saint and betray it."

"There is a way to make the church the super-attraction, but it will never be done by coercing the conscience of men. The course of Christ is proving to be the greatest magnet in the world, but use it as a club, and it will become a colossal failure."

Pickups By the Staff

STANDARDIZED LABORATORY SERVICE

The Los Angeles Rothacker-Aller Laboratories and the Chicago Rothacker laboratories are henceforth to operate as one through a system of standardization. The two plants are to be so synchronized that a portion of the prints on a re-release can be made in one laboratory and the remainder at the other—and all the prints will have identical screen brilliancy and tone values. On his trip east Joseph Aller, resident head of the Los Angeles plant, conferred with executives of the Chicago plant and states that henceforth when the negative goes eastward to the Rothacker Chicago plant, the producer will get this same degree of darkness in all prints because the time cards which are worked out on the Coast will go eastward along with the negative. Because the exposure will be made in printing machines tuned to operate in mechanical precision, with the Coast printing machines. Because, after leaving the printing room, the film will go into a developer identical to that on the Coast—identical even to the same brand of distilled water. And so in the tunneling or toning tank. A standardization of the New York and London Rothacker-Aller laboratories is also in preparation.

HOSTESS TO FATHER

Emil Flugrath, father of Viola Dana and Shirley Mason, was tendered a farewell surprise party recently by Miss Viola Flugrath to his departure for New York. Among the guests were Alice Lake and her parents, Shirley Mason and her husband, Bernie Durning and Mrs. Flugrath.

AT LASKY'S

Cecil B. DeMille has started "Saturday Night," an original by Jeanie Macpherson, in which Leatrice Joy, Edith Roberts, Conrad Nagel, Jack Mower and others appear in the important roles.

William deMille has practically completed the assembling and cutting of "Miss Lulu Bett," his latest production, in which Lois Wilson plays the title role and Milton Sills the male lead.

Northern locations will be used for George Melford's opening scenes of his production, "Moran of the Lady Letty," featuring Dorothy Dalton. Rudolph Valentino will play the male lead.

James Cruze is directing a special comedy, temporarily titled "Elk," in which Karl Hollers plays the leading role and Lila Lee is leading woman. This story was written by Walter Woods, and adapted by Walter Woods, while Frank E. Woods is supervising.

Agnes Ayres will begin this week under the direction of Victor Fleming in "The Lane That Had No Turning," an adaptation by Eugene Mullin of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel. Rollin Sturgis will supervise.

Ethel Clayton has completed her work in "The Cradle," directed by Paul Powell, and will start in October on "Forty Below," again directed by Mr. Powell.

Wallace Reid begins this week on his new picture, "The Champion," adapted from the play by Thomas Louden and A. Thomas. The director has not yet been assigned.

TAKES OVER FORMER QUARTERS AT HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS

For the production of "Penrod" starring Wesley Barry, Marshall Neilan has returned to the Hollywood studios, where his other First National pictures have been staged, including "Dinty," "Go and Get It," "The River's End," and "Bob and the Hampton of Place." Mr. Neilan's script for "Penrod" calls for fifteen youngsters and twenty grownups to support Barry in the title role.

ON BUSINESS TRIP

Ivan M. Lesser and Mike Rosenberg of the Western Pictures Corporation, who departed recently on a business trip, took, for the purpose of disposing of the productions of various independent producers, which they are handling.

“Well, I ought a know her,” said George. “I’ve n’t went over to meet the animated rug, and to renew his acquaintance. He went without escort, to be sure, but as the animal seemed to be glad to see him and allowed all kinds of liberties, we soon were all engaged in the salutation. George advanced the opinion that some company must have been used by the animal in the neighborhood, and that she had wandered away.

“Well, as soon as we get the cattle back, we’ll make the stampede scene,” said the director.

An hour passed by and no cows, while the bear was happy among her newfound friends. The man who owned the cows appeared about this time, and informed the director that he was in the habit of extracting the lactic fluid from said cow about five o’clock every morning, and that he wished to adhere strictly to schedule on this occasion. He was sure puffed when informed of what had taken place. Another hour of waiting and the director got a happy thought.

“Forget the stampede,” said he. “We’ll rescue the girl from the bear.”

The set was cleared for action. The bear was to come on and off dragging the girl. She was to drape herself about the bear’s head and shoulders in such a way that it would appear the bear was really making off with her, as he came down the line opposite a piece of pie, and when the bear was turned loose she made splendid time, considering what she was carrying, in his direction. It was so good we made it twice, but as there was only one more piece of pie it was necessary to save it for another location.

We next shot a scene where the leading man sees the poor girl in this sad plot and rides to the rescue. Then it was necessary to show the wild and untamed beast about to devour the fair maiden. George said it would be simple. We see our heroine in a heap on the ground, a piece of pie down her neck and the bear munching therefrom. The hero rides in and tries to dismount, but his spur catches in the back of the saddle, and by the time he gets it disengaged the pie is gone. No more pie! What can be used for the retake? Somebody with brains offered Mrs. Bear a stick of grease paint. She liked it, so half of it was rubbed on the back of the bear’s neck and then the noose. The hero dispatched the bear with a thrust from a butcher knife which he took from his boot. A quick fade, and the episode was in the box.

Our director is very original and very versatile. He works much better without a script than he does with one.

Outside of this there ain’t no news. Hoping to hear from you soon, I am as always, YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY.

“VENUS AND THE CAT” THE LATEST AESOP’S FILM FABLE RELEASE

In the series of Aesop’s Film Fables, produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., Pathe has scheduled “Venus and the Cat” for release on October 9th. It brings this fable up-to-date by comically driving home the meaning of the popular phrase, “and the cat came back. A be-whiskered old bachelor sits comfortably in his shirt sleeves reading the newspaper. The house cat, feeling the need of affectionation attention, annoys him much. Presently he grabs her only so, fings of the door. Kitty sheds a few tears and comes back through the window. Again she is tailing—and comes down through the chimney. At last she is treated so roughly that she feels the need of revenge on the heartless bachelor.

A woman could only be transformed into a woman—a strong-minded, managing sort of woman—and marry the cruel bachelor!—Yes, pussy’s desire is gratified. Venus comes sailing along in a cloud near the ground, get’s the cat’s attention, performs some hokus-pokus, and, behold the cat is a woman—and Venus sails away out of sight.

Knowing the premises as well as she does, it is easy for the cat-woman to get access to the bachelor—and do her worst. But as a married man the old chap seems quite happy and comfortable. The cat-woman finds herself bored, and her mind again turning to the rat subject. When she sees a rat she starts in pursuit and wishes she was a cat. Pretty soon Venus obligingly comes on the scene and gives her wish—much to the consternation of the husband, and a bachelor’s delight.

Moral: It is quite useless to try and change your nature.

GOVERNOR OF MAINE APPEARS IN HOLMAN DAY FEATURE

TO FILM “THE DUST FLOWER”

Goldwyn is preparing to start production on “The Dust Flower,” Basil King’s latest novel, which is now running serially in a matinee magazine.

The adaptation of the novel to the photo-drama has been entrusted to Charles Kenyon, and consulting with the screen dramatist Will King gives assurance of the progress of the picture to its completion, sharing the task of supervising the cutting with Mr. Kenyon, the director, and the film editor. An all-star cast is now being selected.

Frederic Kovert is suing The Cinderella Roof for cancellation of contract.

Director Fred Caldwell has just completed shooting, “The Mystery of Fenidale,” a seven-reel drama, with an all-star cast.

“The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry”

EQUITY AGAINST CENSORSHIP

The Los Angeles branch of the Actors’ Equity Association, of which there are sixteen thousand members in America, at a meeting held in Hollywood recently, adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, it is the sentiment of this organization that censorship is an un-American, unjust and unnecessary measure, and therefore, for the City of Los Angeles, at present the home of the Motion Picture Industry to go on record as being in favor of any film censor-board or film commission, would work an injustice to the entire industry.

Therefore, be it resolved, that this Association is opposed to the censorship measure now pending before the Los Angeles City Council.

And it is further resolved, that a committee of eight members of this Association be appointed to wait upon the City Council and to confer with the Producing Managers’ Association and other interested civic organizations to oppose censorship or film surveillance in Los Angeles.

FRENCH PICTURE NOTES
(From Variety)

The Cie Generale Francaise de Cinematographie held its annual meeting last week, when Benoit Levy occupied the chair and declared profits for the entire nine months of the concern to be 337,088 franes. Some criticisms were heard, particularly concerning the working of the Satie Marivaux. In 1919 there was a deficit of 210,936 franes at this hall, but during the direction of the company which took it over in April, 1920, a profit of 210,000 franes was recorded, and for the first quarter of 1921 there is already a profit of 186,000.

It was explained some of the productions of the Film d’Art have not yet been sold, and a sinking fund of 200,000 francs was allowed for the stocks of this branch of the concern. The business of the Agence Generale Cinematographe, also part of the company, which reached 5,320,710 francs in 1919, and 4,079,000 francs in 1920 reached 3,165,000 francs for the first three months of 1921. An increase in capital was proposed, to take up loans.

The French Paramount is working on “Perpetua” under the direction of Roberton, with Ann Forest as principal. The work is being done at Caudebec-en-Caux, where the free aid of the inhabitants is readily recruited, the local inhabitants being ticketed to death at the mere idea of being seen on the screen. The troupe of a traveling circus, the Cirque Pinder, in the district, is comprised in the cast.

Joseph J. Dowling is playing a principal character role in Katherine MacDonald’s forthcoming picture entitled, “The Infield.”

June Mathis’ next adaptation for Metro will be a story for Alice Lake which Maxwell Karger will direct.

The John M. Stahl Company has returned from the Mojave desert, where it has been filming scenes for “The Song of Life.”

Current Reviews (Continued from Page 5)

Very good moments are afforded by Cameron Cofey as the precocious Spivins infant, and Fred Gambold who is seen as Hezikiah Briers, Culverton’s "costabub." Edith York, Margaret Livingston and Al Flison do the remaining roles excellently. William Seiter is responsible for the direction of this Paramount release as is Bert Cohn for its good photography.

"A MOTION TO ADJOURN" (RKO)

If there is a producer in Los Angeles who has not in his possession a Peter B. Kyne story, let him rise and be observed. They’re all doing it.

The latest Kyne picturization, however, is Ben Wilson’s production, “A Motion to Adjourn,” which will in due course of time be released by Arrow. The story contains some human interest, comedy and a fairly diverting romance, but it gets a bad start and stumbles along for the first two reels until it gathers sufficient momentum to swing progressively ahead.

Roy Clement’s direction is noticeably uneven, as is King Grey’s photography.

Roy Stewart heads the cast in a breezy young ne’er-do-well, Silas Warner, Jr., and he waxes quite juvenile in his part, using his congenial personality to good ends. The action allotted him would scarcely be designated as difficult, but his ease does much to set it out.

In the leading feminine position Sallie Bleecker, Marjorie Daw is humaner than she can usually be depended upon to be, and her almost awkward movements are well suited to this role, since it is an illiterate little backwoods girl.

Sidney D’Albrook has been much better cast than he is as Silas’ younger brother Archie; Evelyn Nelson is satisfactory in Louise Warner, their sister. Norval MacGregor makes an interesting old character of Sallie’s unimprovising father, while Peggy Blackwood in the comedy character, Valene Hummer, gets several laughs. William Carroll, William White and Jim Welch, all in picturesque parts, complete the cast.

The material in “A Motion to Adjourn” qualifies no more than three reels, although it is “padded” into five. Such an error is as serious as it is ordinary. It should be more carefully guarded against.

...to the ministry will strip him of every vestige of his office and repudiate him. If the motion picture industry desires to clean itself from within, why does it not repudiate Arundel and his like?"

Would it be unkind or inconsiderate to suggest that had the picture people been sufficiently interested or ardent to have voted in support of their own candidates at the late election there would have been no such menace as censorship threatening our scope and well being at this time? Experience is indeed a dear teacher.

JEAN RILEY HER OWN MOTHER

How does it feel to be your own mother? This is the question Jean Riley is often asked since she started work in “Eyes That Know,” a Schwartz production, starring herself.

In this picture, Miss Riley plays two parts, those of a sixteen-year-old girl and her mother. The portrayal of the mother marks the first time in her career that Miss Riley appears in a character role.

"The Affairs of Anatol," Reviewed

It may be that Cecil de Mille has an exaggerated sense of humor; surely he knows the mental trend of his own particular following and with "The Affairs of Anatol," his current, most-advertised production, it would seem that he has indulged each to an extreme. By the foregoing observation we mean simply that in this, the most lavish picture of an extravagant producer, the public is being treated to a sensual, degrading treatise upon promiscuity which has been handled so cleverly that it may laugh with studied innocence in the face of average stupid virtue, while giving Mr. Worldly Wise one of the unhealthiest "kicks" of the cinema season.

Always an exponent of the most voluptuous side of America's unwholesomest social stratum, Cecil de Mille has finally attained a position in which although it may perhaps be desirable from the standpoint of financial renumeration, and perhaps holds something of fame, the possibility of his becoming a master or even a great man in the motion picture profession is precluded. We say this with due respect for the minds of the technical wizards with whom he is surrounded and who have done so much to accomplish his elevation to an envious rank, and for his own brilliant ability along commercial lines. For his work, for his outlook, however, we entertain little but distaste.

In his choice and arrangement of Snitzler's original subject matter he has found and developed an opportunity to exploit that rankest type of animalism which is daintily shod, suggestively draped and fascinatingly set amidst mythical luxury for the earthy gratification of the man who, we quote what we take to be the director's own press department in a trade weekly, "reads between the lines," meanwhile excusing to his more "simple" fans that which is perfectly evident to be the theme of his unworthy creation by triumphantly denying its existence in subtly worded subtitles.

Admittedly this covering two ends was a shrewd business measure as well as a technical feat but in attempting to satisfy a field as extensive as is the screen public's, there are more angles to take into account than the pair mentioned.

The first and by far the most important one upon the list of those overlooked in the picturization of this story has to do with the attitude toward it of such members of society as, being intelligent enough to grasp the underlying idea of the play as well as the reason for the methods employed to disguise that idea, and fastidious enough to resent the whole, depart from the showhouse running this Lasky special of specials with a feeling of disgust for not only one producer and his picture, but in all probability for the work of an entire industry. That that industry contains far more worthy intentions and achievements than otherwise, is an easy matter for disapproving humanity to pass over. Thus Mr. de Mille is not fair to his profession when he presents a play that is low.

Another very real injury in the imbecilic Anatol's adventures as screened, is to those who will never perceive the debasement in the story. For there will inevitably be individuals, particularly among the more empty headed females of the poorer classes who will witness the ridiculous sumptuousness of the residences in the piece with their foolish displays of trick trappings, and the gorgeously significant costuming of the various feminine charmers also utilized, with no less a feeling of discontent because of the fact that decent men do not maintain households on the order of Anatol's any more than self-respecting people exist or conduct themselves as the capricious Mr. de Mille would have us believe. Nor is there probably anything in the backgrounds of such unfortunate to discredit the inexcusable waste which is displayed in the sequences through which the hero is upheld in the smashing of an apartmentful of costly furniture in his anger and is justified in insisting upon the destruction of thousands in jewels for the gratification of a personal whim. That the general reaction of such incidents is insidious to those who accept them seriously, as we must remember many will, must be conceded as readily as the fact that the attraction held forth by such atmospheres is dangerous. Therefore in preaching waste in his picture, Mr. de Mille harms his public.

Another vital wrong is committed by any producer who holds up before his brother artists a clever, well handled creation which has as its basis just so much gilded filth. And that wrong is to himself, a man whose position is thereby unquestionably lowered. He has proven that he is capable of big things while choosing to be associated with trash.

If the photoplay in question were a drama containing the points which might easily have been made with it, under serious circumstances, there would be little of which to complain, but de Mille, the author of "The Affairs of Anatol," a comedy founded upon situations which are not funny and depending upon innuendos to both daringly disclose and carefully conceal his story, according to the viewpoint involved.

We believe that he has squandered much money and reputation for Lasky and himself as well as two hours too much of our personal time with this picture.

Certainly our profession has at this time enough to battle in the way of outside menaces, that those within the industry should not be permitted to make our position more difficult.

Film Capital Production Notes

FRANK EGAN PICTURE UNDER WAY

Patrick Calhoun has been engaged by Frank Egan to make the first picture to be released under the Egan banner. The original story and scenario is by Will N. Fox who will have charge of the photography.

GOLDWYN BUYS PETER B. KYNE STORY

"Brothers Under Their Skins," a short story by Peter B. Kyne, published in a recent issue of Cosmopolitan magazine, has been purchased for early production by the Goldwyn company, according to announcement by Vice-President Abraham Lehr.

NEW PRODUCTION STARTED

"The Yellow Streak" is to be the title of the original production co-starring Maryon Aye and "Bob" Reeves. Director Rogell and his company left recently for Beaumont, where many exteriors will be filmed.

The Aye-Reeves series will be known as "Cactus Features," and will be released via Western Pictures Exploitation company.

ON NEW ONE

Buster Keaton has started work on his fourth comedy for Joseph M. Schenck, which is to be released through Associated First National.

Virginia Fox, who has been playing opposite the comedian in a majority of his comedies, returns as the ingénue.

Eddie Cline is directing. Mr. Cline recently completed the cutting of "The Boat," and a preview of this, Buster's latest comedy, will be held shortly.

BUTLER PRODUCTIONS AT BURSTON STUDIOS

Louis Burston will hereafter "present" the David Butler productions. "Shooting" will begin shortly at the Burston studio on "In Walked Jimmy," by Minnie Z. Jaffa with W. S. Van Dyke directing.

"THE SILENT CALL" COMPLETED

The editing and titling having been completed, H. O. Davis announces that "The Silent Call" is ready for distribution by Associated First National Pictures. Among those in the all-star cast are John Bowers, Kathryn McGuire, William J. Dyer, Nelson MacDowell, Robert Bolter and William V. Mong.

CENTURY BUSY

Louis Jacobs, production manager at the Century studios, has every unit of the comedy organization in action. Brownie, dog star; Baby Peggy, Harry Sweet, Bud Jamison, Teddy, the Great Dane, and Bartie Barkett are contributing their services to the comedies.

Preparations are being made to use the Century lions in comedies and another animal serial, production of which will start very soon.

Irvig Cummings and his company are erecting for the Canadian Northwest to shoot exteriors for his next production entitled "The Valley of the Missing," an original by Robert Walker.

The exterior scenes of the first story of the new series of Texas Guinan two-reel Western and Northwestern productions are being photographed at Camp Keene.

Webster Cullison is having Ellis Parker Butler, author of "Pies Is Pies," write the continuity on the next "Philo Good, Detective" story, featuring Victor Potel.

AT GOLDWYN

"The City Feller" returned to the studio recently from Los Olivos, where location scenes were filmed under the direction of William Beaudine. "What Ho—the Cook," Gouverneur Morris' Chinese comedy, is making good progress under the direction of Rowland V. Lee. Jack Abbe and Winter Mason have the leading roles.

Irvin Willat and company, filming "Yellow Men and Gold," a Gouverneur Morris story, are on location at Catalina Island, making exteriors. Two ships have been chartered for the pictures.

Lon Chaney plays two distinct roles in "The Octave of Claudius," which is being produced under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

AT UNIVERSAL

"Barry Gordon," William F. Payson's story of heredity, is to be filmed as a starring vehicle for Herbert Rawlinson. Robert Henley will direct.

Harry Carey has returned from his vacation and is ready to start work on his forthcoming Universal Serial "The East." The story is "Man to Man," to be filmed from the novel by Jackson Gregory under the direction of Stuart Walker.

Hoot Gibson is at Cascade, where he is filming forest scenes for "The Badge of the Fighting Hearts," his forthcoming attraction which Reeves Eason is directing.

Edward Laemmle is completing "Winners of the West," in which Arct Acord is starring in a Twentieth Century-Fox feature. The story is "Man to Man," to be filmed from the novel by Captain John C. Fremont in his conquest of the West. Myrtle Lind is playing opposite the star.

ROACH STUDIO NOTES

"Sink or Swim," a Harry "Soin" Polland comedy, was previewed this week and has been shipped to New York. Charles Parrott directed.

The Ruth Roland company and thirty extras have left for Huntington Lake to be gone a month for the serial "The Timber Queen." Bruce Gordon heads the supporting cast.

Harold Lloyd is reading scripts prepared by Jean Havez and Sam Taylor, his scenario writers, for his next production which will commence presently.

AT VITAGRAPH

Jimmy Aubrey is expecting to start shortly on a new comedy.

Robert Easminger, directing Carmel Myers and Wallace MacDonald in the serial, "Breaking Through," has completed episode eight.

Charles Maigne is directing Corinne Griffith in her newest production, "Received Payment," now nearing completion at the east-run studios. "The Single Track," Miss Griffith's latest production, is ready for release.

Albert E. Smith, Jean Paige, who plays the leading female role in "The Prodigal Judge," the Eastern Vitagraph special, Edward Jose, the director, together with the camera men and nearly all of the east are at Cedars, a small Canadian town on the St. Lawrence River, where they will remain for about two weeks.

"The Dietator," by Richard Harding Davis, which will be filmed with Wallace Reid in the title role, was previously photographed with John Barrymore playing the chief part.

CURRENT REVIEWS

"AFTER THE SHOW"

Grauman's

An intensely interesting drama of theatre life is William de Mille's production for Lasky of "After the Show." After this week's local Paramount release. Including in its theme three great loves, namely the tender one which must everlastingly protect, the fundamentally youthful one which adores, and the mighty love of desire, the story treats mainly of the bitter battles resultant from such a strenuous combination. These conflicts which have been placed in highly dramatic situations by the authors, are treated with their director's characteristic demands of public favor with them with unusual artistic value. Trashy sentiment and conventionalism have no place in this play, but in it an age-old idea is developed naturally, if quite sentimentally.

Hazel MacDonald and Vianna Knowton are credited with the smoothly running scenario which gets on faultlessly, while Guy Wilkie's photography is rather above average than otherwise.

A small but excellent cast (all star) conducts the very human characters through their various actions and accomplishes an admirable piece of serious entertainment.

Eileen, a simple hearted little chorus girl and the leading feminine position, is played by Ilia Lee, who achieves with this portrayal the most intelligent and pleasing emotional acting which she has ever been able to offer the public. This fact goes to further dispel the idea that actresses are born oftener than trained. A comedy drama star at fifteen or so, Miss Lee was generally conceded to be the best of all one of several featured players in this picture she is at ease and convincing. The answer is three or four years of education. We are here with recommending concentrated study to about sixty per cent of our ingenues (of all ages) as the only way out. First defeats are quickly forgotten in this as in other lines of business when a deserving record is once established. Miss Lee bids fair to commence, at this time, her real career.

Jack Holt in the semi-unsympathetic leading male role is, as is his dependably correct self, both with regard to technique and to his typical interpretation of the role. His learning selflessness from another's sacrifice. Holt's popularity has grown until he now stands among those older leading men who are foremost in the ranks of public favor with them.

But leaving the others, the most appealing work in the play belongs to Charles Ogle, who represents all that constitutes protective love, as Pop O'Malley. Eileen's foster father. Years of just such sensitive playing usually, however, in less prominent parts than Pop, have also won him for the affection of thousands, not to mention the greatest admiration of his professional brothers. There is little need to criticize the roles under discussion. It's Ogle. His executions are always right.

Eve Southern, Carlton King, Shannon Day, Stella Seager, Ethel Wales, Bertram Johns and William Boyd each in a competent distinctive minor part complete the list of players.

While "After the Show" is not a film which children should witness promiscuously, it will attract greatly in solid minded adult circles and should therefore make a good average throughout the country.

William Courtleigh, Sidney Bracey and Arthur Hall are playing in support of Constance Binney in her current Realart photo-play.

"DANGEROUS CURVE AHEAD"

California

There is certainly nothing about the comedy drama, "Dangerous Curve Ahead," that is big enough, human enough or superior enough to suggest its relationship to "The Old Nest," although they are both the brain children of Rupert Hughes and both deal, of course from varied angles, with domestic relationships; however the former Goldwyn production is without an entertaining photo-play possessing many superlatively clever subtitles and one or two exceedingly funny situations which by themselves would "get it by." That part of the action seems to have been hurriedly "ground out" and that the cutting is more or less "chopping" in this instance is of course deplorable--but scarcely as tragic as it would have been under less beguiling circumstances.

E. Mason Hopper's direction is a disappointment in that a considerable amount of it seems to have been turned out under a time pressure of some kind. It is unprofitable always to "manufacture" pictures and from the effect it is almost certain that this one was so treated. John Mescall's photography is standard.

Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix are co-starred in "Dangerous Curve Ahead," and although we wouldn't judge that either of them were inherently comedians, even their lightest action gets along remarkably well, especially in the case of the latter. The cutting precludes many opportunities for valuable transition for both of these performers, but that cannot possibly be laid to their doors.

Miss Chadwick as Phoebe Jones, a continually discontented but presumably an average wife, collects no sympathy for her part and indeed to do so would have required more subtlety than she has yet displayed to us, but there is nothing basically wrong with her work which may, indeed, even please the ordinary female audience.

Mr. Dix, on the other hand, as much through his opposite's action as his own, is rendered something of a hero in Harley Jones, Phoebe's better half.

Lefty Flynn did not strike us as being particularly well cast as Aspin Newton, "the millionaire," who pursues Mrs. Jones. Certainly he directs against his opposition only a placid animosity, if any. Little Virginia Stevens draws many pleased exclamations from the feminine observers as the Jones baby, while Robert de Vilbi and Nestor, playing her children. Several convincing sick scenes are the work of Master de Vilbi.

Kate Lester, Edythe Chapman and James O'Neill play small parts well. "Dangerous Curve Ahead" is essentially a woman's picture.

"THE RAGE OF PARIS"

Talley's

"The Rage of Paris," Miss Dupont's somewhat "Universally" entitled initial starring vehicle for that organization could scarcely have been a more inauspicious one in which to begin an exasperation never bear at the unsuspecting public. Basing its plot upon a series of situations featuring Sex unpleasantly capitalized, which are given far too little excuse for being laid. Not Rabell store drags in many indefinite subtitles and scenes which rather establish its suitability to lower Main street, as it is a bit too "messed" to meet with general appreciation.

It is apparent that Jack Conway has worked industriously with the direction, but it is particularly well cast as Anson Newton, "the millionaire," who pursues Mrs. Jones. Certainly he directs against his opposition only a placid animosity, if any. Little Virginia Stevens extracts many pleased exclamations from the feminine observers as the Jones baby, while Robert de Vilbi and Nestor, playing her children. Several convincing sick scenes are the work of Master de Vilbi.

Mr. Pring won a silver and gold loving cup recently at the Westgate Tennis Club's fall tournament.

Irving Cummings has re-engaged Abe Fried as cinematographer for his current production, "The Valley of the Missing." Mr. Fried shot the two last Cummings productions entitled "Jules of the River," and "Trapped."

Charlie Dorety, until recently featured in Century comedies, has been engaged by Jack White as supervising director of Hamilton-White comedies, to play a part in his latest all-star comedy for Educational, as yet untitled.
CREATURES OF CELLULOID

The screen writer has, in common with the actor, many problems. For one thing, both are subject to the law of economic determinism in the profession, or less limited in art expression, in a truly ultimate sense by the surface-thinking, unbeautiful-minded custodians of the box-office; the motion picture business is one of the few manufacturing enterprises where human talent of the most rarefied character has been found necessary to hire exchange managers whose mentalities were keyed low enough to contact the exhibitor-mind on its own plane.

A motion picture trade paper is a publication which is addressed to and circulates among motion picture exhibitors and exchange managers. Any other circulation is negligible, incidental.

William A. Johnston, editor of the Motion Picture News, in an editorial captioned "Creatures of Celluloid" in the News of September 24th, criticises motion picture stars with considerable severity. Among other things, he says: "Few, very few of you are artists, an artist being an individual who by dint of tremendous work, patience and long and supreme self-denial brings to perfection the subjective immortal ideal. Talent is a birthright of the human. You are—most all of you—just human beings. Your picture Stardom is largely the result of someone else brains and money, plus, especially, the magic circulation of the motion picture. Many of you are mere photographic types. You bedevil yourself and strut with all the simple vanity of a peacock. You become as captious and cruel as any ship's sailor elevated by chance to the Sultanship of a South Sea Island. You think you've been touched by divine fire, whereas you've only been touched with celluloid. . . . The serious menace of your star career is that you give celluloid fame lifts you above man-made laws and the decencies of society and the sacred precepts of the home.

This world is a hall of illusions! Here is the editor of a magazine which stands for exploitation and intensive advertising of motion pictures and motion picture stars. In this magazine, advertising is accepted and printed which often exaggerates the merits of most mediocre photoplays, thereby creating a confusion in the public mind. In this way the exhibitor is enlisted for further advertising co-operation—with the result that the extensively and intensively advertised picture becomes the heavy weight of the box-office—than the purely artistic picture. The amusement-hungry public is led to view an inferior photoplay because of its intensive advertising, while the artistic photoplay perishes on the dismal shores of exhibitor and distributor indifference. The kind of advertising given many photoplays creates unsound values, ultimately accepted and absorbed by the public. Is the Motion Picture News concerned in any way with artistry of the picture itself?

I know many screen actors and actresses who have been longing to appear in screen plays of a higher artistic order, and who deplore the low level of competition—via the exhibitor, of course—for fame that is classic or dignified art. But the screen drama is shackled by exhibitor opinion! And exhibitors are greatly concerned by the organs dedicated to commercial development—to the development of a motion picture industry, but not a motion picture art.

It is an amusing though maudlin spectacle, that of the editor of a motion picture trade journal voicing an opinion as to who is and who is not an artist. What can a man whose eyes are of necessity closed with gold-dust know of art? When a man has for years conducted a publication leveled to the comprehension of film exchange managers and motion picture exhibitors, and has SUCCESSFULLY done so, it is proof positive of his constitutional incapacity for an understanding of Art. If a man through a series of misfortunes was reduced to editing a trade paper as a temporary bridge, a make-shift, he might still validly claim artistic perception—but not so one whose soul is not rebelled against the grosser vibrations, against consorting with money-making automatons for any considerable period of time.

In the first paragraph of Mr. Johnston's editorial he refers to the Arbuckle case. In fact, it is the foundation for what follows, for an arraignment of one who, being without sin, feels called upon to throw stones.

The fact is, the actor and actress represent a far higher type—generally speaking—than does either the exchange man or exhibitor. I know many actors and actresses of culture and sapience—people whose varied emotional and intellectual experiences make them a delight to meet; I have met but few—a negligible few—such exhibitors and exchange men. Most of them are exceedingly vulgar and stupid. In fact, the average exhibitor—and I've met hundreds of them—ranks socially lower than the average butcher.

That there are a number of motion picture personalities indulging in a fast and furious high life is beyond question. Personally, I think a little of that nowadays and then is most acceptable. And I'm convinced that exhibitors, exchange men and the employees of trade journals essay the high life in exact ratio to their amount of personal graces, extent of bankroll, opportunity, and season of life. Like all other humans, they are deterred from frolicking by such factors as fear of detection, shortage of the income, lack of good looks, and old age. Frequently the last two deterrents, through degenerate processes of rationalization, are not taken into consideration, and, grotesquely enough, make for high virtue!—usually self-concealed.

So far as strutting goes, I have never been that before the arrogance and insolence of certain successful motion picture exhibitors—In the presence of men and women of superior artistic and intellectual attainments, these men and movie trade journal employees have nothing to strut about and no one to strut before. They're the publicists of the show—an art and their activities are of utter importance.

I believe Mr. Johnston should be completely forgiven for his fuzz pas, one can never tell what a man to do a ridiculous thing—especially to indite so dull, solemn and hollow an editorial as "Creatures of Celluloid." Some day we will have an editor to deal with that problem. In other words, what had Mr. Johnston been eating and drinking before he composed this grotesque? What does a motion picture exhibitor or theater exhibitor feel upon who addresses his advertising to humanity? What damnable diet was responsible for the creation of so horrible a popular song as "Ain't We Got Fun?" These are vexatious yet fundamental problems.

In a saner or more humorous moment Mr. Johnston would not have condemned motion picture stars, but would have placed the blame for the Arbuckle incident and all other incidents where it intrinsically belongs.—the shoulder of the GREAT UN-KNOWABLE POWER which is responsible for all things, from the spilling of planets and suns into space to the constitution of such an absurd thing as a motion picture exhibitor—created artistically blind.

There must be solidarity in the motion picture industry, and it is high time some writers conscientiously continue to function if it can be proven that motion picture stars are mostly "creatures of celluloid." Can one write for those who do not believe in Art demands sincerity, even if the marketing and exhibition of motion pictures does not? Motion picture stars grow artistically through acting roles of depth and subtext in intelligently conceived photoplays.

Mr. Johnston may believe that a defense of the acting fraternity by the editor of a magazine of interest to screen writers is hardly appropriate. But Mr. Johnston's statements go unchallenged would be to reduce the writing of photoplays for motion picture stars to an absurdity.

Mr. Johnston's gesture most futile in discussing the "magic" destruction of stars. The career of a star or a bootblack or a trade paper editor of the Motion Picture News is not susceptible of sudden destruction—just as one's life proper. Destiny is eternally capricious. Screen writers, actors, directors and cinematographers will continue to live colorfully and interestingly, despite Brother Johnston's warnings. Yes, they will be somewhat lax; rigidity produces Puritan archetypes of Art that are alien to the motion picture exhibitors. Artistic folk will continue to "take no thought for the morrow," will remain generous and easy-going and tolerant, failing to conserve their finances—occasionally functioning at benefits for fellow artists—or outsiders!

I hope that never again will anyone have the presumption to hold the actor up to scorn before motion picture exhibitors and exchange men—those sluggish sailors on the great ocean of the screen. And let all commercialites like this:

When the most inconsequential actor's earthly career closes, he leaves at least a few traces of his existence on Life's horizon. His image is painted on a ship passing forever from sight leaves fading figures of smoke suspended beneath luminous clouds.

For actors real—actors—do not take themselves seriously. Unlike moralizing editors, they do not mistake their shrill piping for the music of the spheres.
MUMMERS WORKSHOP OPENS FALL SEASON

The band of theater revolutionists known as the Mummer's Workshop, will open the fall season with a meeting and informal evening on Tuesday, October 11. Ferdinand Pinney Earle, motion picture director, will talk on the appropriate subject of the influence brought on the film world by the modern theater movement. All Mummer's and their friends are invited to assemble to hear Mr. Earle and to open the year by co-operation. Hosts who will preside at the informal reception following the meeting are Miss Pamela, Betty Hascom, Frank Bartholomew, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon (Alma Francis) Milton Monroe, Mrs. Charles Meredith (Melba Meising), Yvette Mitchell, Magda Lade, Ann May, Olive Brockett, Miriam Meredith, and Wyn Ritchie. The Workshop is to give its first fall production shortly under the direction of Charles Meredith. "The Affairs of Anastol," by Schnitzler, has been postponed until Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Thomas return from their European trip with Miss June Barnsdaile.

ELECT OFFICERS

Studio Film Laboratories, Inc., of the Hal E. Roach Studios, held a meeting recently when the following were elected officers: T. J. Crizer, president; Walter Lundin, vice-president, and H. M. Walker, secretary and treasurer. The three with the addition of J. L. Murphy form the directorate with T. J. Crizer, Walter Lundin and Charles Parrott as executive committee.

BRAZILIANS ENTERTAINED

Admiral Conrado Heck, Commander of the Brazilian BattleShip Ninas Garea, together with Lieut. Paulo Penido and Nicente Abelin, of the Brazilian Consulate, were guests at the Talmadge Studio, recently.

REVENUE BUREAU WARNING

A warning to motion picture production companies has been issued by the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department against the custom of changing the names of ships for motion picture purposes.

CENSORSHIP IN AUSTRALIA

Australia also is having its censorship problems. The blue-spectacled kill-joys have there changed the title of Carter De Haven's "Twin Beds" to "A Sleepless Night," despite the fact that the stage version toured Australia under the original title of "Twin Beds."

Edward Martin, Helen Lynch and Herbert Foster are cast in Constance Binney's new play for Realart which Maurice Campbell is directing.

Edward Cecil, Chas. D. Bennett and Arthur Hoyt are playing parts in the new May McAvoy picture under the direction of William D. Taylor.

"Bruce of the Royal Mounted," the current Finis Fox picture under production at the Fine Arts Studios, has been titled "Man's Law and God's."

J. Frank Glendon is playing an important role in Jane Novak's current play produced by John and Edward Novak.

H. M. Walker, who titles Hal E. Roach comedies, has returned to his work at the Roach Studio after a vacation spent in New Orleans and Palm Beach.

Snitz Edwards

Bradley J. Smollen, Vitagraph scenario writer, purchased a home recently in Laurel Canyon.

The artist's colony at Laguna Beach now has its own weekly publication. It is called "Laguna Life."

On completing the editing of his picture starring May McAvoy, William D. Taylor will go to San Diego for a few days.

Henry Hathaway, previously with the Frank Lloyd company at Goldwyn, is now handling properties for Irving Cummings Productions.

Larry Semon's comedy "The Bakery," simultaneously played two Broadway (New York) theatres, the Strand and the Rialto, for its first run.

Fred Newmeyer, director of the Harold Lloyd company, has gone to San Francisco where he will spend his vacation between pictures.

Universal City associates of Louis Freiberger are planning to observe the birthday anniversary presently of that veteran employe of the "Bis U."

Edward Sosman, together with his assistant, David Howard, is busily engaged editing J. L. Frothingham's most recent production, "A Bride of the Gods."

Charles Condon, representative of the department of public information at the Louis B. Mayer studio, is vacationing at Wheeler Hot Springs with members of the John M. Stahl Company, who are sojourning there pending the beginning of work upon "The Furbringers."

GRAUMAN ON NEW YORK TRIP

During his recent stopover in Kansas City on his way to New York, Sid Grauman was tendered a luncheon banquet by a committee of showmen and theatrical magnates of that city. While in New York it is expected that Mr. Grauman will consummate several deals which will bring artists and performers to Los Angeles and Southern California theaters.

PRESIDENT VIEWS LLOYD COMEDIES

Pathe, upon the New York visit of President Harding, presented the White House chief with the Lloyd films "New or Never" and "I Do," which were shows on the yacht "Mayflower."

Dwight Crittenbeden has been confined to his bed for the past few days with a siege of grippe.

Theodore Kosloff is training May McAvoy for a dance which will be a feature of one of her forthcoming pictures.

Nosh Deery is enacting a principal role in "Deliverance," starring Jane Novak which Chester Bennett is directing.

Wanda Hawley was the guest of honor recently at a ball given in her honor by leading citizens of Santa Barbara.

Harry D. Wilson, publicity man for the Jackie Coogan company, has moved his office to the Robert Brunton Studios.

Claude Gillingwater has finished his work in Jackie Coogan's new production, "My Boy," now in the making at the Robert Brunton Studios.

Two child actors, Mary Jane Irving and Pat Moore, are cast in the forthcoming May McAvoy picture which William D. Taylor is directing.

During the recent tour of Douglas MacLean, the members of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce made him an honorary member of that body.

The baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Desmond was christened recently, with Bill Hart acting as godfather. Mrs. Desmond was Mary McVor on the screen.

David W. Griffith and "Billy" Bitzer, cameraman, associated for many years, are so long together. Mr. Bitzer has been succeeded by Heberick Sarob.

Virginia Brown Faire, remembered for her work in Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy," has been chosen for a prominent part in Emett Flynn's current production for Fox, "The Count of Monte Cristo."

Orin Denny, who organized the Universal-Smithsonian-African expedition after the accident in which William Armstrong and Dr. Hunt were killed and in which Pityy Horsie was badly injured, is on his way back to the United States with motion picture film of unusual African scenes.

Robert Edeson, stage and screen star, has signed a contract with the Stowell and Webb casting directors, by which they become his business representatives. Mr. Edeson recently closed a special engagement at the Majestic Theatre where he was featured in "Peter." (Continued on page 17)
Production Notes (Continued from Page 4)

AT REAL ART

Work has started on the opening scenes of the new May McAvoy starring vehicle which William D. Taylor is producing. The scenario by George Hopkins is from the story by Sonya Levien.

Bebe Daniels is resting this week in the mountains. On her return she will start work on an original story, a tale of Cuba, by Nina Wilcox Putnam, the scenario for which has been written by Fred Myton. Chester M. Franklin will direct.

Constance Binney and company, under the direction of Maurice Campbell, have gone to San Francisco, where Argentino farm scenes will be taken at a location on the peninsula.

Wanda Hawley's next production will be the Violet Clark adaptation of an original by John Blackwood, theatre manager and dramatist.

Mary Miles Minter is completing the Fiji Island picture, which is to be a January release. Frank Urson is directing the picture which was adapted to the screen by Fred Myton from an original story by Ewart Adamson, brother of Penrhyn Stanlaws, artist and director.

AT BRUNTON

W. E. Keefe is scheduled to start production, presently on a series of five reeler features featuring a well known star.

Camera work has started on Chester Bennett's production, "Deliverance," a story of the north woods, starring Jane Novak.

The finished production of "A Bride of the Gods," was viewed recently in one of the projecting rooms.

Camera work has been completed on R. A. Walsh's new production, "Riders of the Dust," starring Miriam Cooper, and it is now being cut and titled.

Director Edward Sotman, who is under contract with J. L. Frothingham, is working on a new script which will go into production on or about October 10th.

AT CHRISTIE'S

"Fresh from the Farm" is the latest comedy being photographed at Christie's. It has Bobbie Vernon in the star role with Josephine Hill, Victor Rottman and others playing in support. Vernon is now before the camera in "A Barnyard Cavalier," with Viola Daniel enacting the leading feminine role.

Neil Burns is appearing in a new untitled comedy which Scott Sidney is directing. Baby Jane Hart and Laddie, the educated collie, both of whom appeared in "Sneakers," are playing supporting roles. Helen Darling is the leading lady.

The forthcoming comedy which will costar Dorothy Devere and Earl Rodney is entitled, "Saving Sister Susie.

Lester Cuneo's next picture, entitled, "Silver Spurs," is being cast at the Warner Bros. Studio.

Arthur D. Ripley is progressing with the editing of the film production of "The Rubaiyat."

Colleen Moore will begin on her second Rupert Hughes picture for Goldwyn this week. She recently completed the title role in "The Wall Flower."

Jack Coogan, father of Jackie Coogan, and manager of the company is enacting the role of an ice cream vendor in his son's second starring vehicle entitled "My Boy."

Ivor McFadden Productions, Francis Ford Studio, Hollywood, will consider five- or six-reel "boob" stories, synopsis, continuity, or ideas. All scripts sent to this company will be returned as soon as read, if unavailable.

Charles Dudley

Rogell-Brown Productions, 4532 Hollywood Blvd., will consider two-reel western or northwestern stories, either published or original, in synopsis or continuity form, to co-star Bob Reeves and Maryon Aye. All scripts forwarded to the above company will be returned in two weeks if unavailable.

Texas Guinan Productions, Fine Arts Studio, Hollywood, Calif., require original stories for two-reel western productions, suitable to the character of Texas Guinan and also containing a strong and virile male leading part. The story should, of course, be logical with action on and off horseback. All scripts sent to Jesse J. Goldburg, Gen. Mgr., will be carefully read and reported on within forty-eight hours after receipt.

Cosmopolitan Productions, New York City, in the market for published stories only, submitted in synopsis form, for all-star casts. Scripts should be addressed to John Starbuck, Assistant Editor, Scenarior Department.

Selznick Productions, West Fort Lee, N. J., will consider stories based on plays, books, magazine stories or originals, preferably published in magazine form. For special productions anything strong and dramatic, for several characters of equal importance, must be "different," and abundant in opportunities for the very best in picture production. For the company's several stars, stories should be as follows: Comedy dramas, society and otherwise, in which the star has an unusual role, for Elaine Hammerstein; comedy dramas or drames where action is required, preferably stories of typical middle-class American life, for Eugene O'Brien; strong, virile dramas, society, business or unusual stories for Conway Tearle; strong dramas with great acting opportunity, for William Faversham; farce comedies, and swift-moving comedy dramas, for Owen Moore; comedies or comedy dramas for Martha Mansfield; dramas in which the leading role is very dramatic and unusual, foreign types in American settings desirable, for Zoe Neene. Address all matter to The Scenarior Department of the above named company.

David Butler Productions, Brunton Studio, Hollywood, Los Angeles, is in the market for either original or published stories submitted in synopsis form for star who plays small town or country roles. Scripts will be returned as soon as read.

C. L. Chester Productions, 1428 Couver St., Los Angeles, Calif., will consider original stories (synopsis or ideas) for domestic situation, one-reel comedies, carrying fast force action, and opportunity for working out the stories in sag action. Scripts should be addressed to Raymond S. Harris, Scenarior Editor, and if rejected will be returned in from one to two weeks.

Christie Film Co., 6101 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., is in the market for original stories for all-star casts, submitted in synopsis form, preferably one and two-reel farce comedies, written around young and likeable people, new worldly, etc. Scripts should be addressed to the Scenarior Department, and if unavailable, will be returned within three days.

T. H. R. Film Corp., Balboa Studios, Long Beach, will consider original stories dealing with Royal Northwest Mounted Police or any other outdoor subject submitted in synopsis for all-star casts. Communications should be addressed to R. S. Russell, and if rejected scripts will be returned after week.

STATEMENT OF OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, & CIRCULATION
SUBMITTED IN COMPLIANCE WITH THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912.

Of Camera! The Digest of the Motion Picture Industry, published weekly at Los Angeles, California, for October 1st, 1921.

Of State of California, County of Los Angeles—San Francisco, California.

Date of Filing for the State and County aforesaid, personally appeared Fanchon Royer, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that she is the Managing Editor of the Camera! and that the following is, to the best of her knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, and circulation of the above-mentioned publication, the publication of the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 431, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are:

Publisher—Raymond Cannon, 4512 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, California.
Managing Editor—Fanchon Royer, 4513 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, California.

2. That the owners are: (Give names and addresses of individual owners, or, if a corporation, give its name and the names and addresses of stockholders owning 1 percent or more of the total amount of stock.)

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 percent or more of the total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: (If there are none, so state.) None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a holder of record, and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

5. That the average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the six months preceding the date shown above is:

Fanchon Royer.
Sworn to and subscribed before me this 27th day of September, 1921,

(Sgd)

H. H. Schnieder, Notary Public.

(My commission expires Sept. 1, 1925.)

Harry Van Meter, John MacParlane and Lila Leslie are playing in support of Antonio Moreno in his forthcoming play for Vitagraph entitled "Thou Art the Man."

RUBAIYAT MUSIC OPENS FESTIVAL

During the four-day Greek theatre music festival, held recently in Berkeley, Calif., Charles Wakefield Cadman, pianist and composer, conducted a group of his own composition, four numbers of which were written for Ferdinand Earle's motion picture production of "The Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam. They were "In the Garden," "Merry with Fruitful Grapes," "In the Potter's Shop," and "The Caravan." Mr. Cadman will play the Rubaiyat group of compositions throughout his recital tour this fall.

Piano transcriptions of The Rubaiyat suite will appear simultaneously with the picture's release.

COL. SELIG SIGNS WITH EXPORT & IMPORT FILM CO.

Mr. J. Auerbach, vice-president of the Export & Import Film Co., Inc., announces the closing of a contract between his company and the Selig Productions Corporation, under which this producer in wild animal picture production will make pictures exclusively for the Export & Import Film Company for a period of three years. Colonel Selig has already started production on a new animal-jungle character picture, of fifteen episode length.

"THE POWER WITHIN" COMPLETED

"The Power Within," by Dr. Robert Norwood, the first of a series of feature productions to be made by the Achievement Pictures Corporation, has just been completed and will soon be ready for an early release. William Tooler plays the leading role, and is supported by Pauline Garon, Nellie Parker, Spaulding, Dorothy Allen, Robert Bentley, Robert Kenyon, Joseph Burke and Thomas Brooke.

The picture was made under the direction of Lom P. Kennedy, who has been producing independent productions for the past three years. Associated with Mr. Kennedy was Walter R. Sheridan, assistant director; Albert Viragh-Flower, art director, and George Peters, cameraman.

JAPANESE PRINCES ENTERTAINED

BY BEN WILSON

During their recent visit to Los Angeles, the two Japanese Princes were conducted through the Ben Wilson Studio where they were served tea and where scenes were enacted for their benefit.

NEW YORK TRIP

William de Mille leaves in a few days for New York, where he will confer with Clara Beranger upon his next Paramount production. Mr. de Mille recently completed the cutting and assembling of "Miss Lulu Betts," his latest Lasky production.

PREPARING FIVE-REELER

Roy Hughes of the Brulah Hughes Productions Company of El Paso, Texas, has taken over the Brulah interests, and is preparing "Brought Back," a five-reeler production, featuring Adela Sambrano. Shooting will start presently with Mr. Hughes directing.

"Tony" Gaudio and James Mamati, cameramen and assistant respectively, of J. L. Frothingham's "A Bride of the Gods," departed last week for the big game country on a camping expedition.

The Story Idea that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell an original story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

Palmer Photoplay Corporation,

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW
By John Lwery

Glen Center Ranch, Burbank, Calif.

Dear nephew:

Your letter of welcome to local scene and contents absorbed. Me and you both so far as what you say about how to be decent and how to be decent in pictures. I suppose a good many folks think that none of us are decent. In the face of circumstances we will have to admit that some of us have been rather careless about hitting the straight and narrow. So careless, in fact, that from a distance it looks as if we were all more or less unsmirched. When I found a flea on one of those puppets saw the other day, I right away suspended the whole bunch. I don't mean to infer that there are any fleas in our business, but there must be some kind of a germ bug at large. Maybe it's one of those with a dollar mark on him. We make believe so much, and some of us are such good actors that I reckon we forget we're not taking direction, and go ahead and grab the scene. Anybody can see how a bird playing a heap of bug for several consecutive pictures just naturally becomes one of them things. And there comes a time when he can't hear the camera, but pulls a scene just the same, and the next day there's a Censorship Board somewhere there wasn't one before. Believe me, Boy, if I had anything to do with the lighting of pictures there wouldn't be any beeps or anything that I didn't want the kids to see, and as you know, your Aunt and I are pretty particular about such things. Putting in "rough stuff" because it is true to nature is the "bunk." A chicken is provided with a bunch of feathers, but when we are going to eat him we dispense with the feathers. Every day or so somebody gets a ride at the expense of the city, and registers at the municipal hotel as a motion picture actor or -ess, as the case may be. The sooner this habit is overcome the quicker. I say, give everybody actually making a living (no, that won't do)—everybody actually working in pictures a tag of identification, then the police court reporters won't have so much to say about our personal appearance. Any time the traffic laws or laws of decency are disregarded, take up the tag; revoke the license for all time. A group once volunteered the information that where there's smoke there's fire. Figuratively speaking, there is quite a little smoke arising from the puppet-mapping and now and then I figure it's up to us who didn't start the fire to put it out before the fire buggies arrive. Again, figuratively speaking, the fire department I have alluded to is made up of censors, and they have got just enough sense to not only put out the fire, but to put the business out, too, if they wouldn't collect the insurance. When we have a real fire in a cutting room or laboratory, we don't go over to the barber shop to get a shave before trying to put it out. The combustibles in our business are "real" combustibles, and we always try to get there before we can. The alarm is already turned in, so let's go. With best wishes, will close for this time. Write again soon.

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY.

Virginia Valli is playing opposite Dustin Fairman in his current production for Fox, temporarily titled "Curseurd."

Marjorie Daw, Winter Hall and Doris Dawn have been selected for the supporting cast of "Barry Gordon," Herbert Rawlinson's next starring vehicle.

Business has been bad. Do we want it to be worse? The eyes of the world are upon the development of the censorship question in Los Angeles. Are we going to allow a precedent to be here established that if used as a pattern will paralyze our art and wreck our business?

This week settles the controversy in the City Council. Get together with the protestors!

Who Will Reach the Actor?

It is the time, as it never has previously been the time for the final explosion of the age-old tradition which holds that, politically or any other way, the theatrical profession cannot be organized. This is because the Censorship and Blue Law Advocates, who are themselves banked threateningly together against us, are looking for an opportunity to strike when our interests are most scattered and our resistance is resolutely at lowest ebb.

Some months ago we felt that we had cause to indulge in much elation over the formation of the Affiliated Picture Interests, an association including in its membership a representative of each organization already existing in the motion picture industry, and dedicated to the opposition of all legislation detrimental to the proper progress of the cinema.

Certainly it was a material step toward the achievement of a political conscience, but as frequently comes to pass in the case of such undertakings, it has not proven vital or even sympathetic to the industry generally, and the actor particularly. Of the several reasons for this fact we find ourselves concerned primarily with only one, which is, that speaking individually the professional's support has not yet been invited in a manner convincing to him, so that while he has, in all probability, favored many of the projects and approved some of the accomplishments of the Affiliated Interests, still a knowledge of that body's attitude is far from being in any way essential to his immediate happiness. Therefore, the actor, the mediocre actor, yes and the extra man, whose valuable numbers must be taken account of by those expecting to attain for the picture business anything like artistic independence from the blue-complexioned gloom spreaders who, given the opportunity, would quickly eliminate us, has not yet been fired with the desire to align himself with his kind for the final safeguarding of, if not his art, then his bread and butter.

This is the man who should have the deplorable conditions of today pointed out to him as they affect his personal comfort and the comforts of his friends. He should be registered immediately that he can have no excuse or reason for not using the power allotted him as a United States citizen for the great good of his industry. When the Affiliated Picture Interests or any other association with an intelligent outlook reaches these lesser or least members of the motion picture industry, then it will have really shown something to be accomplished of which we are now in dire need. The subject will well bear our concentrated consideration.

"Gypsy Blood," a German made production, the work of Ernst Lubitsch and Pola Negri, has a Los Angeles showing at Tally's Theatre, commencing October 16th.

Since noting the announcement we have wondered whether this fact were generally known. Or do our viewpoints change as rapidly and our enthusiasm die as quickly and as futilely as any others? Who can say?

Overtime

Some of our companies are forgetting, apparently, their liability to prosecution for working women over eight hours a day and their allotted time per week. It would almost seem that we have enough with which to contend as it is, but human nature, even when manifested through the machinery of a corporation, enjoys to create difficulties for itself. In any event the overtime policy is its own worst enemy in California, and the studios aren't overly popular in some of our courts. What about it?

Martin Johnson's Jungle Picture Attracts

Unusually keen exhibitor interest is said to have been aroused by Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," the initial production of the Exceptional Pictures Corporation, which recently played a pre-release engagement at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, receiving the praise of metropolitan critics, including daily newspapers, weekly newspapers and the trade press.

Telegram from exhibitors in every section of the United States are said to have been received at the offices of Exceptional Pictures requesting information regarding this unusual feature production and expressing the desire to book it at an early date.

It is known that several of the largest national distributors are in consultation with Alexander Beyfuss, vice-president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, at the present time, with the object of securing "Jungle Adventures" for release. —Ex. Trade Review.
P. Dempsey Tabler is at present working on the continuity of one of his own stories, the working title of which will be "Louisiana Jack." Shooting on this picture will start the latter part of this month.

EDUCATIONAL FILM NOTES

Colonel William N. Selig is busy these days producing two-reel, all-star dramatic photoplays. The latest comedy produced by the new Campbell organization is called "A Nick of Time Hero," and is to be released soon. It presents in leading roles Doreen Turner and Hoy Watson, Jr., two child actors.

"The Never to Return Road," the third of the Selig-Rork photoplays has just been released, and has its first showing at the Strand Theatre, on Broadway, New York. Wallace Beerly and Margaret McCade are the featured players.

"A Rural Cinderella" is the latest Punch comedy featuring Louise Fazenda. Chester Conklin plays the male comedy lead.

"Strolling Minstrels," is a recently completed Bruce Scenario.

SELLING CAMPAIGN

Mike Rosenberg, treasurer of the Western Pictures Exploitation Company, who is making a transcontinental selling campaign in behalf of independent producers of Los Angeles, recently sold to Louis Wyman of the All-Star Feature Distributors the California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaiian rights to the following Los Angeles product: Four David Butler, five-reel features which Louis Burstyn is making; twelve Irving Cummings Maple Leaf specials; twelve Dick Hatton five-reel Prairie Productions; sixteen Cactus Features starring "Boo" Reeves and Myron Aye; three Edna Schley's "Scattergood Baines" productions; three Western Cullison productions of the Ellis Parker Butler, "Pilole Gubb, Detective" stories featuring Victor Potel, and three one-reel scenes, "The Missions of California."

PATHE PRODUCER RETURNS

After a month's absence, spent in traveling through the East, Cyrus J. Williams, Pathe producer of the Tom Santschi productions and "The Adventures of Bill and Bob" series of boy-trapper pictures, has returned to Los Angeles. While in New York Mr. Williams conferred with Arthur S. Kane and officials of the Pathe organization with reference to future production plans.

CUMMINGS DEPARTS FOR LOCATION SCENES

Irving Cummings and his company, including Robert Walker, Norris Johnson, Frank Whitson, William Quinn, Eddie Cheesman, Tom Shirley, Henry Hathaway and Thunder Face expect to be away from Los Angeles all winter making scenes for Mr. Cummings' forthcoming series of Northwestern photoplays.

TOURNEUR MAKES READY

Maurice Tourneur has leased studio space at the Ince Studios, where he will make his headquarters during the coming months, and is re-assembling his production staff preliminary to commencing his first special for Associated First National release.

READY TO START

Director Frank Lloyd, formerly with Goldwyn, has returned from a visit to Honolulu and will begin an independent production in the near future.

Bill White, character man, has been engaged for a prominent part with the Ben Wilson production.

Kathryn Sumner
Who Plays "Flora Dora" in "The Son of Wallingford" at the Cinema This Week

AT UNIVERSAL

Ellen Sedgwick is busy on the scenes of a short reel western, entitled "A Woman's Wits," directed by Edward Kull. Miss Sedgwick will be starring in her new serial, "The Clutch of the Octopus," as Eddie Polo finishes "The Secret Four." The Sedgwick serial is to be directed by Edward Kull from George G. Kimpton's scenario based on the Livingston Stanely explorations of Africa.

The title of Marie Prevost's recent production, "The Girl Who Knew All About Mary," has been changed to "Nobody's Fool." Frank Mayo has gone to the Big Bear country to film the opening scenes for "Wards of the North," by Clarence Budington Kelland, under the direction of Jack Conway.

Harry Carey is working on "Man to Man," which Stuart Paton is directing, while Lilian Rich heads the supporting cast.

"As Told in the Office," a comedy featuring Bert Roach, has recently been completed by Craig Hughes.

"Wild Honey," starring Priscilla Dean, is well under way under the direction of Wesley Ruggles, from Helen Molesworth's adaptation of the novel by Cynthia Stockley.

King Bagot is assembling an all-star cast to film "Human Hearts," Gerald C. Duffy's screen adaptation of the stage play by Hal Reid.

"Princess Virtue," starring Marie Prevost, is at present being completed in the direction of George Cox.

The Jack Perrin company is at San Pedro where Lieut.-Commander Tom Barrien is assembling the cast and in the preparation of the script and in the actual production of "Bob of the U. S. N."

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Jimmy Parrott, recently starred, will start production this week under the direction of Ray Gray on his sixth comedy, as yet untitled. Ethel Broadhurst will play opposite him.

Charles Parrott is writing scripts for "Snub" Pollard and Jimmy Parrott, production of which will start next week. Harry Pollett is working on "Petticoat," the comedy action of which expires in 1960. William Watson is directing with Charles Parrott in a supervising capacity.

The recently completed Ruth Roland serial "White Eagle," will be released about January 1st. Miss Roland is supported in this by Earl Metcalfe, "Bud" Osborne, Otto Lederer, Frank Lackteen, Harry Girard, Virginia Ainsworth and Gertrude Douglas.

AT METRO

Bayard Veiller is selecting the members of the cast for his next production in which Bert Lytell will be starred. The title of the new Veiller picture has not yet been announced.

Maxwell Karger, who lately completed final scenes on "The Hole in the Wall," starring Alice Lake, is arranging and supervising the construction of sets, both interior and exterior, for the production of "Kisses," in which Miss Lake again will be starred. June Mathis is preparing the script for the picture.

"The Prisoner of Zenda" will be Rex Ingram's next production. Mr. Ingram recently completed the filming of "Turn to the Right."

George D. Baker is expected to begin work presently on "Stay Home," an original story by Edgar Franklin, his first production of the new series, with Smart Hughes in the stellar role.
“THE MIDNIGHT BELL”

Kinema

As a follow-up of “Scrap Iron,” Charlie Ray has directed starting vehicle for First National, his latest release, “The Midnight Bell,” is sadly lacking in several respects. To begin with, depending as it does on failure to produce an inconsistent of melodramatic “hokum” for the heavy element in its plot, Charles Hoyt, the original’s author, eliminates all possibility of advantageously incorporating into his play the character development, the human interest angle, or the simple theme, all of which have done so much to make Ray films “live” more persistently in the public’s mind than, perhaps, those of any other male star. Furthermore, his melodrama is not “sotten away with,” for never once even throughout some mighty well handled suspense does the audience lose sight of the ridiculousness of the story. It finds strenuous comedy where comedy is not meant to lurk and therefore it is not absorbed. (One rarely takes seriously that which has ever been seen in the light of burlesque and while “The Midnight Bell,” as seen by Richard Andre, was scarcely intended as a weighty celluloid drama, neither was it, we think, expected to be absurd. That it is just that largely the responsibility of the five heavies, who stalk: obviously about an exceedingly young village indulging in menacing “mugging” and communicating their dastardly deeds to one another by the deaf and “dumbers” code. Quite naturally it would be a mere nothing for such unusual individuals, for the sake of gaining a secluded rendezvous, to convince an entire town that what appears to be its only church is inhabited by a brigade of “spoos.” This three, and more, most of which is too absurd to comment on, is it is reminiscent of the serial thrillers.

“The Midnight Bell” also seems to have been given a more careless production than is the case with most Ray films including the last, which we mentioned above. For example there are three or four instances in which the effective comedy business is almost entirely lost because of the incompetency of the “bit” players to whom it is intrusted, and inexorable that their work should ever have been passed upon at a time when real performers are obtainable for every type of thing. The photography and cutting are both unnecessarily uneven.

Charlie himself is of course Charlie, whom the rest would accept under a much greater handicap than is Martin Tripp, which personage (a member, by the way, of that large class so picturesquely labeled “bored\(^{3}\) inane”) is an odd mixture of the dauntless stage hero and the duff, much-loved clodhopper. The star’s pantomime is quite of its return, however, a thing which will of itself “pack ‘em in.”

Doris Pena, while not particularly sympathetic in the leading feminine role, Annie Grey, attends to it that perfect satisfaction accompanies her action through to the end. If it were not a crime that Donald Mac Donald superseded, he should be scolded upon Stephen Laberee, the nonsensical heavies’ chief, it would be a week’s laugh in itself to observe his marked dignity dashing about on parading, letting his hair in and out of cellar windows, and crawling through dirty underground passages on his hands and knees. It is very clear that every actor of his type has at one time or another had some such thing wished on him.

Van Dyke Brooks is exceptionally good as Abner Grey, Anne’s gulleless old father, while Clyde McCoy, Jess Herring, S. J. Bingham and Burt Offord get more or less in one another’s way as the remaining spook-villains who find a remarkable amount to occupy their talents in a one business block community.

“QUO VADIS”

Clune’s

F. B. Warren is already at this time a revival of George Kleine’s Italian production of “Quo Vadis,” by Henry Siekiewicz. It’s improvement over the original “Quo Vadis” presented on the screen, lies mostly in its Doty Hobart titling and Warren Newcombe art titles. Otherwise it has suffered or enjoyed little change as we remember it through the eight years which have elapsed since its first showings.

As all those who are familiar with the subject will remember, the story treats of the struggles of the Christians under the bestial Nero, and through it all runs a love story, which, despite its desperate opposition will, we fear, occur to the 1921 audience as exceedingly commonplace. Also the ability of twenty lions to devour five times as many human beings in fifteen minutes without losing so much as a single hair behind, will possibly be questioned in a day when animal thrillers are a bit passe.

A very clever piece of work is offered by the actor, who plays Chilo the beggar, and several of the male characters have agreeable poise, but the women are hopeless and few will admit the suitability of the portrayals of Nero to his role. Otherwise the cast is inconsiderable.

While some of the massive sets gain something of an effect, the painted interiors may be laid impatiently.

The photography is more than unsatisfactory. At that, this revival will more than pay for itself, the more, perhaps, because the inattentive public will not realize in a majority of cases that it is not a first run.

Laura La Plant

On the whole we should have better stuff than this from our real artists and their organizations.

“The CASE OF BECKY”

Grauman’s

We may honestly state that Realart’s production, “The Case of Becky,” is by far the most enjoyable Constance Binney starring picture which we have ever witnessed and it is furthermore considerably above its company’s standard in entertainment value. Based upon the Edward Locke stage play of the same name, the photoplay deals with dual personalities as affected by hypnotism and while there are moments when its theory is not overly convincing, it, nevertheless, rivets the attention from start to finish. The direction by Chester Franklin is very good and the picture would be otherwise irreproachable from a technical standpoint were it not for a very obvious painted drop which contributes a starry moon and many stars to several exteriors.

As Dorothy Stone, a harmless young girl, who, through the hypnotism of her stepfather, becomes all that is evil in his nature expressing it always as the personality Becky, Constance Binney does her most interesting work. Particularly good is her characterization of the restless, contrary Becky who is, in fact, a revelation of what this actress might be capable provided with real opportunities.

Glenn Hunter, a youngster with a wonderfully appealing face, shows advantageously in the juvenile, just a country boy who loves Dorothy stubbornly throughout her vagaries.

Montague Love in an exaggerated heavy is really quite shiveringly delightful. He plays with unusual abandon, Balmazo, a hypnotist, Love is excellent in the rather strained part.

Dr. Emerson is a capably handled sym pathetic touch in the hands of Frank McCormick, while Jane Jeffrey completes the cast which interprets this J. Clarkson Miller scenario.

“BEYOND”

Tally’s

William D. Taylor’s film production of Henry Arthur Jones’ story, “The Lifted Veil,” is now released by Paramount under the title, “Beyond.” It is a fitting out, gratifying, in the retelling of the spirits of those who have departed this plane and includes the rather old situation in which a missing wife believes to be dead returns to find that she has been replaced in her husband’s life by another. Taken by and large, it is an entertaining photodrama despite its lack of anything like unto a new angle. Julia Crawford Ivers’ scenario and Taylor’s direction are largely responsible for this fact. The camera work by James C. Van express is more satisfactory by far than is the print which we saw at Tally’s.

Ethel Clayton, this production’s star, interprets Avis Langley, the wife who is denied her duties and through the exertions of purpose and grace which have so long set her portrayals out. She has unusual sincerity.

In the leading masculine role, Geoffrey Southerne, Charles Meredith is hardly well cast, for it is impossible to imagine in his always apparent youth, the dignity or majesty that he is called to fill. Winifred Kingston as the piquant Viva Newmarch, utilizes to the fullest extent her charming personality, while Earl Schenck presumes this suitability to characters in Alec Lanzley, Avis’ drink victimized brother.

Lillian Rich, Fontaine La Rue, Charles French, Spottiswoode Alken and Herbert Van are all excellent in the remaining roles.
OPPOSITE BEBE DANIELS

Pat O'Malley, leading man in a number of recent Marshall Neilan productions, will support Bebe Daniels in the Nina Wilcox Putnam story which is to start at Realart the latter part of the week.

MYERS CONTINUES WITH METRO

Harry Myers has again signed a Metro contract and will appear in Maxwell Karger's next production entitled "Kisses," a comedy drama in which Alice Lake is starred.

NEW VITAGRAPH PRODUCTION MANAGER

Duane Wagar has been elevated to the position of production manager at Vitagraph's Hollywood studio. Mr. Wagar has been associated with the company for some time past.

SANTSCHI OPPOSITE FREDERICK

Tom Santschi has for a time ceased starring in "westerns" and is acting as leading man for Pauline Frederick in her new picture for Robertson-Cole.

IN NEW FROTHINGHAM CAST

Among those cast in "The Man Who Smiled," the next J. L. Frothingham production for Associated First National, are Marcia Manon, Wm. V. Mong and Mary Wynn.

HASTINGS WITH REALART

Wells Hastings is head of the Realart Title Department, at which studio he is also passing on scripts and writing continuity.

CONNELLY AGAIN WITH INGRAM

Edward Connelly, who has played in several of the Rex Ingram productions for Metro, will be seen again in an important role in Mr. Ingram's forthcoming film, "The Prisoner of Zenda.

IN MAYO'S NEXT

Wilfrid Lucas, director and "heavy," will play one of the principal roles in "Wards of the North," Frank Mayo's new starring production for Universal.

Martha Mattox and Mattie Peters are cast in Realart's current photoplay, starring Bebe Daniels.

Ernest Butterworth, Jr. has been added to the cast of "Jin," the forthcoming all-star, Ince production.

Marjorie Daw has been engaged to play opposite Herbert Rawlinson in his new picture for Universal, entitled "Harry Gordon."

Allan Garcia has been cast in the Anthony Moreno current photoplay temporarily titled "Thou Art the Man."

Virginia True Boardman and Aggie Herrin are playing parts in the current Goldwyn feature entitled "The Octave of Claudia."

Mary Beth, Ernest Belcher, dancer who played an ingenue with Elsie Ferguson in "Footlights," is now playing at the new Music Box Theatre.

KEATON WITH CHESTER COMEDIES

Harry Keaton, former Universal comedian, has been engaged by Chester Comedies to appear under the direction of Wm. Moore.

Mary Alden, who appeared in William D. Taylor's "The Witching Hour," and in Reginald Barker's "The Old Nest," is starring in a new play called "Topes," which recently opened the fifth season of the Hollywood Community Theatre. Winburn Daniel Steele is the author.
The Screen Writers’ Forum

I have often wondered as to what classes of people were best adapted for screen writing, aside from those few who have always been identified with creative writing—who started out as fictionists.

There are, of course, the newspaper reporters; their varied and rich experiences should develop in them dramatic insight and creative imagination, as well as endow them with a wealth of story material. Criminal lawyers: they should make excellent screen writers; they are indeed father of the repartee, repositories of the secret and motives of thousands. Every case in court has something of the drama of love and death involved; what an opportunity the criminal lawyer has for a study of motivation when a client lays the cards on the table! He should know much of greed, and vanity, and hate—and should know of love and sacrifice. When he plays these cards against those of the prosecutor in the court-room, what suspense, what intrigue, what drama! Here indeed is a kingdom of Thomas and motifs and characterizations.

Doctors, priests, preachers: all have their intimate experiences with life. All women have—especially pretty women and more especially beautiful women; for it is indeed a battle of wits, inducing a knowledge of human motivation. They have, as mere flappers, as sweethearts, as wives, as mothers—many colorful experiences beyond their homely sisters. Their lives are dramas or tragedies, and who is better fitted to express these dramas via the screen than themselves?

However, I have come to the conclusion that the motion picture actor or actress is qualified beyond any other class or group of people to write screen stories. Why? to begin with, the actor is right on the ground; he is daily interpreting characters in protype; he is part and parcel of the drama.

Most of all, however, the actor has a keen sense of dramatic values; he knows the sort of stuff that makes the best "acting" material, the sort of characterizations players can make the most of; he knows the situations and crises the players can rise to highest pitch and heights stand for.

The actor has the "inside" or intimate touch. He knows the modus operandi of transferring the written scenario to the screen. Furthermore, he knows studio policies, knows that certain studios are in the market only for certain types of stories—to fit certain stars perhaps, or in accordance with a basic plan of activity.

Through enacting varied roles, the actor or actress learns much of the customs, traditions, and viewpoints of numerous nations and peoples. Traits, characteristics, temperament—all are familiar to the player of some experience. Local color is another possession of the observing actor.

All stage or screen folks live fairly interesting lives; their vicissitudes are sometimes quite out of the ordinary. Most of them have bumped up against and rubbed shoulders with the economic problem—even to the extent of foregoing meals. All of them are rugged and well as portrayed the sufferings of others.

Actors and actresses of scope, who are rich in imagination—their emotional natures are as deep as those of other people—should write excellent, salable scenarios. From the stars to the "extra" folk, all have some spare time; why not employ it?

There is scarcely an actor or actress in Picturedom who is not somehow and some-what discontented with the roles he or she is called upon to enact. Almost every one has some "ideal" story tucked up his sleeve—some story with wonderful acting possibilities, some life dream that needs expression.

Frankly, all ideas of morality and immorality are arbitrary, and there is no "good" or sound ground for discussion. Any such ideal as tolerance springs from a recognition of the immoral, the beyond moral plane of existence and thought. What the movies need is an infiltration of Paganism, in the interests of vigor, imagination, and humor. All of the above is the view of the Pagans (the people) associated with the motion pictures, a body of writers and thinkers with either pandering to sex instincts or to removing sex; they are concerned with faithfulness in the portrayal of episodes and characterizations in the exact tracing and placing of reactions, motives, impulses.

There can be no tolerance where there is a moralization of the God-idea, where a man's highest glory is conceived to lie in his ability to convert other men to his modus of thinking. For instance, although the thirty-six pagans of the United States are registered as church members, the chronic church-goer considers the man without as highly misguided—in absolute defiance of the intrinsic, immorality, and censorship is an outcropping of this spirit.

I do not mean to infer that the motion pictures should be Paganized, although I believe the Pagan influence artistic and aesthetic influence; too many people attend the motion picture theatres whose tastes are on a different plane. But I believe the use of sex should be taken with a grain of salt—for the sake of tolerance.

Within the ranks of the motion pictures, a few non-conformists should arise and transfer the issue to another battleground, or make a new issue, along the following lines:

Most picture people do not advocate the closing of churches or censoring of sermons; many of them attend churches, and most of them who do not would not rob those who do of any solace or pleasure thus derived. In fact, the motion picture people leave the churches and church-members to work out their own convictions, and ask in return the same courtesy.

I would never vote to abolish churches or censors: what is essential is to make the very denominational to others. I simply do not feel the need of church; others do—and are entitled, in all tolerance, to the fulfillment of this need. Nothing in itself is either moral or immoral, silly or ridiculous. Religious dogmas and practices which strike me as being poppy-cock are excelling and soliciting to others. Is it not the same with motion picture plays? What one thinks excellent, another considers trashy? Who's right?

I thought "The Miracle Man" the greatest photoplay I've ever seen; I still think so, but a local editor suggested it was the most maudlin, nonsensical thing he'd ever seen. Again, Quien sabe?

Frank Thorwald and William Marion are included in the "big six." Frank Mayo, "The North," Frank Mayo's current picture for Universal.

Katherine McGuire, Lydia Knott, and Hubert Gregg are cast in "Southward Ho!" with Gladys Walton, under the direction of Dallas Fitzgerald.

Grace Morse, formerly a member of the Morgan Stock company has been selected by Director Harry Beaumont, for an important role in his newest Metro production, "See- ing's Believing," in which Viola Dana acts the stellar role.

Vesey O’Davoran

The players themselves are conversant with types, and with other players who can play them; they can suggest other actors and actresses whom they believe ideally suited to the characterizations.

Few actors and actresses are not yarn spinners. Some of the most successful Broadway plays of the past two seasons have been written by stage players. I’ve been on too many studio "lots" and "sets" not to know it; and that some players are natural storytellers—and vivid storytellers.

A NEED

The world is ever seeking new equations; whether things progress, retrogress, or stand still is a much mooted question—but new balances, new equations are ever the order of things.

I have recently had a hunch that perhaps what is wrong with the Movies is the presence within its ranks of people who, while apparently opposed to censorship and things very un-Pagan; yet stand for, are actually of the same essence. Therefore, when showdowns come, they will be—”divines.” And why is this? Probably because they are in accord—“way down deep” with what these reformers stand for in most things—therefore what little force they bring to bear on the points of difference is largely neutralized by their horizons as "unimmoral." Furthermore, he has authority on his side. He has a Bible and to quote from it, which he will interpret as suits his purpose.

LINCOLN HIGHWAY SECTION PHOTOGRAPHED

The development of the Ideal Section of Lincoln Highway is to be filmed and photographed so that there may be a record in pictures of the construction of this section of roadway which will be built to plans laid down by foremost American highway authorities.

J. N. Gunn, President of the Lincoln Highway Association and Vice-president of the United States Rubber Company, which organization, through its financial contribution to the Highway Association, is making possible the construction of the Ideal Section, has stated that the primary interest of both his company and the Association in the construction of the Section is to stimulate a wider public interest in more adequate highway specifications.

TO MAKE PERSONAL APPEARANCE TOUR

Ruth Stonehouse is leaving Los Angeles presently for Chicago where she will open at the McVickers Theatre for one week's personal appearance.

After completing this engagement, Miss Stonehouse will appear in several of the suburban theatres for an indefinite period, following which she will make a short tour of the key cities throughout the middle west.

"BULL" A U. S. CITIZEN

"Bull" Montana, who has appeared in many pugilistic characterizations on the screen, was admitted to full citizenship by the naturalization court in Los Angeles recently. His name was changed from Luigi Montagna to Louis Montana.

TALMADGE SISTERS TO PRODUCE HERE

Norma and Constance Talmadge, who for the past few years have been making pictures in the east, will join the "film colony" in Hollywood for future picture-making.

STAR HAS NEW HOME

Marry Aye recently purchased a Hollywood bungalow. Miss Aye is at present busy with "Bob" Reeves on "The Yellow Streak," for Cactus Productions, under the direction of Albert Rogell.

Cecil Holland has completed his engagement with the Jackie Coogan company and has gone to San Francisco for a short vacation.

Eddie Nolen, formerly General Manager for the Campbell Comedies, is at present in Phoenix, Ariz., where he is recovering from a severe illness.

William S. Hart's "Three Word Brand," will be the attraction at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre next week, while Cecil B. de Mille's "The Affairs of Anatol" opens its fourth week at the Rialto, Sunday.

Ben Wilson has just returned from Palm Springs, Calif., where he spent a week without the shooting of exteriors for one of the concluding chapters of "Fanette of the North," the fifteen-episode serial which he is producing at his Hollywood studio and which stars Miss Ann Little.

AT THE INCE STUDIO

Filming of the first scenes of "Jim," has started with John Bowers playing the title role and John Griffith Wray handling the megaphone. The screen version of "The Hottentot," with Douglas MacLean in the star role will enter production immediately, rehearsals having already commenced. Del Andrews will direct the MacLean feature. "Lucky Damage," the temporarily titled forthcoming picture featuring Florence Vidor and Milton Sills, is being edited by LeRoy Stone in preparation for early spring release.

AT BRUNTON

Production has started on the forthcoming J. L. Frothingham production for Associated First National Pictures which has been temporarily titled, "The Man Who Smiled." Edward Sloman is directing and "Tony" Gaudio "shooting." R. A. Walsh has been busy during the past week making some added scenes for his latest production, "Kindred of the Dust." Camera work will be completed this week on Jackie Coogan's new starring picture, "My Boy."

AT VITAGRAPH

Director Robert Ensinger is filming the ninth episode of the Vitagraph chapter-play, "Breaking Through," co-starring Carmel Myers and Wallace MacDonald. Earle Williams will make seven pictures during the coming year, one or which will be an original story written by Mrs. Williams, wife of the star. Larry Semon is cutting and titling "The Saw Mill," his latest comedy.

SENNETT STUDIO NOTES

Mabel Normand is on her way from New York and will begin a new comedy-drama next week. A Del Ruth two-reel comedy is under production, featuring Billie Bevan and Mildred June.

Ben Turpin is making farewell appearances in his tour of the country, and will start work with Phyllis Haver in a comedy spectacle around the first of November.

HAMILTON-WHITE COMEDIES

Lloyd Hamilton started work this week on the sixth of his new series of comedies for Educational. The initial scenes are being taken at the studio with Hugh Fawley handling the megaphone and Park Reis behind the camera. A preview of the production, "Free and Easy," was given at the California, Venice, recently. Bob Kerr directed under the supervision of Jack White.

PACIFIC STUDIOS BUSY

The Pacific Studios at San Mateo, California, under the management of Isadore Bernstein, are at the present time accommodating five producing units including Graf Productions, Inc., starring Hobar Bosworth. The Wanda Hawley company recently left for Del Monte, where exteriors will be taken for its forthcoming playset for Reallart. The star is making personal appearances en route at theatres in Santa Maria, San Luis Obispo and Paso Robles.

Charles R. Seeling has taken his company to Victoriaville, where he is "shooting" exteriors for his current production "In Arizona," a western story, by Karl R. Coolidge.

Blanche Light

Jack Holt will start work presently upon a picture based on "The Parson of Panmuni," a story by Peter B. Kyne, adapted to the screen by A. S. LeVino. In the meantime Mr. Holt's first production, "Call of the North," is being cut and assembled.

Agnes Ayres is progressing with her first starring picture, "The Lane That Had No Turning," under the direction of Victor Fleming. "Is Matrimony a Failure," will be started presently under the direction of James Craze. Roy Burton and Walter Heirs will appear in this picture.

Terminates Contract with Clune

Nell Shipman and Bert Van Tuyle, the producers of the current screen success, "The Girl from God's Country," announce that they have terminated their contract with the corporation known as "Nell Shipman Productions, Inc." of which firm W. H. Clune is president. By the terms of the agreement the corporation name reverts to Miss Shipman and, with Mr. Van Tuyle, her co-director and manager, the star is now preparing for further independent "Nell Shipman" productions.

Miss Shipman's next story is ready in continuity form and will be under production presently. The shipman Zoo at Montana, Cal., has lately received some additional animal-actors which will be used in the future Shipman-Van Tuyle productions. Miss Shipman and Mr. Van Tuyle are planning a series of short subjects showing the lives and habits of the North American wild animals.

The read an Page 6630 advanced giving to the entertainment contained in this picture is such as to appeal most forcibly to the prurient minded. It has not the subtle suggestiveness of the Schnitzler play (for be it understood, subtly he has no part in the mental equipment of Miss McPherson) but runs rather to frank indecency. This director can be relied upon to emphasize to the full, all the points given him by the continually changing camera.

The Hypnotic scene, inoffensive enough in itself, is made sure fire by the lavish display of the Swanson legs, even to a tantalizing glimpse of an intimate garment beneath the skirt.

To those, who “read between the lines,” this display, seemingly so spontaneous, at once stands forth as a deliberate and studied appeal to the grosser senses.

One cannot help being amused at the fatuous attempt to add Box Office value to an offering of such an exotic nature, by giving it an American setting.

At the present moment, as ever, we have the Bogie of Censorship with us. We have just undergone an inspection by the National Board, and are now confronted with the threat of local censorship. Therefore, it behooves the producers so to order their product as to refute all the arguments advanced by the proponents of Censorship.

To pursue an unsavory subject still further—

In the course of my usual work, I was called upon to read “The Sheik,” by E. M. Hull, with a view as to its availability for production.

Needless to say, it was rejected as being outside the pale of common decency.

Yet the same company, which is responsible for the “Anatol” picture, has made a film of this book, which outside of its gross suggestiveness, has nothing to recommend it.

The management has issued a naive statement to the effect that “The franker scenes are handled with such delicacy that they contain no offense.” Can you beat this?

Do the producers think that the people take only their eyes to the theatre and leave their minds at home? Is contamination possible through the eyes alone?

How is it possible to treat with delicacy scenes which convey such an underlying idea?

Here we have a woman subjected to the ultimate of degradation which she can suffer at the hands of a man, a degradation, which by its repetition finally awakens in her an answering lust, which the misguided authoress dignifies by the name of love. There is an inartistic attempt to palliate the actions of this unspeakable brute, and draw some measure of sympathy to him, by attributing them to the former ill-treatment of his mother by an Englishman, which impels him to revenge her on all the members of the race. Being a man, he naturally chooses women for the objects of that revenge, Selah.

With the diabolical skill, with which the guiding spirit of this company regulates all details which may affect the box office, the actor, who is distinguished for his sex appeal, rather than for his histrionic ability, has been chosen to impersonate the leading role.

We have recently been treated to an able defense of the Moving Picture Business, from the pen of William de Mille, the actual genius of the family, but a picture like the Sheik promises to be, following on the heels of “The Affairs of Anatol,” will do a great deal to nullify it.

Yours for decent pictures,

—F. E. P.

The Story Idea that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loen questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

Palmer Photoplay Corporation, Department of Education. 570-91, W. Hallman Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

Please send me, without cost or obligation on my part, your questionnaire. I will answer the questions in it and return it to you for analysis. If I pass the test I am to receive further information about your Course and Service to authors.

BROWN CALDWELL & LADD
PHOTO ENGRAVERS
247 S0. BROADWAY, LOS ANGELES
MR. EXHIBITOR—
Don't Be a Chinese Woman!

(An open letter from the producers of "The Girl From God's Country" to the Exhibitors.)

In China the women cramp their feet until they become useless stumps. They think this beautiful! In this country the film men cut and distort their productions out of all semblance to their original breadth and purpose. They think this Good Business!

Both are serving false gods. You cannot measure Beauty by inches nor Art by footage.

A War Profiteer once bought a Masterpiece. When he came to hang it he found the painting too long for the allotted space upon his wall. So he cut two feet from each end! It meant nothing to this vandal that the artist's creation, child of his genius, was thus mutilated.

The same thing happens daily in the M. P. business. So-called "Film Editors" sit in projection rooms and dictate the cutting and changing of scenes and titles. The underlying motives of the scenes they discard, and their relationship to the plot means nothing to these scissor fiends. They think in terms of "feet"—not Art. The ribbon counters teem with just such yard-stick manipulators.

And the result? The finely woven pattern of the writer's imagining and the director's weaving is ruthlessly slashed and left, raw-edged; the thread of continuity hopelessly broken.

How often do the lip-readers in your theater note that the characters in the picture are not speaking the title given on the screen? "You will always be true?" the actor asks, with his lips and eyes. "How about a cold bottle and a warm bird?" is the caption flung in his teeth by Mr. Editor.

Producers, like painters, visualize their subject in its entirety. They don't put in scenes just to make footage any more than an artist muddies up his composition with extra trees. Both are striving for a perfect whole, and no outsider can add, or take away, one iota from their finished creation.

Not long ago the undersigned completed a picture in ten reels. To satisfy the "market" we cut it to eight. The lost two reels sacrificed much of the character development but left a snappy, fast-moving Melo-drama. The picture was shown to the critics in this eight-reel form, and everyone was satisfied. Recently this same picture was re-cut and "edited," without the knowledge or consent of its producers, to seven reels. The result is a stupid, meaningless affair that is a disgrace to its author, director, star, exchange and exhibitor. The excuse is that the Exhibitors want the picture in seven reels.

Don't Be Chinese Women!

Don't cripple that picture! Give it its extra 14 minutes! Let your patrons see the picture we created, not the earless, tailess, footless, lopsided freak the exchanges are handing out! Book "The Girl From God's Country" in its original eight-reel form . . . . . . and give it a chance!

Will We Stand a Schedule?

Never in the history of the motion picture industry, has there existed any sort of an inter-studio basis for the conduct of business relating to the free lance actor, such as a schedule for overtime, the payment of salaries, etc., to say nothing of the hundred and one things pertaining to the management of the always-present, ever-necessary extra man. Perhaps the lack of generally observed regulations to cover these problems has as yet only been felt to any extent by those performers whom it has discommoded and who, let it be said have never, in themselves been noticed to cut a particularly large figure in the consideration of those who arrange the destinies of our studios.

But in view of the present state of increased activity in the plants which produce the bulk of popular American entertainment it will be profitable for the management of these plants to establish a basis of treatment to save destructive dissatisfaction among their employees.

We are not suggesting any points which such a schedule should contain, but we are fully cognizant of its need as is the average picture man and woman who are certainly not unfair in demanding to know upon what they may depend. On the other hand, neither should controversies which bring about unnecessary trips to the Labor Commission resulting sometimes in unpleasant "calls" for the studios over things which arise through a state of disorganization, be risked by the producer. Several of the causes of these misunderstandings we mention below.

At some of our studios actors who work on weekly salaries are paid for a full week when their engagements have carried them only one or two days over into it; while other companies pro rate them for the extra time. Either scale might be acceptable but the existence of two occasions complication. Moreover, much difficulty has arisen over the fact that while most of the studios count six days as comprising the working week, there are those who insist upon including the seventh.

Then with regard to "bit" people, some casting departments hold that it is wise to "carry" them until their footage has been entirely shot. On the other hand they are often let out between work on the chance that they will be available when again needed.

The by-the-day man who works overtime is indeed in an uncertain situation. He may be in the habit of receiving a full check for additional hours of his labor only to find that the company now engaging him will stand but a half check over, or, worse yet, none at all, and if he has had no previous understanding with his employers (and what extra man bothers about such?) he may not resort to the law for aid.

The fact that a "day" man reports in answer to a call is the equivalent to a check at some cashier windows whether he is dismissed without working or not, but at others, money is only forthcoming if he has "made up." Again half checks are all that may be obtained, while very often the man who doesn't work, no matter how many hours have been lost for him is simply "unlucky." (The Labor Commissioner informs us that the exact amount of time wasted must be recompensed according to a state legislation.)

There is a very popular studio which pays its extra people off at the close of each day's work, but most of them have a certain day of the week upon which such interesting business is accomplished. No two have chosen the same one, however, so that if an individual works three days a week he is liable to have to put in another three collecting the money already earned, although California has a statute designating that all such money shall be paid seventy-two hours from the time that the day worker finishes his engagement.

Perhaps unfortunately, however, all legal regulations on these subjects are vague enough to be little considered. Nevertheless, we are inclined to think that this being Moving Picture business, it is a case for the agreement of studio heads who should remember that a little suitably applied intelligence often wins over both unjust domination on one hand and unreasonable aggressiveness on the other. Particularly is this situation one which fair minded headwork and co-operation alone can improve.

At It Again

At least one unauthorized individual is circulating among the studios collecting money for subscriptions to Camera which he has seen fit to appropriate. Moreover, he has raised our local rate of $2.00 a year to $3.50, presumably for his personal benefit.

Camera readers are warned to be certain that they are placing their subscription money in the hands of responsible agents. These are: Grace Adair, Helen McKee, Mrs. Edward Reinach and staff members.
NAZIMOVA TO PRODUCE AT BRUNTON

Alla Nazimova is to make her future productions at the Robert Brunton Studios. Work on "Bell's House," Mme. Nazimova's first production for her own company, is expected to begin on or about November 1st. This production will be followed by "Salome."

AT FOX

Tom Mix and Eva Novak, leading lady, have returned from the Grand Canyon, where the western star completed a new thriller, captioned "The Go-Getter," with Lynn F. Reynolds directing. Next week, Mr. Mix will start a new five-reeler, "Around the World in Forty Days," with Ed Sedgwick handling the megaphone.

Robert M. Yost, until recently chief of publicity, has been transferred to the management of the local exchange on Olive street.

Jack Hill, who handled the publicity on "The Queen of Sheba" and other specials, has returned to the "lot" as director of the press department.

AT METRO

Irvin S. Cobb's "The Five Dollar Baby," is about to go under production with Viola Dana in the stellar role and Harry Beaumont directing. Edith Kennedy of the story producing department prepared the script for the screen version of the Cobb story.

Filming of Bert Lytell's newest feature, a screen version of "Tommy Carteret," has been started by Bayard Veiller. Lenore Coffee has written the screen version of Justus Miles Forman's story.

Practically all the exteriors for "Stay Home," the new S-L picture for Metro, in which Gareth Hughes will star, will be filmed in Mexico City.

COMMONWEALTH PRODUCTIONS

Director Fred Caldwell, who lately completed "The Mystery of Ferndale," a seven-reel drama, is forming a company to be known as the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers for the purpose of producing twelve five-reel western dramas, and has taken over the Bachman Studio in Glendale.

Mr. Caldwell's associates in the new company are Roxey Maes, J. L. McComas, Scotty King, and Bruce Caldwell.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES

"Torchy's Frame-Up" is the latest Torchy comedy ready for release. Johnny Hines, as Torchy, again has Dorothy Leeds as his leading woman.

"Stolen Glory," with children and animals as the principal actors, is the latest of the new Campbell pictures and will follow "The Stork's Mistake" and "A Nick-of-Time Hero."

"Seeing Greenwich Village" is the next reel of Sketchographs by Julian Oellendorf to be released. It depicts scenes in New York's Bohemia.

While preparing for his next picture to succeed "Slippy McGee," Oliver Morosco has two new stage productions running in New York. They are "Wait Till We're Married," and "Love Dreams."

After two weeks on location in Northern California, Constance Binney has returned to the studio for interior scenes. Maurice Campbell is directing.

May McAvoy, Director William D. Taylor and company are filming night scenes for Miss McAvoy's current picture.

Bebe Daniels has started production of her new photoplay under the direction of Chester M. Franklin. The story was written by Nina Wilcox Putnam and will be a February release.

The latest Mary Miles Minter picture has gone into production under the direction of Frank Leon.

Wanda Hawley is at Del Monte making location scenes for her present starring vehicle as yet untitled. William Boyd is leading.

AT UNIVERSAL

Hoot Gibson is at Cascada, where scenes are being filmed for "The Badge of Fighting Hearts," his forthcoming photodrama which Reaves Eason is directing.

Edward Laemmle is finishing "Winners of the West," the historical serial starring Art Acord. The concluding episodes are being filmed for "The Secret Four," Eddie Polo's forthcoming serial, which is playing opposite the star.

Marie Prevost recently completed "Princess Virtue," her third starring vehicle. George Cox directed with Tom Gallery, George Fisher, George Periolat and Bertram Gassby in the principal masculine roles.

AT BRUNTON

Camera work will be completed this week on Chester Bennett's production, "Delivery," a story of Alaska and the Northwoods, in which Jane Novak has been given her first star role.

George Beban, who is reviving his success of a few years ago, "The Sign of the Rose," has been busy filming night scenes for the past week.

HAMILTON-WHITE COMEDIES

Production will commence shortly on a new Jack White all-star comedy with Bob Kerr directing and Park Ries in charge of photoplay.

"The Three Mugs of Beer" has been chosen as the working title of Lloyd Hamilton's current two-reel comedy which is a satire on "The Three Musketeers." Irene Dalton is playing the leading feminine role. Hugh Fay is directing and Al McClain is behind the camera.

BEN WILSON PRODUCTIONS

The Jack Hoxie company making "Sparks of Flim," is locationing at Big Bear Lake where a large portion of the exteriors are being filmed.

After an absence of some four weeks, Ann Little, featured in the fifteen episode serial, " NANette of the North," has returned to the studio and the interior shots are being made for the current chapter of the picture. Leonard Chalmers plays the leading male role opposite Miss Little.

Director Fred Caldwell, assisted by Roxey Maes, is busy editing a seven-reel drama titled, "The Mystery of Ferndale," of which Mr. Caldwell is the author.
"DOUBLING FOR ROMEO"

Miller's

Will Rogers' latest comedy, "Doubling for Romeo," by "Elmer Rice, Will Rogers and Will Shakespeare," contains valuable variations in its satire, which have not often been found in Goldwyn productions starring the famous humorist. This burlesque opens in a small western town, jumps to the California picture studios, then to the Verona of Shakespeare's vivid imagination of the end, of course, at the village parson's; but never does it let up the slyly "kidding" with which Rogers opens his first subtitle. Three-fourths of the titles, by the way, are sure to be received uproariously due to their frank humor and clever sarcasm.

Clarence Badger's production makes the most of the points provided in Bernard McConville's scenario while pleasing photography, in some cases of more elaborate sets than have yet decorated this star's pictures, is the contribution of Marcel Le Pic. Rogers himself has never meant more to the picture profession than he does as Slim, alias Romeo Montague in this photoplay; for not only is he himself, well loved as a type actor are, as the former, but he is here permitted his first screen opportunity to display ability in the graceful kind of part that is Romeo. This he does delightfully in snatches between the ridiculous moments to which he submits the age adored lover and the result is highly entertaining.

An excellent type for Lulu, the romantic country maiden who possesses a Juliet soul, is Sylvia Breamer, who works very well indeed with the star, besides continually forming a charming picture.

William Orlamond as the "take off" on the modern film direction is laugh in himself, (his talent for burlesque is an individual art) while Jimmie Rogers as the sophisticated child celebrity, Jimmie Jones, is also enjoyable.

Perfect types are Raymond Hatton, Sydney Ainsworth, Al Hart, John Cossar, C. E. Thurston and Roland Rusthon for their respective roles. Picturesque scenery, excellently photographed by Joseph August, effective subtitles and good piece of Lambert Hillyer direction, in addition to a dozen thrills and real suspense, lend this picture much entertainment value faultlessly presented.

The big cowboy star enacts three roles, namely, the heathen who %% of the lives of his twin boys, and each of those sons grown or "Three Word Brand" and Governor Marden. All three are superiorly handled by sympathetic characters, among the most romantic interest centers in the title role, another thrilling Bill Hart hero. Jane Novak is suitably placed in the leading feminine position, Ethel Barton. She is always more than adequate in the quaint ladies of our frontier days. Gordon Russell offers convincing opposition as Bull Yeates, while Colette Forbes, S. J. Bingham, Ivor McFadden, Herchel Mayall, George Pearce and Leo Willis all dispense interestingly the remaining roles.

The admirers of William S. will be perfectly satisfied with "Three Word Brand."

MARTHA MCKAY

A charming young film actress whom the lore of the west has caused to desert the eastern studios.

"THE SON OF WALLINGFORD"

Kinema

Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester have made an admirable photoplay of their one hundred and fifth Wallingford story, entitled "The Son of Wallingford"; and Vita-graph has given it an unusually careful production. We have always held to the idea that in cases where it is at all possible, the author should be on the ground to supervise the screening of his play; in this instance the Chesters, entrusted with the entire direction of their story, have interpreted into the adaptation the spirit of the Wallingford yarns as no disinterested party could have done, were they ever so competent a director. Here is a popular story celluloided that can lose none of its attraction for those who already love it. Such accomplishments are infrquent if we are to judge by the complaints which pour in from fans who hold that their favorite fiction has been murdered by the ruthless scenarist. This one is, therefore, to be given extra credit.

J. Rufus Wallingford and "Blackie" Daw, the much followed "within-the-law" crooks, who formed the central figures in the well remembered Cosmopolitan "Get-Rich-Quick" stories are incomparably interpreted in this photoplay by Wilfrid North and George Webb, who re-create the very atmosphere of the two, always so fascinating, with their roles. Particularly perfect is Webb's "Blackie," the most vivid portrayal in the production.

The title role, Jimmy Wallingford is filled, but not so well by Tom Gallery, a juvenile who doesn't seem to have found himself. He lacks the spontaneity and animation which should be Jimmy's chief characteristic, but his lack of enthusiasm is wholly made up for by Alfred Shaheen's refreshing, correctly handled work, "Tond" Jessup. Antrim takes scene after scene from Gallery with his personality and clever mannering.

Priscilla Bonner is happily established in Mary Curtiss, the extremely ingenuous leading lady in which she will please generally.

Lilie Leslie and Florence Hart are very well placed as Mrs. Blackie Daw and Mrs. Wallingford. Their characters have been set out as only the authors would have thought necessary and thereby a valuable atmospheric note is achieved which might otherwise not have been realized.

Sydney D'Albrook is very much at home in the comedy heavy, Bertram Beegode, son of a village-Skifflint who is equally as well played by Van Dyke Brooks.

Martha Mattox and Andrew Arbuckle make a delightful set of parents for little Mary, while Margaret Cullington has several amusing scenes as Caroline Beegode.

Bobby Mack and Walter Rodgers complete the cast save for Kathryn Sumner, Helen Fitz, Janet Dawn, Alberta Vautch, Duskaal Stivers and Patricia McGee, who form the Shimmie Girls Revue, a stranded road show.

W. S. Smith, Jr., has turned out some good camera work on "The Son of Wallingford," which has been given an all around good technical production.

"THE AGE OF HEARTS"

An exaggerated melodrama which is rendered convincing largely through several beautiful performances and the understanding direction of Wallace Worsley is Governor Morris' "The Age of Hearts," a first rate Goldwyn release. The story which deals with a group of men and one woman whose creed holds that the world can only be regenerated through the destruction of those individuals in it who represent evil, and the conversion through love of three members of that group to the idea that it is by personal sacrifice and good, has undoubted fascination. Moreover, Ruth Wightman has so placed and treated the scenario's suspense that it is highly enjoyable electronically. However, the drama, but even such attractions did not save it from a half dozen unfortunate bursts of laughter at what apparently was intended for his many intense moments during our review. The "hokum" melodrama which was once "eaten alive, is, it seems, being considered as a thing to rivalize by the average American fan of today. Producers should awake to the fact that after many years of tragedy the world wants to laugh badly enough to indulge itself on even so flimsy a pretext, and order their product accordingly.

Leatrice Joy has rarely been more strikingly placed than she is as Lilith, the staunchest supporter of a fundamentally warped cause until love shows her the light. In Lilith, Miss Joy combines an honest dignity with a certain interestingly with an engaging quality. She will go far in the human type of thing.

John Bowers enacts Forrest, the man whose marriage to Lilith also teaches him the better way, with the sincere ease which appeared in his first Goldwyn roles and has since continued them out of his brain.

The big sacrifice part in this picture is in the hands of Lon Chaney, who has perhaps accomplished more complicated work, but certainly none more vivid than this form. (Continued on Page Five)

The Screen Writers' Forum

POOR DUCK!

A young screen writer has written me, complaining that his very first brain child, a youngster upon whom he had lavished years of parental affection, is today unrecognizable as his own loving mental offspring—after being put through a finishing school in Hollywood presided over by a certain cinema director. As a full-fledged photoplay, the story reflects the alien influence of professors of composition, editing, sub-titling, close-upping, and interpolation.

Now, the screen writer in question is a poor logician, to say the least. No story will ever appear on the screen just as the writer visualized it. It’s impossible, unthinkable. If young writers were asked to read a chapter from a book and to translate onto canvas a character or descriptive passage therefrom, we should have a thousand different pictures—none of which would be the picture the author of the book had visualized. A motion picture production in toto is a sequence of paintings.

A director will interpret a story to the author’s perfect satisfaction when everyone is agreed on the interpretation of a Biblical passage, whereas the Los Angeles Times and the Appeal to Reason concur in their criticisms of a political speech, and porpoises walk down Broadway in wing with bumblebees.

THE PHOTOPoEM

In magazines it is quite customary to print poems as “fillers,” which serve a number of purposes. The aesthetic tone of the magazine is elevated, its physical construction improved, and the ever-welcome element of variety introduced. Why not “photopoe” on cinema theatre programs? The earlier Paramount-Post Scenics were subtitled with quotations from the major poets, but that struck me as a cart-before-the-horse process. Why not take some of our peculiarly adaptable narrative poems and film story-scenes from them, using lines and passages in the poems as fillers? The sweet homeliness of Whitcomb Riley’s “Old Sweetheart of Mine,” the weirdness of William Lindsay’s “The House,” the passion of Byron’s “Love on the Island” from “Don Juan,” or the exalted beauty of Keats’ “Eve of St. Agnes”—what photopoems they would be! Even the typical nature scenes could be improved through being based on such abstract poems as Shelley’s “Clouds” or Keats’ “To Autumn.” What a flaming picture Edwin Arnold’s “Grimsby, the Season of Heat” would present, with its drama of night and day and elemental forces.

Contemporary minor poets could keep the wolf at a distance, if a market were created for their verses in Filmdom. Probably, in the last analysis, their poems would come closer to matching the average person’s comprehensive powers than would the lofty and often involved, obscure verse of the masters.

A step in the direction of the photopoem are the scenes of the Post Pictures Corporation of Baresfoot Boy,” “Bit Old Fashioned” and “In the Great North.” It will pay any photodramatist interested in the possible development of the photopoem to study these scenes. We may be facing a new horizon, and who knows but that we shall gradually distinguish—drifting toward us across the ocean of eternal barqueful of photopoets.

VANITY, O EPHEMERA!

One hears so much, from the lips of young screen writers, about stories being rejected by studios and agents that in truth are better than many of the stories produced and exhibited. What poppycock! It is practically impossible for any human to fairly judge any work of art he may evolve; it is far easier to see the note in the other chap’s orbit than the beam in thine own lamp. It like to experience—phases idealized and magnified, rather than real. In fact—again within the creed of material gain—it is wise to plumb life too deeply; strange, disturbing depths are apt to be sounded, complacency disturbed, illusions unveiled. The successful screenwriter from the commercial viewpoint—will be the one whose mental and spiritual development parallels the popular novelist’s; one whose achievements will be the result of the leading magazine writers and popular fictionists of the day, rather than in the realms of Flaubert, Balzac, Andreyev, Gorki, Dreiser, Conrad, Anatol France, et al. The realism of the photodrama will come upon the scene when we have evolved the Little Theatre of the Screen.

PASSES CENSORS

Doris May’s first starring vehicle for R-C Pictures, “The Foolish Age,” was passed by the board of censors of Chicago recently. “The Foolish Age” is scheduled for release October 15th and will have a preview screening at the Park Theatre, Boston, Mass.

TERMINATES VACATION

Elmer Harris, supervising director for R-C, has arrived from the month’s vacation where he spent at his silver fox farm on Prince Edward’s Island, Canada.

IN HOLT CAST

Herbert Standing, Wade Boteler and Will R. Walling have been chosen to interpret important roles in Jack Holt’s second starring vehicle for Lasky, entitled “The Parson of Parnamit.”

JOINS R-C

Miss Donna Risher, newspaper woman, has been added to the publicity staff of R-C Pictures. Miss Risher was formerly feature writer and later assistant city editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune and will specialize on newspaper feature and syndicate material for R-C Pictures.

Marcha Manon, who has played important roles in “Stella Maris,” “The Forbidden Thing,” and other important film productions, has been cast in the leading role in J. L. Frothingham’s new production, “The Man Who Smiled,” now being produced at the Robert Brunton Studios.

Bernice Radom has been cast to play in “Petrol.”

E. A. Eschmann, latterly assistant director of exchanges of Pathe, has been appointed general sales manager.

Mabel Van Buren and Betty Francisco have been cast in important roles in “The Parson of Parnamit,” starring Jack Holt.

Sidney D’Albrook is enacting a heavy role in “Little Aliens,” Shirley Mason’s latest picture for Fox.

Zasu Pitts is playing in support of Ethel Clayton in “For the Defense,” under the direction of Paul Powell.
